From: mark7glasser@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "mark glasser"
<mark7glasser@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 23:58:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. mark glasser

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Vinny Campbell

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Mark Koritz

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Susan Christiansen

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. E.S. Schloss

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Kyle H
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Lynn Camhi

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Erik Schnabel
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Eilean Worcester

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Jenny Ashburn
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sherrill Futrell
(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. John Nelson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Tanner

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr Dean Heaton II

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

They preach abstinence and Chasity to our straight adolescent and teenage youth, but the toxic homophobia they promote, may put these nonsexual active youth in the situation of homophobic suspicion cast on them. Especially so if not dating, so may experience not only verbal homophobic harassments but even in cases being "technically" or even authentically GAY BASHED! CHRISTIANS THUS CURSE OUR YOUNG PEOPLE AND ALLOW THEM NEITHER IN OR OUT!

Sincerely,
Mr. Dennis Vieira
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Marion Bull
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Andrei Smarandoiu
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Justice Hardman
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Gary Shephard
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Capt Ianto Anglesey

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Miss Lauren Hicks

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Chris Washington

(b)(6)
From: gina@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "gina sanchirico"
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 22:15:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
gina sanchirico

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Roslyn Jones
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Greg Kanter

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Gail McMullen
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

PAUL COLFER
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cheryl Zellmer
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs Very Guerrero

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Thomas Nelson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr Javier Rivera-Diaz
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. David Haskins
From: capt_adi@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Adrienne DIPRIMA" <capt_adi@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 21:38:17 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mx. Adrienne DIPRIMA

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Adrienne DIPRIMA
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “based on sex” to include “based on sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “based on sex” to include “based on sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Matthew Boguske

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “based on sex” to include “based on sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “based on sex” to include “based on sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Matthew Boguske
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr Rick Pearson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Michele Wise
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Karen Spradlin
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Alexandra Napoleon
From: rtkm@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "KATHY CARROLL"
<rtkm@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 21:01:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. KATHY CARROLL

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Victoria Koch

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Robin Jindrich Cecil
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Shirley Wooden

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Batsheva Kasdan
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Christina Jameson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Maria Da Silva
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As a high school teacher and parent, I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

According to GLSEN’s 2019 National School Climate Survey, 59.1% of LGBTQ students felt unsafe at school because of their sexual orientation, 42.5% because of their gender expression, and 37.4% because of their gender. 10.2% reported that they were prevented or discouraged from participating in school sports because they were LGBTQ; and most were avoiding school functions (77.6%) and extracurricular activities (71.8%) because they felt unsafe or uncomfortable. We can and SHOULD do better.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Wendy Witt
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Valerie Sorenson

(b)(6)
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Douglas Sedon
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Johnson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I demand you revise the Title IX regulations. You need to expand “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Clarifying and expanding the meaning of “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” coincides with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality.

This one change will make a huge difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people. These people are under siege in Red States. They face legalized persecution in addition to the combined challenges of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, poverty, homeless and violence.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Bruce Hlodnicki
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Zachary Sigler
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Patricia Dingleberry
From: mullentim13@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Timothy Mullen"
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 20:02:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Timothy Mullen
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As a lesbian and parent of a gay man, I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Please support this effort especially during LGBTQ PRIDE month!

Sincerely,
Ms. Carolyn Gabel-Brett
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Wyatt Brown
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Jacqui Foster
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Tina Jones
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
CM Funk
From: levinger@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Linda Evinger"
<levinger@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 19:53:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda Evinger

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Julie Sanford
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Max Monegan

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Dr. Jason Durivage
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Max McGregor
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr oliver GENN
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Pat Dufau
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms Nawal Tamimi
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Elizabeth M. Stewart
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Daniel Ryan

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Faith Keenan
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Peter Chernack
From:    hbweiss1@everactioncustom.com on behalf of "Howard Weiss"
<hbweiss1@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent:    Tue, 08 Jun 2021 19:14:39 +0000
To:      T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Howard Weiss

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Mindy

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Liza McCollum
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Rosemary Ward
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Jordan Colon

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Krueger

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Cindy Janac
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lauren Rapp
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ei Meeker
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Jennifer Edwards

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
From: scott_w_barlow@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Scott Barlow"
<scott_w_barlow@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 18:50:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Scott Barlow
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Victoria Urias
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Beth D

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Anthony Ricciardi

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

hailey maloney
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Michael Mazzocco

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Edward Fenelon
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Phillip Hope
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Myron Mohr PhD

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Joyce Shiffrin
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I am a teacher and over the last decade I have seen first hand, how lack of protections for every student can lead to harm, not just to those who need protections, but for everyone. When we support each person for who they are, we create a safe place for them to figure it out. When we create boxes that only allow people to be a certain way, we limit people from their full potential and their capability to add to our society. When students are given negative messages about themselves, they cease to be a full person, and they have less capacity for their full potential. We have many diverse people in our world and country, who also have different perspectives. Our constitution was formed so that this would be a country free from persecution. A country unlike the countries most of us immigrated from. We are all here for equality, and we can't have equality if we continue to have some people who want to limit the rights of others.

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Megan Alameda
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kathryn Mitchell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Jaszmene Smith
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Randy Harrison
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Nell Buwman
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Philip Diamond

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kelly Hairgrove
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. DAWN BROADBENT

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Clementine Morel

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Frances Goff
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).” Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Darovic
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Alvin Crown
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Colleen Lucas
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. John Watt

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Carl Carlson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Robert Wanetick
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Beverly Poncia

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Vanessa Bradley

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Normand Dufresne
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Fred Gorelick
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jill
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Cypher
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)”.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mark
From: spencsm@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Shannon Spencer"
<spencsm@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 18:03:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Shannon Spencer

[b][6]
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden's Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms Elizabeth Larson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
cari brown

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Kimberly Rogers

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Joshua Seff
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Lucia Albers

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Kenneth Jones

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lisa Stone

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include ”on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Nicole Kachiroubas
 Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Betty Owen
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Michael Klausing

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. R Dene Larson Jr

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Andrew Rowlas
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms Pat Copenhaver
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Rob Stergas
From: heather.hirsch@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Heather Hirsch"
<heather.hirsch@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 17:40:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Heather Hirsch
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Dara Nix-Stevenson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

As a teacher and public school counselor I’ve worked with thousands of students, their families, community members, and elected officials. I have seen a complete lack of inclusion of LGBTQI students due to bias, stereotyping and naivete, change gradually to recognition and awareness producing acceptance and some backlash. But, the bottomline is that students that aren’t recognized and treated with dignity & respect drop out of school at higher rates. They kill themselves or suffer other forms of physical and mental health challenges at a higher rate than their non LGBTQI peers. They don’t become thriving members of society as adults.

From the early days back in the 90’s, I have had returning students that are now successful business owners, published authors and performers come back to me and thank me for accepting them when others didn’t. Many have their own families. I’m only 1 person. What about students in the large public schools I’ve worked in that I didn’t meet or work with and where are they today? I hope the Senate embraces the fact that they have an opportunity to help young people, America’s future generations, or not based on how they vote on this legislation.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Caryn Hoffman
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sara Schmidt
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Chani Adams
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. JOHN HETHERINGTON
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Jeanette Vyhanek
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Monica Davis
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Lucian Prevatt
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Roman Fruth
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Amy Lubin
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Robert Seigle

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr Phoenix Giffen
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Joel Brecht
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kitty Savage
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Cammack

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. colonel meyer

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jonathan Occhibove
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ian Shelley
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Janis Todd
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Samantha Colucci
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

JONATHAN WINKLER
From: cthatmolly@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Charles"
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 17:30:15 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Charles
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Jaclynn Ries

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Markus Charlson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Moriah Conant
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Judith Peter
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Lisa Friedlander

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Doug Herren
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Brenda James
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Aaron Klaus

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Peter Pugliese
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Jo Ann McGreevy
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Dennis Kreiner
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

I am a mother, school counselor, mental health professional and disabled individual. If none of my identities affect my ability to have a fulfilling life neither should who a person loves or which sex they see themselves as!

Sincerely,
Ms. Lisa Forte
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Todd Atkins

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Wallace
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Mari McShane
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms Katrina Pettersen

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
gretchen Campbell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Raymond Grimsinger
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Joyce Kimani
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Cheyenne Crooker

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jayne Cerny
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Allan Goldstein
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bill Kaiser
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Rebecca Moore
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Russell Ziegler
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms Alison Carville
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Izabelle Dulin

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda Blodgett

(b)(6)
From: mbartleman@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Mark Bartleman"
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 17:15:06 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mark Bartleman

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Tanner Wray
From: mtaylor@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Marie Taylor"
<mtaylor@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 17:13:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Marie Taylor

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I am writing to urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Thank you for your attention and consideration

Sincerely,

Mr. Charles Daly
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Doug Landau

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Lawrence Steinmetz
From: raggysr@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "David Ramie"
<raggysr@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 17:12:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mt David Ramie

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Amy Malette

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Smith

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Maureen Smith

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Wallace Rhine

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Kay Fragomeni

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Miss Courtney Kimmelman

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Friddell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cynthia Liss
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. russ ziegler

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Suzanne Gordon
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Susan Spilecki
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Timothy Gfell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Rachel Newman

(b)(6)
From: eaglelover34@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Henry Mobley"
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 17:06:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Henry Mobley

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Tyler Whoolev
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Christopher Ross

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Sharon Longyear

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Miss Kathryn Noonan

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kyle Peterson

(b)(6)
From: hatteml@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Leslie Hattemer"
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 17:05:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

she her Leslie Hattemer
(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Dawn Albanese

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Robbie Pearce
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Molly Torinus
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Hunter Klein
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Ben Walters

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+ young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Brooke Willis
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Maia Matsushita

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Justin Scibetta
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Terry Schildt
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Cori Bishop
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
From: punkpriest1@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "River Damien Sims" <punkpriest1@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 08 Jun 2021 17:02:30 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Fr. River Damien Sims
From: immypearline@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Daniel Bouwmeester"
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Daniel Bouwmeester

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr Robert Oberdorf
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gregory Esteve
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Jared Boot
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Dr. Nicholas Catania
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Danielle Chronister
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

John Aguirre
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Deanna Croce

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Wayne Mortimer
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Paula Bushkoff
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Morgan Durham
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Marissa Seaman
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Stephanie Mory

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden's Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Elliott Sernel
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Janice Dlugosz
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Everyday, members of the LGBTQIA+ community face harassment and discrimination and those who are in schools are even more vulnerable. LGBTQIA+ students are at higher risk of suicide, are more likely to hear hate speech, and are at higher risk of lower academic outcomes. As someone who works in a school, I see these things happening to our students. In an in school survey, only 25% of participants said that they felt supported at school. A guarantee of basic rights for people in these communities can mean the literal difference between life and death.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Elizabeth Hankins-Osborn

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mx. Nina Baran
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Kara Ross
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Adam Goren
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

As an educator who works closely with LGBTQ+ youth in my school, I can tell you that their first-hand experience is often that of being forgotten, erased from curriculum, ignored, and sometimes mistreated and misunderstood from both their fellow classmates and their teachers. Protections like the Equity Act will go a long to showing that these students are just as valued and protected as their peers.

Sincerely,
Christina DeAngelis
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As an American and as a Rabbi I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).” As a person of faith I believe that all people are made in the image of God (Genesis 1:27) and that as an American all people should be treated equally, regardless of their sex, sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes or sexual characteristics.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Simone Schicker
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Engel Guzman

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Rev. David Sickles

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Barbara Cunningham
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Julie Reagle
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Christine Purcell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. P. Sturm

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Carys
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Anne Rucker
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. EBen Grisby Grisby

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden's Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Lester Baltimore
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Michele Nihipali
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Patricia Smith
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Valerie Floda
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Jay McDowell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Louise Connolly
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Floyd Clark
From: ruiz.george87@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "George Ruiz"
<ruiz.george87@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 09 Jun 2021 08:49:15 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. George Ruiz

(b)(6)
From: amazinggrace3@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Edward Kern"
<amazinggrace3@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 09 Jun 2021 08:34:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Rev. Dr. Edward Kern
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Phillippe Fernandez-Brennan

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Nicholas Lenchner

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As a member of the LGBTQI+ community, I am extremely concerned about the recent spate of legislation attacking our rights—especially the rights of transgender youth—in states all over the country.

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Megan Coffey
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Theodore Voth

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. S. Nam

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jonathan E Holland
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Alyssa Galicia
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bertram Parker

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.
From: gregoryduz@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "gregory.a.. clewell"
<gregoryduz@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 09 Jun 2021 03:55:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. gregory.a.. clewell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bernie Cremin

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Greg Sells
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Prof. Kathleen O’Connell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. D.K. Hodges Hull
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

MS. Linda Gazzola
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Maureen O’Neal
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Tania Malven
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Colleen Burns
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Bernie Cremin
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Valerie Sarelas
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Peter Kahigian
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kathy Mullins
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Cari Kerkhoff
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

Hi! I am writing to you because I would like you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

I also ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Our rights are very important please listen!

Sincerely,
Isabel Ginsburg

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Patti Miller
From: lebeckg1@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "steven nasta"
<lebeckg1@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 09 Jun 2021 01:11:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. steven nasta
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Jim Pounds
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. John S

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ben Power

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Diann Presley
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)”.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Julia Testin
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms Ashley Dinan
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Amanda Yoder

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Dr. Dennis Schafer
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Frederick Hamilton
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Eli Knight

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Emma Cohen-Westbrooke
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Scott Grinthal

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Terry Howard
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. kim landini
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Anonymous Student
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. KHRISTINE SANDWITH

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Julia
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Denise Lytle

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Peter Budmen
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden's Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Alexana Carter
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Kylie Berry

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Betty Ann Duggan
From: querido@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Tito Galdo"
<querido@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Thu, 10 Jun 2021 03:46:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Tito Galdo

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

I’d like to share why this matters to me. I worked as a sexuality educator with LGBTQ youth for six years, and saw how much my students struggled to feel like their schools and communities had their best interests at heart. One of my transgender students travelled two hours two times a week just to join our programs in order to be around supportive adults and peers. He ended up dropping out of school in the eleventh grade because of the level of discrimination he faced as a transgender student in rural upstate New York.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Emma Cohen-Westbrooke
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Teresa

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

This would all directly change my life as a young LGBTQ+ student. I hope I can rely on my country to make sure I have all of the rights that are rightfully mine according to the Constitution.

Sincerely,
Anonymous Student
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Drew Goddard
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Sarah Roman
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Emilia Brasier

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Lisa Ellis
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Lisa Orr

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

Hello I'm Mindy Harrod (She/Her).

Let me tell you a story about my friend we'll call Bob. Bob is smart, artistic, and caring.

Bob was picked on bullied, sexually and physically assaulted while a child.

Bob escapes into the life of drugs and alcohol. Bob is now in his twenty's he had 75 days clean and sober. Bob's family tried to have an intervention because he was transgender.

Bob is missing.

In these times we need not tear down our children but build them up. Their education is our future. Our children don't need to be afraid to go to school, afraid to sit next to another child at lunch or in class, try out for sports as themselves. Equality for all through Title IX

Sincerely,

Mindy L. Harrod
Community Advocate
Stanislaus LGBTQ+ Collaborative

Sincerely,
Ms. Mindy Harrod

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. John Wilkins
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Anonymous Parent

(h)(b)
From: bully2@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Ianto Anglesey"
Sent: Sat, 05 Jun 2021 23:30:17 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Ianto Anglesey
From: jupiterdalby1@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Hunter Dalby"

Sent: Sat, 05 Jun 2021 21:45:36 +0000

To: T9PublicHearing

Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

Hello, My name is Hunter Dalby and I am a 22 year old transgender man working with the LGBTQ+ Collaborative doing work in the community to help homeless youth LGBTQ people from homelessness, discrimination and poverty. In my work so far and in my own personal life I have have countless suffering for those in this community that could be easily prevented if the government, schools, and organizations would enforce and provide it. I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx Hunter Dalby

(b)(6)
From: jupiterdalby1@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Hunter Dalby"
<jupiterdalby1@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Sat, 05 Jun 2021 21:41:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

Hello, my name is Hunter Dalby and I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, nonbinary status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics and gender expression. (including intersex traits and people)

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Hunter Dalby

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Vanessa Jamison

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Denise Bonk
From: hayley.dickson@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Hayley Dickson"
<hayley.dickson@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Sat, 05 Jun 2021 19:58:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

My sibling shared with me that they are trans/non-binary last year. Born into the female sex, they do not associate with the social constructs of gender. Their whole life they’ve been searching for their inner truth—and after coming out they now have the freedom to express who they are, and how they identify in the world. They can be SEEN as them. I’ve never seen my sibling so happy, feel so comfortable in their body and walk through the world aligned with who they are and not who they think they’re supposed to be. Please let’s give every human on the planet this opportunity. We must unravel gender and stop misgendering based on social constructs of what is ‘normal.’

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Hayley Dickson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and under-served communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education. Rates of death by suicide among LGBTQ+ young people -- especially LGBTQ+ young people of color -- are painfully high. Providing them with legal protections, so that they can enjoy fuller lives and feel valued at school during these formative years, is extremely important.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kimberly Lowe
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

As a high school teacher and advisor for my school’s gender and sexuality alliance (GSA), I hear my students concerns about discrimination on the basis of their innate characteristics including gender identity and sexual orientation. These young people need and deserve protection under the law. They also need to see our nation’s concern and respect for them demonstrated in a visible, impactful way.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Scot Mathis
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As an LGBTQ+ student, I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education. Non-discrimination protections such as Title IX are important for supporting LGBTQ+ students and their mental health, as non-discrimination protections are connected to decreases in depression and suicide rates for youth from marginalized communities.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence. Survivors of sexual harassment and violence deserve to feel safe and heard, and the rules put forward by the former Secretary of Education prevents that. Please stand with student survivors of sexual harassment and violence, particularly those from marginalized communities.

Sincerely,
Isabella Majarowitz
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Emmett Fenton
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

As an LGBTQ+ student myself, what the Board of Education does directly affects me and the folks I go to school with and care about. Not including the LGBTQ+ community as a protected group in Title IX is an action against us, the people you are dedicating your lives to represent and fight for. So protect us. So fight for us.

Sincerely,

Miss Adriana Parrino

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Rachel Newman

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

Please, I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).” As a bisexual transgender man, this negatively impacts my community and I. Please protect us. I've experienced discrimination due to my gender identity at school and at work. It not only makes life harder than it is already, but allows employers and schools to deny your experience as a trans student/employee at a minimum-wage job. We need your help. Please protect our community. Thank you.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Thank you,

Sincerely,
Mr. Hunter
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Patricia Smith

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Analis Martinez

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Paula Bushkoff

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Dee Tsiakals
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Jonathan Holland

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Jaz Routon
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As an educator, I see students harmed by lack of Title IX protections on a regular basis. I hear dead names called out over the intercom and listen to administrators and teachers who can't be bothered to refer to a child by their preferred pronouns. Student made posters promoting LGBT tolerance are torn down by their peers. LGBTQ students and students with LGBTQ family members do not encounter themselves, their families, the histories of LGBTQ struggles and icons reflected in the curriculum. Even their basic bathroom needs have been turned into a political tennis ball. I watch as my students become demoralized. The pressures they are up against are stronger than the sphere of my protective influence. Some drop out. Some attempt suicide. Some succeed. I am also becoming demoralized. I need your help to ensure that our schools treat ALL of our students with the dignity they deserve.

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Beth Bruch

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Amy Emond
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Sickles

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Scott Grinthal

[(b)(6)]
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Katie Breuer

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifyng fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Denise Gutierrez
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Meghan Sovell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Dr. Lisa Brown

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

I am the mother of a transgender youth. I have seen first hand how difficult being a transgender kid can be. My son was sick for 4 years, 2 of which he couldn’t attend school or even leave his home easily. He didn’t know that people being transgender even existed much less that he was one. We sought him medical attention by specialists and they couldn’t find the reason for his “dis-ease” because it was from dysphoria. He was taught about what transgender is by an educator who reached out to him while sick. Once he realized he was transgender his healing began. He is still healing from a childhood clouded by dysphoria. Most people don’t understand what it like being transgender and the challenges it creates for youth. These youth need to be supported by our education system not discriminated against. These transgender students need protectors, advocates and educators who will teach other students about the transgender experience fostering more sensitivity.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Maria Komie
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

Hello,

My name is Katherine Aiken and I am an educator in Maryland. I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Thank you,
Katherine Aiken

Sincerely,
Katherine Aiken

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Marcus Peterson
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Dr. Lindsay Warren

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Carter Sokolov
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Thomas Richard Pulliam

Sincerely,

Thomas Pulliam

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Kinder Future

(b)(6)
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Polk

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Terry Howard
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Zain Zaidi
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Mary Curran

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr S deHart
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)”.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
From: Brimfilledglass@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Brianna Williams"
<Sirim filledglass@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Thu, 03 Jun 2021 14:19:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Brianna Williams

(b)(6)
From: maggieaswenson@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Constituent"
Sent: Thu, 03 Jun 2021 14:32:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

To Whom It May Concern:

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

I am a school counselor, which is why I chose to keep my identity and where I work anonymous so that the confidentiality and safety of my students is kept intact. The LGBTQ+ student population within the school I work for are struggling. They don't feel safe being or expressing who they are to heterosexual students and staff for fear of being bullied, physically or emotionally harmed and treated different than any other student. Suicide rates for this population is higher than suicide rates for non-LGBTQ+ youth. I have personally seen this first hand. I have so many LGBTQ students who have depression or suicidal ideation (SI) due to non acceptance from their family, school teachers, other students, etc... Many of them also have SI because they feel like they can't "come out" for fear of being treated less than or targeted because of who they are and/or who they are attracted to.

I will also ask you this. Religion is not supposed to be pushed on students in a public school, so what other reason, besides religion, is holding up equal rights for the LGBTQ+ community? If we took religion out of the mix, would this be an issue?

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

SheHer Anonymous Educator

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Anonymous Student

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).” I am a genderfluid person who normally sits at nonbinary and I even get told to just do the stuff for my gender assigned at birth which can get annoying and hard to hear.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Karina Hall
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Rebecca Rabizadeh

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Katharine St. Laurent
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of LGBTQ+ and colored students and young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Anonymous Student
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Jim Barritt
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

I have prepared a short research paper to encourage my school district to address these issues through cultural competency training: https://docs.google.com/document/d/1Q0a3uJmp_4SlacVA2L6s6uGr9_Ur2Dq-EAgizw0jEM/edit.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Daniel Ryan

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Denise Tarr

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Dee Davidson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Faith Franck
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Anonymous Educator

(b)(6)
From: koconne@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Kathleen O'Connell"
<kkoconne@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Thu, 03 Jun 2021 01:42:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Prof. Kathleen O'Connell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden's Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Shearerie Welsh
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Miss Vix Johnson

(b)(6)
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Valerie Burde
From: hdzmorrison@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Heather Morrison"
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 22:46:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Heather Morrison

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

As a student, I faced discrimination from my peers for simply asking them to use my chosen name, which is Alex. I faced mocking comments, slurs - anything they could say to bring me down. Just because I am gender fluid. I brought this up to my teachers, only to be met with comments of, essentially, it's your fault. No action taken, nothing done to help me. Only a phone call to my parents saying that I was "causing trouble."

No student should have to go through what I did. Bullying of that kind leaves a mark of trauma on people. I still struggle with telling people to not deadname me. I'm not upfront with my gender identity. I fear that, in coming years, this will occur again and again. Maybe to me, maybe to others. I don't want someone else to hear that their gender identity is their fault. Do you?

Sincerely,
Anonymous Student
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Ricardo Fonseca (b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Betty Ann Duggan
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Nicole Nelson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Fr Steve Wolf
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Hayley Frazier
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people like myself and my peers, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine our full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

M Faulstich
From: cgfeminist@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Carolyn Gabel-Brett" <cgfeminist@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 20:28:39 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Carolyn Gabel-Brett
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As an educator and the parent of a transgender teenager in Virginia's public school system, I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people like my daughter, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and legislation in some states that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

I further urge the Department to restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Simon Joyce
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)”.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Corey Blake
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden's Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

I've seen it first hand as I am a school counselor, who also happens to be married to a human of the same sex. I've supported students that are LGBTQ+ that struggle against discrimination, meanness and being forced to live in ways that are not congruent to who they are. THAT must change! You can help.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Tina Hentosh
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Aine Blum
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Victoria Taxter
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Kaitlin Nolan
From: olibakugou@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Oliver Blackwell"
<olibakugou@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 19:43:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Oliver Blackwell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ruth Potts
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Maia Matsushita
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

As someone who graduated from a public school a year ago, I know full well how important it is that students feel safe at school. Something else important is that students feel that they are accepted, and don’t have to fear being ostracised, bullied, and most horribly, attacked because of who they are. School is meant to educate students about many different things in this world, and the best learning environment is one where a student feels safe and accepted. Many LGBTQ+ students are also reporting having higher rates of mental illness compared to their non-LGBTQ+ peers. Based on experience, mental illness is one of many things that can negatively impact a student’s performance. By refusing to give LGBTQ+ students the same protections as other students, you are showing them that their sexuality means that they are less deserving of an education. I highly doubt that this is the kind of message you want to send to the younger generations, as it is very damaging.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kelly Hammond

[Redacted]
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Steven Viola

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

As a teacher, this is important to me and my students. Students I teach right now are suffering trauma as they watch laws get passed in states that harm them and their identities. Two students I work closely with have had panic attacks as they hear news like transgender people being banned from healthcare or sports. These middle schoolers are having to grow up knowing that this country does not support them, that we do not see them as wonderful human beings just as they are. As a teacher I want to try and fix it for them. I want to tell them that it will be ok and we don’t have to worry about it because we live in New York. But this just isn’t true. I don’t know if it will be ok until we have federal protection for ALL types of discrimination, including gender identity and sexual orientation. We are failing our youth by continuing to define Title IX on the basis of sex.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Jana Ford

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Laura Galgoci
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education. I've worked with LGBTQ+ youth for over 10 years and have seen how schools handle and mishandle homophobic and transphobic incidents, with devastating results. Depression and suicide rates for trans youth in particular are extremely high, often because of how they are treated in schools with absolutely no real protection from administration. This is unacceptable.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence. I also currently work in sexual violence prevention and have seen how Title IX fails student survivors every day. I've had youth kicked out of schools for reporting assault, which directly affected their access to education and should be in clear violation of Title IX. It is WAY too easy for schools to punish survivors and brush incidents under the rug to protect their reputations. This is reprehensible, and DeVos's changes only made that worse. Title IX needs to be strengthened immediately and work the way it's supposed to - it should be protecting survivors.

Sincerely,
Mx. Jamie Erdheim
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Yaniza
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms Nawal Tamimi
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Kai Mitchell
From: brettandles@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Lesley Thompson" <brettandles@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 18:14:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Lesley Thompson

((b)(6))
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mx.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr and Mrs James Dawson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Ellie Friedland
From: veronica_guerrero2@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Veronica Guerrero"
<veronica_guerrero2@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 18:08:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs Veronica Guerrero

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

To whom it may concern,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Make this a pride month to remember by strengthening legislation that celebrates and reinforces equality.

Sincerely,

Savannah Dali
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Dr. Joshua Palkki
From: geomath53@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "P. Sturm"
<geomath53@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 17:33:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. P. Sturm

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Stella

(b)(6)
亲爱的美国教育部，

我敦促您修改Title IX法规，将“基于性别”定义扩大为“基于性取向、性别认同、转换状态、性别刻板印象、或性别特征（包括性别非一致）。”

这样定义“基于性别”将与总统拜登对种族平权和边缘化社区的行政命令一致，执行 landmark Bostock裁决，并推动性别平等。这将对LGBTQ+、非二元、跨性别、性非一致和性别非一致的年轻人产生重大影响，他们正面临Covid-19大流行、系统性种族主义和立法企图的双重挑战，这些立法试图削弱他们受教育的全面性。

最后，我请求您恢复并加强性骚扰和暴力幸存者保护，撤销前教育部的规则，这些规则与Title IX法案的条款和目的相冲突，以及确立性骚扰和暴力的公平和适当规定，以防止和应对性骚扰和暴力。

此致

Mx. Chloe Lugo
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

To Whom This May Concern,

Like most children growing up in America, I often heard, used, and laughed at the use of the word gay as an insult against other children as an attempt to "other" them. Every child's worst fear is being singled out, isolated and thrown aside as a non-integrative part of a classroom, or worse, a family. It took until my senior year in high school to start realizing the impact these causal insults had once several classmates of mine began to identify as gay, lesbian, queer, and transgender. Coming out shouldn't have to be a brave experience of martyrdom, yet it is due to our society's consistent lack of support for LGBTQ identifying individuals.

Two years ago a close friend of mine, who had grown up in a conservative family close to Amish country, took great trust in me to let me know she is a lesbian. I could visually see the weight coming off of her shoulders once she saw that I had nothing to give her but support. She is now about to be married to the love of her life, and I will be able to proudly stand by her side to witness their ceremony. Yet, part of being able to participate in their wedding fully involved me reflecting on my own experiences with hate, bigotry, and language I felt perfectly fine using because my school deemed it to be "something that kids do". How much sooner would she have come out had she known that she would have been loved by her peers instead of shamed? How much sooner could she have been living her life the way she wanted to? In her case she waited 25 years. In many cases people hide their true selves to the grave.

School is the starting point for us to learn how our society operates, how it treats "others", and how to navigate the world. Title IX is so, so important in creating an inclusive school space that ensures all students, regardless of their sexual orientation, identity, gender status, etc., have a fair pathway to learn and love without boundaries. As an educator, I have seen the power of children being able to express themselves safely at school and the direct impact it has on their success. As a friend, I have witnessed a life renewed through acceptance and love. I work every day to create a safe space for all of my students, and to let them know growing up doesn't have to mean growing tough.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” will allow for all students to feel protected equally under the law. Now, more than ever, children need legal support that favors individuality and protects voices of those trying to teach us how our humanity should unite our country, not divide it into partisan bickering. I have been disturbed by the sudden movement to mitigate transgender student athletes in recent months, and it echoes lessons from the past we have not learned and refuse to reflect on.

Sincerely,

EJ Eisenmann
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Personally, including these regulations would assist me as an LGBTQ+ student. I am a non-binary lesbian student who could face discrimination and the changes to Title IX would be a great assist in protecting me and my rights as a citizen. I am not able to vote and so this is another urge to make the necessary changes to the legislation.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mx. Hornet Bosa
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Paige Shoemaker
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Joel Davidson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Paula Palmeri
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr oliver GENN
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Samuel Milligan
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

cari brown
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Gabriella Mercier
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

Why wouldn’t we do everything we can to protect all children? That we even need legislation to ensure our kids are treated with dignity in their own schools is evidence of a nation whose morality is suspect. Clearly we do need such legislation however so please do your part to protect our kids from discrimination.

Sincerely,

C Thomas
From: sarah.briuer@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Sarah Briuer Boland"
<sarah.briuer@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 16:14:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Sarah Briuer Boland
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Michael Cleggs

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

Nearly 10% of American teens identify as LGBTQI. (More than 10% in some studies.) LGBTQI teens are at high risk for bullying and discrimination in public settings, including schools and sports. Protecting vulnerable people should be the goal of the Title IX regulations.

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

The Trevor Project studies show that risk for suicide attempts can be cut in half by support and acceptance for LGBTQI teens, including within schools. Conversely, no increase in crime, trauma, or assault has been shown in any jurisdiction that has mandated LGBTQI rights. This demonstrates only an upside to expanding Title IX to explicitly cover all forms of gender and sexual identity discrimination.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute. Title IX should codify fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Karin Harp
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Victoria Urias
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Robbie Parks
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Heather Curry

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
hailey maloney
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden's Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kara Ross
From: strachan.d@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Dina Strachan" <strachan.d@everyactioncustom.com>
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dina Strachan

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Beverly Poncia
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As a queer teacher in the Midwest, I see the impacts of hatred and anti-LGBTQ+ biases and prejudice in students and schools. Students are actively harmed, and it is not okay.

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) youth people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Zoey Kapusinski
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

She her Jaime Surdynski Surdynski
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Robert Valle
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

We urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It can also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, we urge the Department to restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Corey E. Olsen
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Ivey Wood
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

As an educator for over twenty years, students have honored me by coming out and sharing their experiences. I have one queer friend who is female and, upon entering the women's restroom at a gas station on a trip back from visiting her family, was beaten up by three other individuals. She spent several days in a hospital, far from her family and loved ones, for no other reason than that she needed to use a restroom. A former student, who is non-binary, wrote a letter to their parents explaining who they are. They hid themselves from everyone at school and in their home, although they knew who they were since they were six. The heavy violence that permeates our school community, and community in general, kept them from being who they are until they left for college.

I have several dozen stories like this, about sexual harassment and violence because of gender identity and sexuality. I work in an environment that states "all are welcome here," but it isn't the truth. Nondiscrimination and LGBTQ+ has to be protected by law before we can progress forward as individuals to make all places safe.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. deborah Randall-Gresham
From: mtaylor@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Marie Taylor"
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 13:33:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Marie Taylor

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

WENDI LINCOLN
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Donna Maher
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

As an elementary/middle school guidance counselor in NYC, I have seen extraordinary changes in openness and support for LGBTQ youth thanks to NYC’s implementation of “Out for SAFE Schools.” This is a program that trains adults to be knowledgeable allies to LGBTQ youth. It encourages the use of a full range of inclusive materials in the classroom. Most importantly it helps youth to identify adults in the school who are "safe" to talk to about issues of bullying, harassment, and other personal concerns for LGBTQ youth. I have seen great results based on this program. I am proud that NYC is working to make its schools safe learning environments for all youth. I believe all schools in the nation should be similarly inclusive and supportive to promote mental health and better learning by all our kids.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lisa deMauro

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mx. Lee Lewis
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Miss Lauren Hicks
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Wendy Becker Educator
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss joanne molochnick
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Daniel Grimley
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Caitlin Goodwin

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Carlynn Venetz
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Michaela Scherer
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)”.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

On a personal note I will tell you why this is so important and how it affects me, and my family. Both of my children (now adults) are part of the LGBTQAI+ community, and I am an ally. As their mother, a school counselor and a human I need for my kids (adult and young) to be counted, to be seen and to be validated. It is so important to their all around well being and happiness. I have witnessed too many depressed LGBTQAI+ youth put them self out risk because they have been discounted, abandoned and pushed out. This happens to our kids in school settings and at home settings. It pains me, that I can do so very little for them. Changing this wording to “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” makes a HUGE difference. If you have never been marginalized or discounted you may not understand this, but please listen to all of those sending this plea to you that it is vital to the mental health of all people identifying within the LGBTQAI+ and their loving allies.

Sincerely,
she her Amy Jacqques
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Joyce Shiffrin

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Lindsay Grohowski

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Bianca Pietro
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Sara Hughes
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Charles Sharpe

[Boxed text: (b)(6)]
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Heather Pighetti
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Laurel Hotchkiss
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Martha Larkin

(b)(6)
From: alicia.m.simoes@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Alicia Simoes"
<alicia.m.simoes@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 11:35:16 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Alicia Simoes
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

David Ramie
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Lily McGhee

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Melissa Palecek
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Rose

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Tracy Hobbs
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. KAYLEE BURRIS
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Mercedes Lackey

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Jonathan Occhibove
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. donald solomon
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ma Sheila Harris-Schutz
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. colonel meyer
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. George Ruiz
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As a gay woman with LGBTQ+ family members and friends, I am horrified by the new and ongoing attacks on our community, especially our vulnerable youth. Our kids should be nurtured, not attacked!

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Thank you in advance for taking action to protect children, youth, and survivors.

Sincerely,
Megan Coffey

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Christopher Lee
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).” Science emerges every day that tells us that “sex” is neither as binary nor as determinant as we once thought. Limiting protections based on an outdated notion of what “sex” is and convincing ourselves that we have adequately protected the populations this legislation is designed to protect is misguided and dangerous.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

LGBTQ+ youth are under attack in this country and we have to step up and protect them. They are among the most vulnerable youth in this country and many of them will never know a supportive adult who will support them in their education, their care, or their healthcare. I have volunteered with LGBTQ+ youth for a while now and I know what a difference that makes and how vulnerable these children are. Isn’t it the job of all of us to step up for such vulnerable populations -- particularly our youth? To valid their existence and protect them so they can grow up and be healthy, happy, productive members of our society?

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence. Our current culture surrounding sexual harassment and violence is disgusting and the protections are so weak that many people don't even seek help after surviving these offenses. Personally, I was a victim of sexual assault two decades ago, when I was 19 (a college sophomore). I didn't tell anyone for years because I knew what the climate surrounding those disclosures was... and still is. Things have hardly changed, despite how far we believe we've come.

It is time to step up and codify protections for our most vulnerable citizens, particularly our youth. Anything less is unacceptable in a plural, inclusive, functional society.

Sincerely,
Christopher Winchester
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr Rick Pearson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Brian Ainsley
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden's Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Xander Murray

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Jennifer Lewis
From: airbat@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Nicholas Lenchner"
<airbat@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 04:53:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Nicholas Lenchner
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Karen Lago
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr gregory.a.. clewell

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Alex Morales
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Emily Crook

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Nikki Orkoskey
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Amanda Wynn
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

All children have a right to be who they are. They also need to be SAFE.

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lydia I Oey

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr Keith Kellogg
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms Carol Kelley

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Janice Hughes
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Patricia Vander Kamp
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Christiansen
From: jbtodd26@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Janis Todd"
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 03:33:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Janis Todd

(b)(6)
From: xenafan431@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Linda Gazzola"
<xenafan431@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 03:25:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of Lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda Gazzola

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Tania Malven

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lisa Stone
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Stephanie Cunningham

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bernie Cremin
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Harold Watson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Maureen O'Neal
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Greg Sells

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Viacrusis
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Linda K Hardy
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mark Koritz
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Patti Miller
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Hannah Figueredo

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Len Yeomans
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jamie Shultz
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. John Doucette

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. MARJORIE CRUMP-SHEARS
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Janice Dlugosz
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
mia
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr Philip Shook

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Kyle
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

My brother died by suicide after being harassed, teased, left out, and attacked. He was 25 years old, and if the terms gender identity, sexual orientation, and transgender had protected him, he may still be with us today. He was my parents’ baby boy, and after he couldn’t live in this unforgiving culture, their lives were a nightmare until they died. My son is gay and questioning at the age of 32. The world is changing, and he isn’t as alone, but still, he feels unprotected and alone still. Please make the wording of Title IX protective of all.

Sincerely,
Patricia Zahm

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Shank

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Ryan
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Elaine Dorough Johnson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Kristine DiColandrea
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Dr. mark glasser

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. William Welkowitz
From: vjastromb@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Constituent"
<Svjastromb@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Wed, 02 Jun 2021 00:54:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As a therapist who works with and is a member of the LGBTQIA+ community, I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Lori Payne Benker
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Rev. Erwin J Crawford

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Courtney Kimmelman
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Norbert Kovacs
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Phillip Hope
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Nasta
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Dr. Dennis Schafer
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

Imagine a world where everyone grows up recognizing that diversity is normal, I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Watt
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).” I am a professor at Montclair State University where I teach courses on gender and sexuality. I have many lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people in my classes who are facing serious challenges from the impact of Covid-19, racism, and legislation that undermines their access to education. Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. I

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Dr. Monica Taylor
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
chloe thomas

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Elizabeth Tanner
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Kathleen Loughran
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mx. Diann Presley
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
MS
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Frederick Hamilton
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Sharyn Abbes
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Amanda Jenkins
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jim Pounds
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Kelly Hairgrove
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Joshua Seff
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Randy Harrison
From: krs1123@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Kate Skolnick"
<krs1123@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 23:54:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kate Skolnick
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms Carolyn Villanova
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Wiltermuth
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Anas Gilgamesh
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

If all of that was not enough to convince you to help the LGBTQ+ youth, ask yourself this; Are they human? If you hesitated to say yes, then I don’t know what is wrong with you. The constitution guarantees all humans, queer youth included, that everyone deserves equal rights. So please consider this the next time you debate whether or not we deserve common decency.

Sincerely,
Isabella Chang

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

LGBTQ youth need and deserve support at school. The 2019 National School Climate Survey showed that 99% of LGBTQ youth have heard anti-LGBTQ remarks at school, and 59% felt unsafe at school because of their sexual orientation. All students must be safe and supported at school so they can focus on their education.

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Polly
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

I have a transgender niece, and I have deep concerns about her mental, physical, and educational health. Nobody should be discriminated against or poorly treated because of who they are.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Susan Smith
From: kiona63@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Constituent"
<kiona63@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 23:44:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Sherri Schwanz

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Carol Zur
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Falcon Ly

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” should include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

PLEASE restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Sherrill Futrell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Dr. John Nelson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As an dedicated public high school educator, a transgender American and a voter, I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ei Meeker
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Alex Bravo
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lauren Rapp

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).” As a teacher of high school students, I have worked closely with many LGBTQ+ students and know very well the frailty of their lives. The point is not whether others approve or disapprove of their "lifestyles". The point is that they deserve equal treatment under the law.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Katharine Racicot
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Gregory Brown
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Morgan Durham
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Steve Uyenishi
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
CA
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Noah Jorgensen
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jason Crawford
From: djkreiner2@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Dennis Kreiner"
Sent: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 22:51:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Dennis Kreiner

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Elizabeth Woodward
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Daniel Dornbrook
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Heather Burgess

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Mary Devine

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ashley Farreny
From: AGstars258@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Alice Goldstein"
<AGstars258@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 22:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

LGBT+ you desperately need your help right now. Transgender people, who would especially benefit from this revision, already suffer from poverty disproportionately. The pandemic has only made their struggles greater. Title IX was revolutionary in bringing high quality protections to women when it was passed- we have every reason to make history again and protect our LGBT+ friends and family. We have just started pride month- if there's a time to help queer people who are struggling to find a place of equality. It's now. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Alice Goldstein

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Wallace Rhine
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Brett Cooper
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

This is my 10th year as a high school teacher, and by far the most challenging since the first year. When I was still in college looking for teaching jobs during the winter and spring of 2011, toward the end of a job interview that had been going well, I was asked if I was "of an Adam and Steve mentality." I was shocked, I didn't know how to respond, and I felt totally powerless in that moment. I remember standing up and saying, "I guess this interview is over" and walking out. I didn't tell anyone at the hiring conference at the time because I felt embarrassed and ashamed.

I wasn't openly gay at the first school where I was eventually hired--I could sense in the school culture an underlying hostility to the LGBTQ+ community. A student came out to me after he graduated and also disclosed how he had struggled with depression and suicidal ideation during his time at the school.

I now teach at a school that authentically practices the inclusivity that it preaches. There I serve as the faculty advisor to the Gender and Sexuality Alliance and I cannot emphasize enough how much of a difference it makes in the lives of our students to have robust protections against discrimination.

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden's Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of our students to have robust protections against discrimination.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

John W
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. russ ziegler
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Judith Cohen
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kyle Peterson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Kat Pepmeyer
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Douglas Sedon
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

There is no problem that can not be resolved by lending an ear to what others say and trying to understand.

Sincerely,
Ms DAWN BROADBENT
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Melissa Regan
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Russell Ziegler
(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Sam Ascencio
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. PJ Agodoa
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Steve Lampert MA LBSC
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda Murphy
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Charlie Caton
From: amazinggrace3@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Edward Kern"
<amazinggrace3@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 22:01:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Rev. Dr. Edward Kern

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Kristin Untiedt-Barnett
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Jaliyah Boudreaux
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and discrimination.

Sincerely,
Karen Katanick
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, romantic orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Molly Torinus
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Diane Gruen-Kidd
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

They preach abstinence and Chasity to our straight adolescent and teenage youth, but the toxic homophobia they promote, may put these nonsexual active youth in the situation of homophobic suspicion cast on them. Especially so if not dating, so may experience not only verbal homophobic harassments but even in cases being "technically" or even authentically GAY BASHED! CHRISTIANS THUS CURSE OUR YOUNG PEOPLE AND ALLOW THEM NEITHER IN OR OUT!

Sincerely,

Mr. Dennis Vieira
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Our country thrives when all people have equal opportunities and personal respect. Without respect and opportunities, many become depressed or angry or both and are not able to contribute to our communal success. America does not need “marginalized” inhabitants who cannot participate according to their talents.

So please revise Title IX as noted above. Thank you.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lynne Kane
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Amanda Yoder

(b)(6)
From: moskiosa@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Sierra Moskios"
Sent: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 21:44:39 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Sierra Moskios
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Lola Franco
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jenny North
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Alice Polesky
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I strongly urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Timothy Dobbins

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Joy Lai
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Angela Miller
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. ROBERT Peters
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Cori Bishop
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ross Ellis
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Michael Caruso
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Rhonda Hennrich
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Pollock

(b)(6)
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Wesley Davidson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms Ashley Dinan
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Patricia DeLuca
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

As an LGBTQ+ educator (b)(6) I have seen and experienced the bullying and harassment that LGBTQ+ people face in our schools. While strides have been made, more must be done to support all our students.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Angie Powers (b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Katherine Hutchins
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

[(b)(6)]
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Humans are human. Period. And human rights should be extended to all humans.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
CS Perryess
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Dallas Windham
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
From: treale777@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Tom Reale"
	<treale777@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 21:23:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Tom Reale

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Sara Allegretti
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Tanner Wray
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Karen Bloom

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “based on sex” to include “based on sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “based on sex” to include “based on sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Matthew Boguske
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Dara Nix-Stevenson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As a parent and a public health professional and advocate, I strongly urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Elizabeth Jarpe-Ratner
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “based on sex” to include “based on sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “based on sex” to include “based on sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Matthew Boguske
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Sadie Redfern
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Emily Glikas
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As a long-time teacher-advisor of our school's GSA, I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

LGBTQ+ youth face discrimination and harassment every day, and the more that the Department of Education can do to protect these students from discriminatory state measures, the better their chances are of getting through their school years with the resources and support that they need and deserve.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Jean Gritter
From: centauress6@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Denise Lytle"
<centauress6@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 21:14:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden's Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Denise Lytle

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

Allow humans to reach their human potential. The only way this can happen is if one is able to feel fully accepted as who they are, as well as feel safe and encouraged to express such humanness.

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Kaitlynn Johnson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
She Her Heidi Haines

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

As an educator and the parent of 2 LGBTQ+ children, I see first-hand the difference it makes when students feel recognized and supported. Protecting the rights of LGBTQ+ students to participate equally within the education system can increase engagement as well as reduce rates of depression and suicidality within this vulnerable population of students.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Jennifer Robinson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Christy McLaughlin

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Suzanne Benson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mary Bondeson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

B Bunts
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Vic Mandarich
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Chloe Cordasco
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sandra Mattson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Tre'Andre Valentine
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Creswell

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Jon Berg

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cynthia Liss

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Timothy Larkin

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Misty Crompton
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Doug Herren
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Myron Mohr PhD

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden's Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mrs Donna Ingenito

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Sam Barnes
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Barry Heath
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr Michael Silva
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. John S
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Rebecca Weeks

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Heather Weber

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and under-served communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Daniel Bouwmeester
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Robert Brown
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Samantha Weekley
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

marty johnson
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

marty johnson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Althea Harris
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Sophie D’Halleweyn

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mx. Trebor Strong
From: jerry.voelker79@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Jerry Voelker"
<jerry.voelker79@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 20:52:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Jerry Voelker
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms Elizabeth Larson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jo Ann McGreevy
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Deborah Levine
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

In my experience as a high schooler, myself and my other LGBTQ+ peers were put at extreme disadvantages both in and outside of the classroom. Queer history was never studied or even talked about, there were both students and teachers that would harass transgender students in restrooms, and there were allegations two years ago of multiple senior boys sexually harassing a gay freshman in the locker room after school, but the school I go to covered it up. Being an openly gay student is challenging and terrifying because I never know what harassment I or my friends will have to endure. A few people have had to leave school and switch to online learning programs, homeschool, or another public school in the area but the other schools aren't much better. We aren't able to participate in our schools sports teams because of the fear of harassment. It's isolating and terrifying.

We should be able to go to school and feel at least Safe, but right now we don't have that. That's why I urge you to revise Title IX, so we can at least have basic protection when we walk into school. So we can actually learn instead of spending our days distracted and stressed wondering who's going to get raped or harassed next, just to have it all covered up. We're tired from fighting and we just want to be able to learn.

Sincerely,
Eden Alabaster
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Timothy Mullen
From: wohlbold_2000@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Karen Spradlin"
SENT: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 20:51:06 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Karen Spradlin
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education. Encouraging teachers to put out rainbow signs for representation, advertising and establishing LGBTQIA+ inclusive clubs such as the Gender and Sexualities Alliance.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ryan Liu
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

I am the principal of a small rural elementary school in California. Just since returning to 100% in-person learning in March, I have had (b)(6) students (b)(6) come out to their classmates, teacher, or school counselor. One was called a ‘fag’ on the first day she returned to campus. Another (b)(6) experienced harassing comments from her 6th grade peers about her sexual identity.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Joe Horacek

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sharon Longyear
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Ren Berryman
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Amanda Erickson

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Sasha Silverstein
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Bonnie Burke

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kim Kensler-Prager
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Brandi Damveld
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Susan Peters
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sara Schmidt

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr Frank Vaca
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Tyra Myles
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

This change will be life saving to ALL students.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for SURVIVORS of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the Trump Administration and the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Joshua Lamont
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you NOT to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” is clearly not what was intended in the original law, and defies science, biology, good health and morality.

I ask that the Department continue rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that are consistent conflict with fair and appropriate prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Please do not arbitrarily change definitions to suit a very aggressive and intrusive agenda promoting sexual anarchy.

Sincerely,
Linda Harvey

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Lawrence Steinmetz

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Aaron Klaus
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
B. Collene Stout

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

As a teacher, I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Timothy Gfell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ashley Eller
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

ALL AMERICANS ARE EQUAL AND SHOULD BE LEGALLY TREATED THAT WAY.

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Dr. mark koppel

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Carol Devoss
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

As a non-binary student, I rarely feel included in the vocabulary used in my school. Often I feel like my identity, a part of who I am, is being erased or taken away when I am confined to the boxes of gender normality. But no one should ever feel this way. Transgender and non-binary people like myself are real people too. We deserve to included and accepted and loved, in every aspect that our cisgender counterparts are.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Syd Gandhi
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cleo B
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Elliott Birckhead
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Alison Carville
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Jared Disher Ravelo
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Rev. todd atkins
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Alyssa Galicia
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Alyssa Galicia
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)”.

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms.
From: wchrisman@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Wendy Chrisman"
<wchrisman@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 20:38:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Wendy Chrisman

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Henry Mobley
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sarah Preizoso
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Ian Shelley
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics" aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mx. Tyler Whooley
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Matthew Burton
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mr. Michael Friddell
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Tiffany Capon
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. Warren M. Gold

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Mary Couri
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Jordan Colon
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Cheyenne Crooker

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Batsheva Kasdan
CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Baughn

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Miss Kathryn Noonan
(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
ms katherine dander
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Larimore
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Robbie Pearce

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Doug Landau

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Andy Lynn
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

Hi! Please revise the Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, can the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Isabel Ginsburg
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr. Roman Fruth
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define "on the basis of sex" to include "on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits)."

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Christopher Ross
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Miss Nicole Burgess

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Rabbi Rabbi Barbara Zacky
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Meya Law
From: jwboot3@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Jared Boot"
<jwboot3@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 20:32:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Mr Jared Boot
From: gjmcm48@everyactioncustom.com on behalf of "Gail McMullen"
<gjmcm48@everyactioncustom.com>
Sent: Tue, 01 Jun 2021 20:32:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing (LGBTQ+ Nondiscrimination)

Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Ms. Gail McMullen
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Ms. Tasha Moore

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,

Amanda Canete

(b)(6)
Dear U.S. Department of Education,

I urge you to revise Title IX regulations to define “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics (including intersex traits).”

Defining “on the basis of sex” to include “on the basis of sexual orientation, gender identity, transgender status, sex stereotypes, or sex characteristics” aligns with President Biden’s Executive Orders on racial equity and underserved communities, implementing the landmark Bostock ruling, and advancing gender equity and equality. It would also make a critical difference in the lives of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, non-binary, queer, gender non-conforming, and intersex (LGBTQ+) young people, who are facing extraordinary challenges from the combined impacts of the Covid-19 pandemic, structural racism, and state legislation that attempts to undermine their full access to education.

Finally, I ask that the Department restore and strengthen protections for survivors of sexual harassment and violence by rescinding rules put forth by the former Secretary of Education that conflict with the terms and purposes of the Title IX statute and codifying fair and appropriate provisions for the prevention and response to sexual harassment and violence.

Sincerely,
Dr. mark glasser