To the Office of Civil Rights:

Please reverse the changes to the Title IX rules on campus sexual assault implemented by the previous Dept. of Education administration. The rules made it more difficult for survivors of sexual assault to report sexual assault and harassment, and to have their concerns addressed.

In particular, the rules limited the definition of what could be considered under sexual harassment, required the assault to take place on campus or in conjunction with an education program or activity, and required in-person cross examination of survivors in a formal investigation. All of these will limit the number of survivors who can report or will be willing to go through an investigation.

Thank you. Bonnie Braeutigam
