Title IX does not need to be improved. It has been fine the way it is for the last 49 years, and it will be fine for the next 49 years as well.

The intent of Title IX is to prevent exclusion from participation in activities, prevent being denied benefits, and prevent being discriminated against on the basis of sex.

Now the President and other radical liberals want to change the definition of "sex" to include sexual orientation and gender identity, which is in no way what Title IX was intended for. If this change moves forward, it will for all intents and purposes destroy womens sports. It will allow confused males who think they are females and are bigger, stronger, and faster than females to take over the record books and steal roster spots and scholarships from legitimate biological female athletes.

This proposal is a total travesty and should be halted immediately. Even transgender and former Olympian Caitlyn (Bruce) Jenner says, "I oppose biological boys who are trans competing in girls' sports in schools. It just isn't fair. We have to protect girls' sports in our schools."

In addition, religious schools and other organizations that teach that males are males and females are females should still be protected by the First Amendment. They should not be forced to abandon their views because the government wants to pander to a tiny group of individuals who want to force everyone to celebrate their non-scientific viewpoint. We all learned in high school Biology that if you have 2 X chromosomes you are a girl and if you have an X chromosome and a Y chromosome you are a boy. No amount of hoping, wishing, or legislating is ever going to change that.
