Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Toni Celum (b)(6)

From: hardin1949@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jimmy Hardin (b)(6)

From: lonnie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lonnie Bontrager (b)(6)

From: burnsjm1988@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:16:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Thank you! Mr. & Mrs. Jeff Burns (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Naturegirl_13@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:16:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Parents are the primary judges of our children's education; we send our children to school to learn and many parents including myself DO NOT consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory or any sexual orientation theories. Doing so without our consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. THIS IS VERY IMPORTANT. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately because their DNA make them different in strength and ability. NOTHING CHANGES THE DNA OF A MAN INTO A WOMAN. If a third class of athletes needs to be added, that would at least offer and protect the fairness and safety of women athletes. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Tammy Burke (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: bekcycwilkins@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:53:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the current administration. EDUCATION IS A STATE AND LOCAL MATTER, protected by law from FEDERAL incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn the three R's and do not consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate! Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Rebecca Wilkins (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Susanglo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:46:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when serious, dangerous ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there should be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Since parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education, they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent, violates public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be directed back to their parents for guidance so their parents can address the situation according to their beliefs. Since Title IX protections for girls' sports are important, protections must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women's and girls' rights to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your decision and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Susan Glover (b)(6)

From: tlladd2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:49:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an infringement on the role of parents and should not be determined by the government. All citizens should have equal rights but schools should not be proactive in propagating alternative lifestyles. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Linda Ladd (b)(6)

From: mike.brady.usa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing - my comments

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please consider my opinion of the public school situation. I am writing to you about the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Mike Brady (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: cbriggs6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:56:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please consider this letter. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Deborah A Briggs (b)(6)

From: mv@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:39:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing: Written Comment

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, The U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) has announced a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). You need to be aware of some very important considerations as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. You should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you might ultimately decide to pursue. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women's and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Marcia J Vasquez (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Margarethonore@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:23:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing, Written Comment

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I beg of you to protect the girls and young women of this nation whom Title IX was DESIGNED to protect! I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you, and God Bless the USA as the USA honors God's design for gender and sexuality! His will is clearly written in our genes. Mary Margaret Elizabeth Honoré of the Angel of the Lord, Er.P.V.

(b)(6)

From: weathergirl1485@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:19:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing, written comment

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Respectfully, please evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. I am a strong believer that education policy be enacted from the county level up, and only overseen federally when there is a gross inequality. I do support equality and protection for transgender children, and want them to be treated with respect, dignity, and given equal opportunities at school. However, I also wish to respect fairness in girl's sports, and also the feelings of other children who are not transgender. At this time, I urge you to please consider the rights of girl athletes. Whether they like it or not, some transgender athletes, especially males who wish to be females, are given strength from their hormones. Their muscles develop like a man's, and they are given the strength of a man. The majority of women athletes do not have that same advantage, and school sports need to be fair or it undermines the intent of sports in general. Also, a transgender child who wishes to be male will never be given equal oppprtunity in men's sports because of the way their bodies develop. In short, a lot of thought needs to go into this. I wish you to please consider policies that are fair for both sides of this issue for everyone, to not make this a general political stance. I am beyond tired of the fighting and factions of the political parties, and hope the Biden administration can finally provide the unity to the American nation by thoughtfully and respectfully invoking policy that reaches across the isle and considers the concerns of all. By creating an opportunity for the public to voice their opinions, I am hopeful that politics are beginning to go back to respect and consideration. Also, please consider parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family situations dictate. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Respectfully, Mrs. Elizabeth Weissinger (b)(6)

From: breit_eyes@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: The Public Hearing on Title IX

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, This email was thoroughly read and approved by me since it communicates most precisely what the issues are, please do'nt disregard because of the format! I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Bernadette Breitingner (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: pykefam@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Janice Pyke (b)(6)

From: kematkinson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kem Atkinson (b)(6)

From: sharonlmchone@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Girls and boys mature at different levels and strength. This will not only be unfair to girls competitions but also throwing boys into sports designed for girls will take away girls desires to even compete! This is so wrong in so many ways!! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Sharon Mchone (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: mjanejenkins@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jane Jenkins (b)(6)

From: alan_spindler@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:42:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alan Spindler (b)(6)

From: bswift2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:42:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Glenn Swift (b)(6)

From: dollfam4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:42:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christine Dolleman (b)(6)

From: smendez004@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:30:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sam Mendez (b)(6)

From: tinaroseyuli@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:30:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tinarose Yuli (b)(6)

From: alyndaker@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:30:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX): Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Women have faught hard for the right to participate in athletics. This right should be protected. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you do what is best for the girls in public schools as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Joshua Lyndaker (b)(6)

From: alice.arraez@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:30:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, RE: U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Important Considerations: 1. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law. Wisdom says to evaluate your legal ability to undertake anything you pursue. Making rules on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Forcing ideologies on parents and students from a federal level is intrusive. Politics has no place in K-12 education. 2. Please give consideration to parental rights, if you decide to move forward. Parents hold the primary responsibility of their children's education. Children are sent to school to learn. Parents may not consent to controversial topics. That will open ALOT of phone calls for school administration to handle and teachers will have some parents yelling about this. Teaching Queer Theory and such, without parental consent, is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance. Parents must address that child's need as their family beliefs guide them. 3. As a former basketball captain and I am female, Title IX protections for girls' sports are so important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females must compete separately or it would not be fair, there is additional risk of physical injury and of course, privacy! Transgender athletes can still compete in sports if you protect women and girls' right to sports. They can play sports with their same biological sex. Thank you for your time. Please ponder these thoughts and suggestions and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you, again! Mrs. Alice Arraez (b)(6)

From: Itlcat60@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:30:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Beauchene (b)(6)

From: emcastilla@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:30:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Emily Castilla (b)(6)

From: madickerson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:30:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. There ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Also, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Respectfully, Mrs. Martha Dickerson (b)(6)

From: barton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:18:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Rick Barton (b)(6)

From: awwitt66@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:18:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. A Wayne Witt (b)(6)

From: awwitt66@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:07:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. A Wsyne Wayne Witt (b)(6)

From: bradleyruhmann@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:07:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Brad Ruhmann (b)(6)

From: wfhornbuckle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:07:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, You can see all the politically correct rhetoric below which may be the only language you speak and understand. If so, how sad for you. We don't live in a politically correct Country. There is no such beast. The present Executive Branch leader lives in a fairy tale world and wants to impose a fairy tale world on us. Equality before the law is just that, but it does not mean that it can be applied to everything and in every situation. Taking the stance that a male and female are the same is not equality before the law. If you are ignorant enough to try to make everything equal, then you will fail. Why do you think they have weight classes in boxing and wrestling? Fairness over equality because experience and wisdom says it is the right way to offer fair competition. We are talking about children and not robots where some robots are painted pink and some are painted blue. Males and females are not created equally in physical, mental and emotional attributes. If you are so concerned about equality then abolish the Special Olympics and other similar organizations. Make mentally and physically challenged athletes compete against the unchallenged, so they can be equal. That is not equal is it? Allowing males to compete against females in school sports is wrong. I know it is wrong and you know it is wrong. First, you have to be honest. If you cannot, then get out. You need to decide what is right and best for the vast majority of male and female school students/athletes. Don't think that this is more complex than it is. Simple works the best for this situation. You will never be God. Please settle for being a decent human being and doing what you know is right. It would be such a surprise in this political climate. (It might even catch on.) Thank you for your time. William F.Hornbuckle ps: (b)(6) needs to be added to my street address below. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review

Title IX. Thank you! Mr. William F Hornbuckle

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: anita.rosa89@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:07:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Hannah Blue (b)(6)

From: j6hartman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:07:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Hartman (b)(6)

From: Cherylstuvstad@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:57:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cheryl Stuvstad (b)(6)

From: carolyninezjones@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:57:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am delighted to have the opportunity to share with you my thoughts as you gather information from the public for the purpose of improving enforcement of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Given that I am a former educator, I could be quite extensive in my comments. I will, instead, be brief: 1) Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. 2) Parents are legally and morally responsible for the wellbeing of their children. As such, they are also the primary arbiters of their children's education. America's educational level has fallen embarrassingly low because of the amounts of time spent on indoctrination vs education. Parents send their children to school to LEARN, not to have controversial subject matter taught to or practiced on their children without their consent. Thank you for the opportunity to share my concerns and my views. Sincerely, Carolyn I. Jones

(b)(6)

From: msantiago201@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:57:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michele Santiago (b)(6)

From: dianebean6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:46:45 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diane Bean (b)(6)

From: dlemau77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:46:45 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbie Lemau (b)(6)

From: chamlin0219@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:46:45 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carol Hamlin (b)(6)

From: jbrinkman053@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:34:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. It would be boring to see a dragster race against a Model T Ford. Make the competition based on similar basics. I, as a male, wouldn't want a female daughter of mine in the same shower room as a male who is feeling like a female - not safe. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Jim Brinkman (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: lorrjane@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:34:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lorraine Dressel (b)(6)

From: dsp13119@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:34:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daryl Spilde (b)(6)

From: wjsiefert@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:34:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William Siefert (b)(6)

From: Tree@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:34:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Theresa Strepek (b)(6)

From: frauhigerm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:34:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Maura Frauhiger [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Myates0523@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:34:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mark Yates (b)(6)

From: ladenberger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:34:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). The whole purpose of Title IX in education was to protect the rights of women in schools. Women. Not men who would like to be women. Not men who think that they are women. Not men who identify as women. Not men who can't compete as men, so they compete on women's teams as a woman. Women: female homo sapiens. It makes one wonder: if through the use of hormones and surgery a man can find legal protection in calling himself a woman, why can't the same man, through the use of cosmetic surgery alter his face to look like Joe Biden and be legally protected to be the President of the United States? Because wanting to be someone and being that someone are NOT the same thing! Thank you! Mr. Glenn

Ladenberger (b)(6)

From: Suelynnwilliams56@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:34:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Passero (b)(6)

From: l.mcg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:24:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lisa McGinness (b)(6)

From: paulginnys@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:24:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level in I B. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Paul Schneider (b)(6)

From: prayingnana@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:24:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Josephine Casella (b)(6)

From: jacksonanna2010@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:24:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Jackson (b)(6)

From: brownherrin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:24:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Jennifer Herrin (b)(6)

From: victory1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:24:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Laura Klob (b)(6)

From: Thebroad2000@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:24:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Denise Wilson (b)(6)

From: Dmccathran02@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:24:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Debbie McCathran (b)(6)

From: beckybloom23@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:13:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rebecca Bloom (b)(6)

From: agrun627@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:13:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Alfred R Grunwell (b)(6)

From: Moorekristie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:01:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kristie Moore (b)(6)

From: luke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:01:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Our schools are no longer institutions promoting critical thinking and students freedom to come to their own conclusions and decisions/beliefs, but centers of indoctrination. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Luke Wielgot (b)(6)

From: wandasteen515@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:01:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wanda Steen (b)(6)

From: kauffman.nicole@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:01:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you about the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As a female, who participated in High School athletics, particularly cross country running and track, I valued the ability to compete alongside male athletes but against female athletes. The slowest male on our team was faster than the fastest female. Allowing biological males, who were designed with bigger frames and higher testosterone levels, to compete against females is unfair as they are naturally bigger, stronger and faster on the whole. There is no way to confirm that a person is truly transgender which leaves the door wide open for abuse of young girls in locker rooms. Also, the great focus on transgenderism in education is very confusing to children. This is not a topic for the government to address or the educational system to teach about. The fact that parents, who know their children best, are being pushed further and further away from their children and children are being allowed to make life altering decisions at earlier and earlier ages without parental consent is frightening. For the mental and physical health of children to be optimized it is critical that Title IX protect the separation of young men and women. I hope you keep these thoughts in mind as review Title IX. Thank you! Nicole Kauffman (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: hlknehans@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:01:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. If you choose to continue to proceed, there should be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Parents are given the responsibility to care for their children and raise them in the way they see fit. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you very much for your consideration! Hannah Knehans (b)(6)

From: maryannschowalter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:50:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary ann Schowalter (b)(6)

From: NoLeftTurnCT@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:50:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Weber (b)(6)

From: ehern04@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:50:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Edwin Hernandez (b)(6)

From: ramelectraserv@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:39:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ramon Croes (b)(6)

From: coachcraig16@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:39:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Craig (b)(6)

From: beal.jana4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:39:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jana Beal (b)(6)

From: jnmrlrly@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:39:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jonathan Riley (b)(6)

From: terry1989@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:29:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Terry Hanson (b)(6)

From: tacsfs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:29:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, This is Terrance Castor MD writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I am now retired after 46 years practicing in the field of Internal Medicine. I am also the father of 4 children and grandfather of 9 children all under (b) 10 of the 13 are girls! I am very concerned about the current threat to exposure of young girls to having to compete with physically stronger biologic male athletes and share locker facilities. Emotionally this can be traumatizing as well as physically increasing risk of injury. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Dr. Terrance Alan Castor , M.D. (b)(6)

From: mlz-peng@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:29:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Marvin Zochert (b)(6)

From: ampogge@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:29:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anne M Pogge (b)(6)

From: jancycle15@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:17:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janice Becker (b)(6)

From: ekbeec@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:17:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

E.K. Brown (b)(6)

From: maddiemae4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:17:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cheryl McCoy (b)(6)

From: futbolmadre@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:17:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Ann Born (b)(6)

From: phyllisbuchholz4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:17:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Phyllis Buchholz (b)(6)

From: acerrato_23@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:06:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ana Cerrato (b)(6)

From: ritzys65@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:06:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Loren Ritz (b)(6)

From: ddisalvo1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:06:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Diane Disalvo (b)(6)

From: amyhiga12@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:56:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you realize how important it is to recognize real differences and protect the rights of females. Thank you! Amy Higa (b)(6)

From: tolsontara@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:56:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tara Tolson (b)(6)

From: sheridanett60@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:45:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Please work to PROTECT girls in the public and private schools. Keep the boys and men out of the girls locker rooms and out of girls sports. If gender confused boys and men need to play sports, give them their own leagues and their own locker rooms. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Sherida Nett (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: vickieandrodney@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:45:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Vickie Castleberry (b)(6)

From: sullyginger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:45:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Bernie Sullivan (b)(6)

From: maker322@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:45:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

M. Aker [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: LACORTE.FAMILY@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:45:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please do not ignore me. I am a concerned parent and grandparent. I am opposed to the Department of Education mandating or forcing gender identity or sexual orientation curriculum or material in our public schools. I am also opposed to changes to girls sports programs allowing transgender persons to play on girls teams. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Kathy A LaCorte (b)(6)

From: katisup2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:33:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Politics have no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Katrina Harris (b)(6)

From: ststahle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:33:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Stahle (b)(6)

From: skayshade5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:33:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Shade (b)(6)

From: judys1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:33:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Regis Judy Jr. (b)(6)

From: Bgdaylily@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:33:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Brenda Garrett (b)(6)

From: rjoilman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:22:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Johnston (b)(6)

From: mybbboys2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:22:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rhoda Yushinski (b)(6)

From: johnsonjerrycindy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:22:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jerry Johnson (b)(6)

From: lavonneru@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:22:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. LaVonne Underwood (b)(6)

From: lindsensley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:22:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linds Ensley (b)(6)

From: Cotkmeh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:11:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Martha Helmreich (b)(6)

From: angie.batluck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:11:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Angela Batluck (b)(6)

From: mhanket@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:11:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carole Hanket (b)(6)

From: Couvi2064@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:11:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Denise Wallace (b)(6)

From: becca54white@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:11:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Local school boards and communities should make these decisions. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I have granddaughters and want them treated fairly and with the dignity and respect they deserve as they grow up. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rebecca J. White (b)(6)

From: sandy1sherman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:00:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joseph Sherman (b)(6)

From: ricklust@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:00:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Rick Lust (b)(6)

From: pannfogle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:00:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. These policies do not follow "the science". I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Patricia Fogle (b)(6)

From: rnieni@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:00:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rachel Nienhouse (b)(6)

From: revelatr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:00:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Also, please do not allow gender identity claims to subvert the rights of girls and women to privacy and protection from predators. Do not abrogate the rights of the many to satisfy the desires of a few. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Lawrence C Kells (b)(6)

From: Potterdr1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Potter (b)(6)

From: pmcross@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Penny Cross (b)(6)

From: Ischlicht@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ronald Schlicht (b)(6)

From: mrofoli@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Rofoli (b)(6)

From: CWoods9391@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Carol Woods (b)(6) P.S. To allow transgender males to compete against women is like allowing a special group to use power-enhancing drugs in competition. That isn't allowed and this shouldn't be either.

From: leahsavage13@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Leah Savage (b)(6)

From: progunjoe@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jose Hernandez (b)(6)

From: letapereira@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Leta Pereira (b)(6)

From: ejkenyon6315@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ellie Kenyon [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: revjw3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:39:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor John Talcott (b)(6)

From: cragge3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:39:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christy Ragge (b)(6)

From: spellman2000@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:39:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Do not take away the rights that were given to girls by Title IX. Males already have the right to be on boys teams, they do not need to overpower girls and take their opportunities. Stand up for what is right. Girls teams - XX only, boys teams XY only. Thank you! Ms. Terry Spellman (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Hbjncohen1996@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:29:06 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Cohen (b)(6)

From: mochaprew@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:29:06 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Laura Prewett (b)(6)

From: tnllewis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:29:06 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Terence Lewis (b)(6)

From: hanich@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:16:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Daniel Hanich (b)(6)

From: jwjr23@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:06:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbie Wilks (b)(6)

From: cathyhoover@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:06:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. DNA does not change in a person EVER. No surgery can do that. No drugs can do that. Gender according to DNA should be the only consideration. I am a retired public school teacher. One of my areas of certification is physical education. I also played softball, volleyball and basketball in college. NEVER would I have done so if I were playing with those with male DNA. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Catherine Hoover (b)(6)

From: Isaiah527bibi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:55:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maria Ocon (b)(6)

From: klassicklocks1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:55:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I have granddaughters who actively participate in sports which are becoming impossible for them to continue in because "boys" who have decided to self-identify as "girls" now dominate them. This is unfair to them and all females. Biologically boys are the "stronger" sex and this is NOT something one's deciding to be female will change. If you follow the science there are TWO sexes - XX and XY. Female and Male. My chromosomes will forever be XY no matter what sex I claim to be! I am therefore writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Charles Dinkel (b)(6)

From: aafontenot@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:55:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Amy Fontenot (b)(6)

From: pathill125@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:55:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Hill (b)(6)

From: zchurchlady@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:55:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cheryl Chavez (b)(6)

From: chalkiebrk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:55:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, understand any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and LOCAL matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has NO place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Next, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Finally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Sharon Burk (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Kenealycaroline8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:55:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Caroline kenealy (b)(6)

From: tdrichardevans@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:55:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Evans (b)(6)

From: 2m.moss@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:55:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lillian Moss (b)(6)

From: Kenealycaroline8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:55:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Caroline kenealy (b)(6)

From: esuk_family@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:43:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Andrea Esuk [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: davinawonderling@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:43:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Davina Wonderling (b)(6)

From: twowheelers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:43:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Raymond Wheeler (b)(6)

From: larrylund2020@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:43:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Larry Lund (b)(6)

From: philwoch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:32:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. This is not bigotry. The differences between male and female in humans and other mammals goes down to the cellular and molecular levels. While much of the difference, such as in cellular, bone, and brain structure, is largely controlled by hormones, much of it in each area is genetic. Many people who have gone through such transitioning have committed suicide-not just because of society's hostility (this happens even in countries where such people are affirmed and tolerated), but because of deep instincts that tell them that they are or should be the sex they were born in. Many "detransition;" many others have not yet because they don't want to go through another such procedure. To subject children to such fates should be unconscionable. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Phillip Wochner (b)(6)

From: sanilala@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:32:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an ABUSE OF POWER by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. PLEASE ALLOW PARENTS AND LOCAL SCHOOLS to decide how to best protect ALL students from social engineering. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Again, SOCIAL ENGINEERING HAS NO PLACE IN ANY OF OUR EDUCATION SYSTEMS. Stick to academics, such as "reading, writing, arithmetic", geography, and science courses like chemistry to help our students better compete on a world level, not brainwashing garbage. It's time DOE starts to actually improve the academic standing of students in the United States of America. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. If that's too complicated for you, just use X ONLY OR Y CHROMOSOMES to determine which group students belong to. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Sandra Pike (b)

(b)(6)

From: dkministries1977@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:32:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Donald King (b)(6)

From: stephanieneff@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:32:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stephanie Neff [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: rosemarie.williams@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:32:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rosemarie Williams (b)(6)

From: svatter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:32:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Scott Vatter (b)(6)

From: mds112@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:21:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing because there are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. . Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Parental Right: Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. GIRLS sports Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Margaret Stewart (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: kec1165@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:21:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kristy Carlson (b)(6)

From: gary.beth.bich@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:21:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maribeth Bich (b)(6)

From: jawage@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:21:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Janice Gendron (b)(6)

From: dawsonhousehold@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:10:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Suzanne Dawson (b)(6)

From: seedspreadersministry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:10:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. What you are proposing would be no different than if a Republican administration would insist that that all public school students must be baptized and only wear gender appropriate clothing (Like girls can only wear skirts and or dresses to school). While ideology neutral policy is basically impossible, it should a goal that is striven for by federal agencies and departments, because the final say in this process lies with the local school district. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. It may also be a violation of a number of criminal statutes at both the state and federal level. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. It simply permits the "fairer sex" to compete on its own field, as the original purpose of Title IX stated. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Pastor Robert MacClennan (b)(6)

From: D.c.salem@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:10:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Doyle Ratterree (b)(6)

From: RBA1920@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 22:10:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bobbie Ankenbrandt (b)(6)

From: mjinverso@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:59:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Marlene Inverso (b)(6)

From: ppgmorris@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:59:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Patricia Morris (b)(6)

From: mharrington11@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:59:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Harrington (b)(6)

From: Erikasoloj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:59:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Erika Soloj (b)(6)

From: pawpawroro.nola@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:59:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Steven Newman (b)(6)

From: mcshanec@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:59:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Corey Mcshane (b)(6)

From: cvyhonsky@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:59:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Respect parental rights. No biological boys in girl's sports! Thank you! Mrs. Carol Vyhonsky

(b)(6)

From: tacllc34689@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:59:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lynda Cummings (b)(6)

From: plhaf2014@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:59:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Larry Haflich (b)(6)

From: mimifrigon@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:59:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anne Marie Frigon (b)(6)

From: debbykraai@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:48:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Debby Kraai (b)(6)

From: gywhit@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:48:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gerald Whitmarsh (b)(6)

From: marie.v.walton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:48:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marie Walton (b)(6)

From: laurabee78@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:48:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Laura Ensminger (b)(6)

From: kmpalicki@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:48:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kevin Palicki (b)(6)

From: fionvine@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:48:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

J Moore (b)(6)

From: oblan128@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:48:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Olga Blanthorne (b)(6)

From: whall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:48:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Willard Hall (b)(6)

From: jobsfaith@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:48:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbie Brien [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Agastslp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:48:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Andrea Gast (b)(6)

From: Jeancliberman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:48:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jean Liberman (b)(6)

From: richard.chasen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:39:16 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard Chasen (b)(6)

From: snowbunny7212@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:26:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Angela Solem (b)(6)

From: lilleyad351@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:26:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marilyn Lilley (b)(6)

From: harperscourtgym@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:26:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Thank you!

Kip Poindexter (b)(6)

From: jojocopley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:26:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

JoJo Copley (b)(6)

From: renewed77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:26:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Elizabeth Patterson [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: ithompson14@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:16:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Irene Burgess (b)(6)

From: mschoney2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:16:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marybeth Schoenwald (b)(6)

From: Mary.l@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:16:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Landon (b)(6)

From: djpmarconi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:16:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Further more why not have a separate transgender league where trans individuals could compete with each other? I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Dominic Marconi

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: thononego@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:16:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the ostensible purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Accordingly, there are some important considerations that I hope you will be aware of as you conduct your review of Title IX regulations. First, evaluation should be made of any actual legal ability you possess to undertake any of the measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Rulemaking by the Department of Education based on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the federal administration since education is first and foremost, a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. When ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level, legislation becomes a matter of politics, and as such, has no place in K-12 education. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to develop and nurture cognitive and creative intellect and to acquire skills which will prepare them to sustain themselves and their future progeny in our culture. They do not necessarily consent to controversial moral topics such as LGBTQ Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without parental consent is a violation of public trust and of parental rights. It is also an infringement on rights of religious freedom, as it may force parents to allow their children to be subjected to teachings which may constitute a violation of their own personally held beliefs. Children with questions about gender identity and sexuality should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their own family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on objective scientifically supported biological sex, not on subjective gender identity. Biological males and females need to continue to compete separately due to such issues as the equitable balance of physical strengths, risks of physical injury, and violations of personal privacy. Protecting women and girls' rights to competitive sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. It simply levels the playing field for all competitors, ensuring that the most capable from among each biological group will become evident. I hope that you will keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Dana Veach (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: pamandgene@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:16:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Pamela R Trotter (b)(6)

From: tonihedman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:05:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Toni Hedman (b)(6)

From: rmtomso10@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:05:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I believe that school systems should notify parents of all curriculum being taught or indoctrinated to their children, especially if it is politically motivated or not of parents' values. Parents are not being respected or listened to. Remember this; if parents nationwide decided to remove their children from public school then who would teachers teach? Also, in my opinion, biological girls should NOT have to compete in sports against transgender "girls" who are biological boys. Transgender "girls" are unfairly interfering with biological girls' titles, scholarships, rewards, medals, records, morale and more. The girls train much too hard to then be defeated by biological males. Face the truth, taking female hormones does not change a biological male into a female. I believe biological girls should compete against each other, biological males against each other, and transgenders against each other and/or against their biological counterparts. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Mollye Thompson (b)(6)

From: catreichel.cr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:05:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I'm writing because I want to to express my horror to the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights, that your interpretation of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 will ignore and deny the SCIENCE that our sexuality is expressed in virtually every cell of the body. Across cultures, geography, and time, this difference is has been respected. The male's muscle structure is denser, lung capacity greater, and there are brain function differences in left and right brain fluidity to name a few. Generally, overall (though certainly there are individual exceptions) males are larger, stronger with greater stamina physically). Their genitalia is different and must be cared for differently. These facts directly relate to your handling of Title IX in the areas of: * Biological males competing unfairly in female sports * Privacy needs * Education - truth should not be sacrificed in order to cater to ideological fads * Helping people, especially children, deal with their sexual confusion - with very rare exception, biological sex is clear and the greatest service would be to offer quality psychological help rather than dangerous hormones and surgeries, that most eventually regret. Thank you for your consideration. I wish you the best in your efforts to do the right thing in implementing Title IX. Cathy Reichel (b)(6)

From: sonshine-ct@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:05:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. I find it revealing that if a body is found or even just bones are found, forensics can determine sex, age etc. They can even determine if it was a male who took female hormones. If the difference is that basic it is illogical to make life changing edicts that effect masses of people on a few people's "feelings." First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Carol E Thurman (b)(6)

From: janiecsd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:05:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jane Casad [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: h.barbara38@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:53:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Huggins (b)(6)

From: tonihedman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:53:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Toni Hedman (b)(6)

From: Navyblue4u@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:53:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Arlene Pangilinan (b)(6)

From: mary@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:53:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. and Mrs. H. Joseph Preston (b)(6)

From: cheryl1418@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:53:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cheryl Miller (b)(6)

From: sylvia@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:53:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sylvia Shepler (b)(6)

From: katherinecolbert@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:53:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Katherine Colbert (b)(6)

From: cooperwill992@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:43:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. And is also a violation of the spirit of a democratic republic and opposed to the current values of most citizens of this republic. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level and opposed to the current values of most citizens. The values and mores of the few do not override the values of the many in a democratic republic. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. It is not the role of the federal government to be the arbiter of public mores. This is the role of a free people and is meant to be reflected by their elected representatives at the state level. Raw power forced upon the public by special interests, and the abuse of federal power thrust upon the people and their institutions, is in violation of the spirit of a free people and a government that is to reflect their desires and their mores. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. William Cooper Jr. (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Caporicci77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:43:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christopher Caporicci (b)(6)

From: wwmlw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:43:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Warren Weltner (b)(6)

From: pjc1971@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:43:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pamela Cowles (b)(6)

From: sleuen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:43:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cathy Leuenberger (b)(6)

From: Rdsrfr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:43:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cathleen Norton-jackson (b)(6)

From: mary@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:43:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Preston (b)(6)

From: kevinwebermd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:43:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Kevin Weber , MD (b)(6)

From: pcboone@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:43:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Paul J Boone (b)(6)

From: lesterdgabriel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:43:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lester Gabriel (b)(6)

From: jarperk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:31:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judith Perkins (b)(6)

From: ddodson123@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:31:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Deborah Dodson (b)(6)

From: Jcdean1192@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:31:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an absolute abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; I am the primary arbiter of my children's education; we send our children to school to learn and do not consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on our children. Doing so without our consent is a violation of public trust and our parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, never on gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Jennifer Stoops (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: clkrausch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:31:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Carolyn Krausch (b)(6)

From: DebDebcouloors@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:31:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deborah Lobe (b)(6)

From: Lesneff@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:31:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lester Neff (b)(6)

From: pgstephens@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:20:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Gerri Stephens (b)(6)

From: bbkamm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:20:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Kamm (b)(6)

From: bryanscottlord@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:10:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bryan Lord (b)(6)

From: kjweller@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:10:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you about the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I appreciate the opportunity to be heard. First, I want to say that this is the first time I have actually personally submitted any comment like this. Now here is the gist of what I want to say: Regardless of one's belief about the morals of gender identity, it is not the same thing as biological sex, and any attempt to put the two in the same category is not logical. In addition, efforts to add gender identity to Title IX, by equating it with biological sex, are in opposition to the very intent of the act itself; which was to provide female students a level playing field compared with male students. It is a scientific fact that, all else being equal, biological male students have an inherent biological advantage over female students in terms of physical strength and size. If this were not so, there would be no reason to have Title IX, and why then would it even exist? It would then make more sense to remove Title IX entirely. The only possible reason for trying to add gender identity to Title IX is certainly is not one of fairness, because it would increase unfairness to female students; hence it must be a political one, which is no reason at all. Thank you for the opportunity to add my input. I do hope you take it into consideration, and conclude that it makes no sense to make such an illogical change to Title IX, just to appease the the political arm of the LGBTQ movement. Below is comment text was provided by FRCAction, which I kept there, because I wholeheartedly agree with it and I could not improve upon it: There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Not doing so invalidates the whole intent of the Act. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! George Weller (b)(6)

From: ajfox33@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:10:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Fox (b)(6)

From: garyjgriffin0509@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:10:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gary Griffin [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Michaelgarber1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:10:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mike Garber (b)(6)

From: john.e.buckwalter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:10:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Buckwalter (b)(6)

From: anthonytraub67@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 20:10:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Anthony Traub (b)(6)

From: adrianjuneweaver@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:58:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. June Weaver (b)(6)

From: drstephenson6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:58:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Stephenson (b)(6)

From: Dsteven434@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:58:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Steven Davis (b)(6)

From: Kelly.beverage@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:58:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kelly Beverage [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: pasmmc0y1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:47:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Edward McCoy (b)(6)

From: manuelalbert@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:47:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Manuel Albert (b)(6)

From: michelekinnear@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:36:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michele Kinneare (b)(6)

From: flpa4u@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:36:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daniel Kreisman (b)(6)

From: mapeach86@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:36:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Peach (b)(6)

From: twonutsonawing@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:36:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Andy Woodard (b)(6)

From: psbonadonna@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:25:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Your proposals trample on parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Your proposals put the federal government in the place of parents. This is morally repugnant. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. To do anything else is to completely strip away the intentions of Title IX. I strongly urge you to keep these comments in mind as you consider this very important matter. Thank you! Mrs. Penny Bonadonna (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: akuehl99@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:25:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Amy Kuehl (b)(6)

From: toddrjones52@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:25:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Todd Jones , Ret. (b)(6)

From: vhnemann@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:25:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Heidi Niemann (b)(6)

From: pcwmoore@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:25:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paul Moore (b)(6)

From: sandy.rmr1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:25:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sandra Romero (b)(6)

From: mandhaven@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:25:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has NO place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. This is a democracy not a socialist experiment. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. H Aven (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: gayle1050@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:25:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gayle Tego (b)(6)

From: treanna@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:15:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Treanna Smith (b)(6)

From: r1ryder@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:15:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carol Wu (b)(6)

From: Dorothypeckman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:15:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Dorothy J Peckman (b)(6)

From: melsanstar05@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:15:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Melany Mon (b)(6)

From: kingsdtr8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:03:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lori Mayfield (b)(6)

From: gmagrimm3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:03:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jentine Grimm (b)(6)

From: evin.westeren@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:03:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Title IX was a worthy and laudable effort to improve the opportunities afforded to women. Recent Biden administration action via executive orders will destroy all such opportunities for women. Biological males masquerading as women will totally remake the landscape such as to eliminate any hint of women's sports. This flies in the face of all previous attempts to enhance and promote opportunities for women, not to mention the fact that is also flies in the face of any attempts to follow science. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Evin Westernen (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: rmreed1945@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:03:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ronnie Reed (b)(6)

From: mthlc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:03:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, We are responding to efforts of your office to review the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights effort to review and potentially revise the enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Since the initial Title IX, women's sports have blossomed and young women have developed improved images and of their abilities. All this is at risk now with efforts by the current administration and "woke" social justice warriors who do not understand biology. Apart from fetuses that rarely survive, there are only two sexes. Your office needs to follow the science as recommended by the Democratic party and their leaders including the President. As males develop, they gain more strength and muscle mass. This happens early in development and well before a child can reason or gain "feelings" that they are not the sex their chromosomes have produced. Keep in mind that psychologists prior to intimidating pressure, have considered those who are not accepting of their sexual identity as have a psychiatric disorder- i.e. gender dysphoria. That is an individual problem. Title IX should not make it a societal problem. States should be left to handle educational decisions involving sports and frankly the federal government has no constitutional authority to change this except by economic bribes forcing compliance. Try being a leader of the people and keep gender dysphoria and social justice "wokeness" out of the laws you enforce. We have both taught advanced classes at the college level and have been in health care for over 30 years. We thank you for your attention to our thoughts on this important subject. Thank you!

Robert Williams, R.Ph. and Ann Williams Ph.D., P.T. (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: april@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 19:03:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please stop trying to force ideologies on our children that have no place in public schools. What happened to reading, writing and arithmetic? And REAL history, not changed history. This is a dangerous road you are trying to go down. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! April Mauland (b)(6)

From: peg80fic@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:53:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Peg McCabe (b)(6)

From: tbucher@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:53:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Tim Bucher (b)(6)

From: stumpfclan6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:53:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Catherine Stumpf [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jome58@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:53:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Messina (b)(6)

From: gmc8828@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:53:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gordon Caldwell (b)(6)

From: dippmom@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:53:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nancy Lugar [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: algg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:53:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. My children are my responsibility and privilege to raise. The school system should support my efforts not direct them. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Losing these protections for biological girls is a huge set back in women's rights. Please consider, would you want your daughter discriminated against in this way? I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Amanda Seaver (b)(6)

From: ferry1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:53:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ebby Ferry (b)(6)

From: Psthoms8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:53:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Susan Thomsen (b)(6)

From: barbrahm1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:42:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Barbara Brahm (b)(6)

From: redbirds@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:42:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard Nicholson Burgess (b)(6)

From: karren.humphrey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:42:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karren Humphrey (b)(6)

From: cmontee@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:42:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Charles Montee (b)(6)

From: terryofcary@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:42:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Terry McNamara (b)(6)

From: blcjean@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:42:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jean Jacobs [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: noewickham@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:42:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Noelle W [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: edhuston7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:42:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Edward Huston (b)(6)

From: kazoo23464@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:42:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kimberly Holt (b)(6)

From: chdunnuck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:42:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cheryl Newland (b)(6)

From: bcoke50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:31:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bill Cokeley (b)(6)

From: Bonn1125@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:31:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bonnie Ragsdale (b)(6)

From: debbieddsi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:31:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I hope that you will decide to protect parental rights, and protect the rights of children, especially girls. We (our country) have come so far in women's rights, I hope you will not move us backward, in regard to allowing boys to compete against girls in girls' sports, giving LGBTs special rights (over women's/girl's rights), and implementing Title IX. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; I sent my children to school to learn, and do not consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on my children. Doing so without my consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Deborah Ingalls (b)(6)

From: terri.schmidt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:19:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Terri Schmidt (b)(6)

From: r.zundel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:19:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard Zundel (b)(6)

From: pstemmer3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:19:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Phil Stemmer [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jkhowze1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:19:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joe Howze (b)(6)

From: jjjkeenan53@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:19:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jacqueline Keenan (b)(6)

From: harmonix.elizabeth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:19:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Most children have questions about their identity at some time. Schools need to leave this to the parents to take care of. Schools should not be interfering with family matters! Never interfere! Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Rosenberger (b)(6)

From: debraannporter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:08:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debra Porter (b)(6)

From: efenwick35@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:08:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Above all else parental rights should be maintained and not overruled by political agendas. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Esther Fenwick (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: carltonfamily2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 18:08:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbie Carlton (b)(6)

From: dawnhawks00@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:57:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dawn Hawks (b)(6)

From: Marschall.beth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:57:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Elizabeth Marschall (b)(6)

From: gman1007@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:46:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gary Stagg (b)(6)

From: Dhdriggs47@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:46:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Hilda Driggd (b)(6)

From: sevensisters55@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:46:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Fred Sorgenfrei (b)(6)

From: Roy.cross@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Roy Cross (b)(6)

From: deedeedawn5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Dilleen Thomason (b)(6)

From: saharpster@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Shirley Harpster (b)(6)

From: martamcclain@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marta McClain (b)(6)

From: jasherrill2003@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jeff Sherrill (b)(6)

From: gnlto55so@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gordon E Toso (b)(6)

From: ccptot@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Casey Clemmer (b)(6)

From: jasherrill2003@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jeff Sherrill (b)(6)

From: hannah@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Hannah Hicks (b)(6)

From: heckelpf@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Pamela Heckel (b)(6)

From: martamcclain@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James McClain (b)(6)

From: Wsims1573@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Men/boys are always going to be stronger than women/girls! The former will always have the advantage unless they start hormone “therapy” prior to puberty. More importantly, they Will ALWAYS be the gender with which they were born. You can’t change chromosomes God gave them when He formed them in the womb!!! I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education’s Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children’s education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls’ sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls’ right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Wendi Sims (b)(6)

From: domn1945@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:35:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Jan McMahon (b)(6)

From: williamplmr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:24:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

William Palmer (b)(6)

From: herwin2010@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:24:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As to Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX), it is an abuse of power to enforce rules coming from executive orders. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Thank you for serving the people of this nation and not infringing on our freedoms and rights by favoring one group over another. Sincerely, Miss Helen Erwin (b)(6)

From: bobaloo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:24:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert TURrou (b)(6)

From: mbencivenga@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:24:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marian Bencivenga (b)(6)

From: linda.arnold@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:13:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you in response to the U.S. Department of Education's OCR announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I believe there are some very important considerations to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations however I would like to also address some other, what should be considered in my opinion, very disturbing educational matters. I would love to see the DOE spend their time on educational topics that create lifelong strengths that children today have simply lost. Basic math processes regarding budgeting and financial education topics that include saving for retirement, purchasing insurances, automobiles, and homes, using credit wisely...these vital topics are lost on today's graduating young adults! Most of them have no home-ec skills to cook, sew, fix a backed up toilet, or change a filter on their furnace! They can't change a tire, or know how to jump start a car, much less drive one!! Please consider focusing on emphasizing life skills again!! Now regarding Title IX, I believe there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents and their own family Physicians for guidance so that parents can address the situation from a medical perspective! You can't give children medication without their parent and physicians consent. This is so much bigger than that and I believe a huge overstep by the government. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex at birth, not gender identity that children whose opinions and beliefs, likes and dislikes, change direction like the wind! Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX, and educational topics in general! Thank you! Linda L Arnold (b)(6)

From: ndhpraisehim@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:13:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, This letter is in regards to the announcement of a virtual public hearing by the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) to gather information to improve enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I respectfully ask you to consider the following important points of protections of children and parental rights during your review of the Title IX regulations. 1. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Therefore rules made by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation would be an unlawful abuse of power by the Biden administration. Politics have NO place in K-12 education and should never be forced on parents and students from the federal level. Please carefully consider what legal ability you have before pursuing any course of action. 2. Parents send their children to school to learn. They should be the ultimate authority over the education their children have. Parents should not be forced by the federal government to have controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without parental consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity need to be referred back to their parents for guidance so that their parents can address the situation as to their family's beliefs. 3. Title IX protections for women's and girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Transgender athletes can compete in sports on teams based on their biological sex. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of common sense, fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. May these points guide your actions as you review Title IX. Sincerely, N. Broadhurst (b)(6)

From: nixon41589@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:13:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deborah Nixon [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: reriggins@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:13:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rebecca Riggins (b)(6)

From: Dcrp2048@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:13:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kailea Humphreys (b)(6)

From: arkangelztreasurez@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:13:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Annie Karns (b)(6)

From: ddelwood@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:13:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Deborah Elwood (b)(6)

From: nacknack717@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:02:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Audrey Nack (b)(6)

From: deepuntodeep@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:02:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Margaret Dean (b)(6)

From: mjroggenkamp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:02:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like gender identity and sexual orientation being taught to their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Miss Marilyn Roggenkamp

(b)(6)

From: tc2_currevents@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:02:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anthony Cicirello (b)(6)

From: Kimsham5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:02:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

K Shamblyn (b)(6)

From: masomz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:02:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Laurie Somes (b)(6)

From: maguire.ann06@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 17:02:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ann Maguire (b)(6)

From: betty.wortham@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:51:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Betty Wortham (b)(6)

From: acyg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:51:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being practiced on their children. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop biological male athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Kathy Cyganiewicz (b)(6)

From: dee@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:51:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dee Knapp (b)(6)

From: ginnyjoy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:51:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of natural strength, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please protect my granddaughter and other girls who just want a safe and fair chance. Thank you! Ms. Virginia Hedberg (b)(6)

From: fmjgraham@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:51:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Frank Graham (b)(6)

From: ppredeck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:51:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paul Predecki (b)(6)

From: tim_durrell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:41:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Tim Durrell (b)(6)

From: kathyjohnston42@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:41:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. As a former Pediatric Nurse Practitioner, there are major muscle, strength, bone and joint differences in the bodies of biological males and biological females. They should not be competing against each other. Girls are being seriously injured physically, and have lost opportunities for college sports scholarships in states that have allowed such participation. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Katherine E Johnston (b)(6)

From: orofinokaren37@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:41:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Orofino (b)(6)

From: swedel109@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:41:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Sandra Wedel (b)(6)

From: rsjsm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:41:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Rod Moore (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: jimbuchanan99@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:41:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janice Buchanan (b)(6)

From: okhlsimps@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:41:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. With this in mind, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Whatever rules the Department of Education puts on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parental rights are of utmost importance so, there ought to be extensive consideration given to them if you intend to proceed. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. The government should not decide what social issues children are taught. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Laurie Simpson (b)(6)

From: howellrmh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:41:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William Howell (b)(6)

From: kevindmitchell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:29:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Valerie Mitchell (b)(6)

From: psalty1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:29:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend David A Williams (b)(6)

From: Sherelli@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:29:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sheri Elliott (b)(6)

From: Glenngawrys@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:29:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Glenn Gawrys (b)(6)

From: baycityreynolds@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:29:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Leonard Reynolds (b)(6)

From: sjordan7878@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:29:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Scott Jordan (b)(6)

From: jdracom@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:29:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I write to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of public meeting (virtua) for the gathering of information on improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Following are the points I find considerably important: 1. What legal ability do you have to pursue any measures you are considering? 2. It is an abuse of power to force ideologies on parents and students from a federal level. Parental rights must be upheld, as they are the primary authority over their children's education. The purpose of "Public Education" is to teach empirical FACTS and basic life skills in K-12 education – NOT political ideologies except to present them equally for the application of critical thinking perhaps in high school, and NEVER as established facts. The rights of parents alone to consent to any teaching whatsoever must be protected! Their right and duty to direct the formation of their children in all areas is guaranteed in our Constitution. 3. Children develop from conception through birth as one gender or another. The accompanying hormones consistently develop along these lines naturally. Interference in their natural development is not only dangerous physically and psychologically, but unfair in competition with those competing according to their natural state. Besides that, it is morally offensive to some faith-based groups whose religious freedom is also guaranteed in our Constitution. Please consider seriously these points as you continue to review Title IX. Thank you! Jane Ramseyer (b)(6)

From: Angl274@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:29:46 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, The statement following was written for me. I have reviewed it and agree completely. The final paragraph is mine. These can be so cold and unfeeling, so I wanted to share my heart. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. (My heart) This movement of LGBT...etc. (Especially the Transgender movement.) Is based on feelings and emotions. Feelings and emotions do nothing to change biology. If our entire government from the founding of The United States of America had been only fueled by feelings and emotions in their decision making then I dare say America would have destroyed itself years ago. The government in this country was set up according to the foundations, values, and morals of God in His word. Even non-believers at that time said so. The Founding Fathers of this country warned that if America were to ever turn from these foundations, values, and morals that She, our great country, would not survive. We must base our decisions upon fact and science, not fantastical emotions even if that means facing down the giant this movement has become. I ask you to stand up and speak out for the truth through your actions. Our country needs your help. God bless you and your loved ones. I know your job is not an easy one, but if it be any comfort at all know you have my prayers. Thank you! Trisha Dunn (b)(6)

From: colleen.buchholz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:18:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Colleen Buchholz (b)(6)

From: Amydavis42420@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:18:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Amy Davis (b)(6)

From: rnovia@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:18:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard Novia (b)(6)

From: ashley.abplanalp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:18:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ashley Abplanalp (b)(6)

From: lslnye@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:18:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Leslie Nye (b)(6)

From: auments2019@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:18:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Quit messing with the protections that Title IX offers to females. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Stephen Aument (b)(6)

From: chopan1211@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:18:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Louise Roudebush (b)(6)

From: chris@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:18:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Christopher Myer (b)(6)

From: pastormike@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:18:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Michael Fulmer (b)(6)

From: djlamb396@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:18:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Dolores Lamb (b)(6)

From: ken.pittman.001@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:07:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Title IX, and any consideration of gender equality, should be based on sex at birth. There must be a foundation of truth --not a socially-defined standard set by those in power. That is not American!! Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Allowing transgender boys to compete with girls is similar to condoning bullying--only the Democrats are working to sanction the bullying!! NOT ACCEPTABLE!! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ken Pittman (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: purpleoverthecoast@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:07:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judy Hansen (b)(6)

From: gopher_heaven@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:07:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael M Reichenbach (b)(6)

From: hjfairfield@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:07:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Holly Fairfield (b)(6)

From: msmiller5007@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:07:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Miller (b)(6)

From: milligan44@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:07:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. David Milligan (b)(6)

From: appletimes@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:07:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Cloutier (b)(6)

From: bedann@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:07:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Weeber (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: winfam@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:07:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). These are some thoughts I have about the Title IX regulations. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Any rules you make from the federal level are unnecessary. Let the local people do their jobs and pursue the policies best for their children. Parents are the people who love their children the most. Their input is extremely important in their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Overruling parental rights does a disservice to both the parents and their children. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. I'd like to emphasize this: Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Honoring the progress that has been made in equality for women dictates that they not lose the opportunity to play sports against only biological women. I appreciate this opportunity to give my input on this critical issue about Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Nancy Winniford (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: alidajb211@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:07:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Canceling IX wipes out much of the progress for girls and women sports as well as protections from abuse and freedom from bullying. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Alida Blauwkamp (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: s_schable@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 16:07:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Scott Schable (b)(6)

From: ruthimcc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:56:52 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ruth Mccarley (b)(6)

From: amieejwright@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:56:52 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amiee Wright (b)(6)

From: jimches@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:45:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I write to you to share my thoughts as you gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). First, you should evaluate the legal ability you have to undertake any measures you may ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation, I believe most Americans believe, is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in education, period. Radical ideologies must not be forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you proceed, there must be almost exclusive consideration given to parental rights since parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education. Parents send their children to school to learn and most do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to, or practiced on, their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity, a very radical and minimally held belief. Most rational people believe that males and females must compete separately due to issues of human biology, fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports individually or on teams that align either with their biological or altered gender. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your deliberations and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! James Ches [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: megahdbiker@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:45:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael Jordan (b)(6)

From: sawessel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:45:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Sherry Wessel (b)(6)

From: dhendrick@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:45:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Scott Ferguson (b)(6)

From: ajclancy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:45:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Angela Mitchell (b)(6)

From: chucktmcc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:45:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Charles McCarley (b)(6)

From: jesuszlord23@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:45:34 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tommie Medina (b)(6)

From: fortunebill.mencke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:34:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bill Mencke (b)(6)

From: mnzfair@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:34:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Zoie Fair (b)(6)

From: osu84rrm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:34:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eric Johnson (b)(6)

From: cindyind2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:34:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cynthia Lindstedt (b)(6)

From: c.mccauley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:34:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Mccauley (b)(6)

From: jonna.sherwood@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:34:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jonna Woodward (b)(6)

From: dfshirvis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:34:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Shirvis (b)(6)

From: melanie.allenaa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:34:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Melanie Allen (b)(6)

From: ryskampcindy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:24:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cynthia Ryskamp (b)(6)

From: nlcumbly@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:24:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nancy Crumbly (b)(6)

From: mkolnsberg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:24:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you must evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on birth / biological sex, not "gender identity". Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mark Kolnsberg (b)(6)

From: LJGorski219@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:24:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Lawrence Gorski (b)(6)

From: czburchett@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:24:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Charles Burchett (b)(6)

From: christine.beck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:24:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christine Beck (b)(6)

From: marc.avallone@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:24:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marc Avallone (b)(6)

From: swedish2day@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:24:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Shelley Spanogle (b)(6)

From: utterbackhenry4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:24:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wynona Utterback (b)(6)

From: icassociates7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:24:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Irwin Dorsey (b)(6)

From: Jimbonwill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:12:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Williams (b)(6)

From: litmajors@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:12:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Angel Hampton (b)(6)

From: brook@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:12:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dale and Debra Rosebrook (b)(6)

From: rajs1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:12:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please consider my concerns for education. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Richard Jackson (b)(6)

From: pressingon13@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:12:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please consider the findings and conclusions that other countries have published concerning the long term consequences of pushing children and teens in these directions with life-long detriment to their health and well-being. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ron Tipton (b)(6)

From: babbsbrian765@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:12:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Brian Babbs (b)(6)

From: annienanac@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:12:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Carol Ann Selle (b)(6)

From: glparker56@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:12:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gale Parker (b)(6)

From: deed@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:12:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Deedrick (b)(6)

From: gregtery@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:12:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gregory Welsh (b)(6)

From: cverplancke77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:01:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carrie Verplancke (b)(6)

From: msladylibertywdc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:01:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Laura D Mackey (b)(6)

From: caperkins55@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:01:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please make the best choices for our children and all future children as you consider the following. We need you to stand for them and to protect them. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Carey Perkins (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: kathleena.morrow@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:01:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathleen Morrow (b)(6)

From: d.poscich@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:01:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). If girls athletic competitions are to continue, which is the purpose of Title IX, then boys who say they are girls must not be allowed to participate in these competitions. Boys who say they are girls have physical attributes, such as muscle and lung capacity, that give them an advantage in athletic competitions over girls who say they are girls. These physical attributes do not change when a boy says he is a girl, even after hormone treatments and surgery. If boys who say they are girls are allowed to compete in girl's athletics, girl's athletics will become competitions between boys who say they are girls, and girls who say they are girls will be left out, negating the purpose of Title IX. Let boys who say they are girls participate in athletic competitions with those who have the same physical attributes as they do - boys who say they are boys. Thank you! Mr. David Poscich (b)(6)

From: rbarnett725@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:01:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ron Barnett (b)(6)

From: Aebat82325@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:01:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marsha Moore (b)(6)

From: bunajane@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 15:01:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Buna Sorrell [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: daleburch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First and foremost, I disagree that it is a "civil right" to force women to accept males as "equal" competitors in the area of sports. While academically there are no perceivable differences, why would our government attempt to deceive us by ignoring the physical differences? It appears to me that these measures ignore and even attempt to refute and erase logic and common sense considering the timeless differences built-in and recognized by thousands of generations of animal life throughout history. Regardless of the origin, purpose and progress of humans including the present, it is undeniable that the structural and chemical make-ups of humans follow the ageless physical and emotional strictures of the basic composition. The hormonal balances, the physical structure (forensic scientists can determine the gender of a skeleton by examining the hip and pelvic area), Since I hate being led by templates, I am including the portions of the template that are just copied from one letter to another at the bottom, but I DO agree with the premise that the Federal government continues to over-reach in all areas and especially in the education and development of children. I advocate that the parents should be the first and strongest consideration in the education and development of their children, with local governments who are accountable directly to the community voters (without the heavy-handed Federal government) responsible for the information that the children receive. If parents are to be held accountable for the well-being and actions of their children, but are taught information through usurped power from the Federal and State governments, then who is rightly to be held responsible for shaping the minds and hearts of the children? I recognize that there may be some flaws in this approach, however the flaws in the present approach are much more troublesome and contribute to, in my experience, a series of conflicts wherein people with certain agendas contribute more and more time and money to elected and educational officials in order to insert their points of view and to create an imbalance in the relative importance of what the children learn. In Title IX specifically, teaching children that there is no difference between male and female in bodily structure or overall strength due to the differences in structure is a lie. Wishing it to be true doesn't make it true, no matter how hard one wishes. Let's teach our children the truth, and revel in it. Moreover, the responsibility of teaching our children should primarily be on a local level, beginning with the parents and their values, continuing with and through the local community through elected officials. Unfortunately, the teacher's union has lobbied Congress, Federal and local officials for extra funding and expanded subjects which counter the preferences and rights of the family in the name of a "better and more complete education", which has been swallowed hook, line, and sinker without considering the long-term effects on the children or society as a whole. Federal funding and interference with this process should not be forced or tolerated, but rather challenged and rejected at every step. Each Federal official should consider him or herself as a fiduciary, representing the best interests of the people, not just certain persons. In this vane, I urge you to consider the "little guy", the mom/dad/child and the effects of your decision on each of them and the overall good on society of returning power to us, as opposed to dictating who is going to have sway in the education of our children. It is a powerful and wise person who can resist temptation to follow the crowd and independently consider and weigh the overall effects on society and give up or delegate authority to whom it rightly belongs. I'm counting on you to be that wise and powerful person. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Dale Burch (b)(6)

From: sapgonzalez@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I am a grandparent of 11 grandchildren. I am very concerned about the direction of educational system. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics (especially sexual orientation, gender identification, etc) being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Sheila Gonzalez (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: kimbuck2015@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kim Buck (b)(6)

From: djcjc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daniel Clifford (b)(6)

From: tjames753@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Thomas (b)(6)

From: krexroth4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Krista Rexroth (b)(6)

From: tkehrenberg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Trina Richey (b)(6)

From: momperona@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, We are writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please consider the following: First, do you have legal ability to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue? Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents have a right to protect their children from opposite sex children in their locker rooms. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. We can't imagine how girls in sports feel as their chances for winning are nullified by biological males, who are naturally stronger and faster. Already there have been documented instances of such travesties. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Again, we would not want opposite sex people in our locker rooms, and surely not in our childrens' locker rooms. We hope you will consider the above reasonable facts and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. and Mrs. Dale Perona

(b)(6)

From: bobcubs52@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Baker (b)(6)

From: Sajlmeyer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Meyer (b)(6)

From: stollefam@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden ft . Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Ignoring the true nature of biological sex is insanity and will destroy any inclination a true biological woman may have to participate and excel in sports. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Michael Stolle (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: lafatamikenew@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Lafata (b)(6)

From: obionekanode@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

William Kanode (b)(6)

From: aloha_lois@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:50:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Lois Austin (b)(6)

From: tsolomon011@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Thomas Solomon Sr. (b)(6)

From: homebldr7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gary Darstein (b)(6)

From: stone4health@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Betty Stone (b)(6)

From: mtndwlrs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Letitia Martin (b)(6)

From: andresf@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Andres Fernandez Sr. (b)(6)

From: tralod9@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tracy Lodes (b)(6)

From: quiconnait2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Bristol (b)(6)

From: Joyvsutton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joy Sutton (b)(6)

From: popcornfreaks2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Caronti (b)(6)

From: tomseeya18@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tom Reed (b)(6)

From: 479john@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Gaither (b)(6)

From: marraver@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Raver (b)(6)

From: hotellox@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Martin (b)(6)

From: jaybergers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR). I understand that this will be a virtual public hearing concerning information related to the Education recognition of 1972. President Biber arbitrarily issued an executive order to wipe out the existing Title IX laws for women's sports, he further added another order to glibly establish the LGBT program in the school system. He acted as some kind of dictator to establish these new programs. It appears that the Department of Education is jumping on his band wagon without careful consideration to the importance of maintaining the existing programs, "which provided basic common sense, fair, and reasonable programs." The physical differences of biological males and females need to be acknowledged. Having birthed, and cared for our children, the parental desires are best expressed at the local and state level, rather than at the Federal level. The purpose of Education is to provide practical and truthful information to our children - not to be dictated from some political organization's ideals or theories. Just because someone states that "that I identify as (whatever), does not change the reality of their genetics! This is determined at conception! Thank you for your thoughtful consideration. Jay Bergers (b)(6)

From: relawrence2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Lawrence Jr. (b)(6)

From: bonnie_reinders@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:39:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Title IX recognized the immutable importance of protecting the rights of biological females to fair athletic competition. It is a scientific fact that a person born male will most likely possess athletic advantages such as size, muscle mass, and heart/lung capacity. No research exists that demonstrates those advantages diminish enough after transitioning to render them meaningless. Therefore, males who transition to female can compete more fairly against biological males than against biological females. No one is denying their right to compete. The issue is which competition is more fair for all involved. The rights of transgender females do not and should not supersede those of biological females. The same principle applies to bathrooms, changing rooms, and locker rooms. The rights of biological females to privacy and safety supersede the rights of transgender females to invade those spaces. The solution may be separate bathrooms, changing rooms, and dressing rooms. It is not fair to require biological females to share those private activities with transgender females. Please protect the rights of biological females to fair athletic competition and to privacy and safety by recognizing that Title IX protects biological females. Thank you! Bonnie Reinders (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: crider@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:28:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Calvin Rider (b)(6)

From: johnl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:28:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Lindstedt (b)(6)

From: rebeccahgosselin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:28:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rebeccah Gosselin (b)(6)

From: Lannewest@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:28:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Lisa Syth (b)(6)

From: Mvrabalais@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:28:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mark Rabalais (b)(6)

From: helenbiddle1952@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:28:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Helen Biddle (b)(6)

From: kc20kc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:17:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kelly Cauley (b)(6)

From: kathy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:17:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathy Cooksey (b)(6)

From: helencrasmusen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:17:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I am greatly distressed to see title IX reforms introduced by DeVoss dismantled. These were important reforms designed to ensure greater protections for the accused and universities must be held accountable for their opaque kangaroo courts and lack of due process. Thank you! Helen Rasmusen (b)(6)

From: llyndall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:17:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda L Tyndall (b)(6)

From: ddurkee21@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:17:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Doyle Durkee (b)(6)

From: jckchisenhall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:17:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Chisenhall (b)(6)

From: lcscott54@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:17:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Scott (b)(6)

From: Andrea.Gosselin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:17:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Andrea Gosselin (b)(6)

From: waynegroefsema@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:07:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Wayne Groefsema (b)(6)

From: holbrookhjg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:07:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Title IX was enacted to give women the same rights as men in education. By redefining what a man and a woman is, you have effectively nullified Title IX. For example, if a biological male decides he is a woman, and then you allow Title IX to mean that a person who thinks he is a woman can compete as a woman, you have nullified the rights that Title IX was meant to give to women. There is no science that supports that people are born LGBTQ+. There is science that supports that people born with certain genomes may tend to be more likely to choose the LGBTQ+ lifestyle, but it is still a choice. It may not feel like a choice, but feelings should not determine truth, if the science says otherwise. My heart goes out to people struggling with their gender and sexual identity. But encouraging them to continue in behaviors that are destructive to themselves and others brings no peace to them. A study out of Sweden showed that no amount of support lessened the suicide rate among the LGBTQ+ population there. Science shows that this is not a lifestyle choice that brings peace. We must encourage our students to embrace the scientific truth about themselves, that they are born a particular sex with a corresponding gender and that they can find peace and fulfillment in living out their lives as that sex and gender. There doesn't need to be strict gender roles. Boys can choose to be nurses and girls can choose to be doctors, for example. But just because a boy wants to be a nurse shouldn't require him to feel the need to change his gender. There can be fluidity in the expression of genders without requiring a person to flow between gender identities. Let's truly help our students grow into their best selves! Enforce Title IX to protect women and girls from the purposeful and accidental tyranny of men that it was enacted to do. Support young men who are struggling with accepting their identity as male. Create supportive spaces for young men who are caretakers, artists and academics rather than making them feel less than male if they are not warriors and jocks. Create supportive spaces for women who are warriors and leaders rather than making them feel like they have to change gender to fit in. We need women who are traditional wives and mothers, and women who lead. We need men who are traditional breadwinners and warriors, and men who nurture. Teach our kids to embrace themselves within their biological gender, rather than require them to change their gender identity to embrace themselves. Science proves this is the only way to peace. Thank you! Heather Holbrook (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: ddcastruita@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:07:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dienne M Castruita (b)(6)

From: michelemiller789@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:07:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Yvette Miller (b)(6)

From: debrabjohnson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:07:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Debby Johnson (b)(6)

From: joyita310@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:07:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joyita Sio (b)(6)

From: pat.ekern@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:07:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pat Ekern (b)(6)

From: lisarmiller66@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:07:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Lisa Miller (b)(6)

From: Nathan.powell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:07:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nate Powell (b)(6)

From: aeromg1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:56:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the current administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Gleason (b)(6)

From: billiesueblakley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:56:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Billie Blakley (b)(6)

From: mikki@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:56:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, There is a lot more I could say than the following prepared paragraphs, but it could not be stated any more clearly or succinctly. Clearly you could care less about the children or the parents. Your agenda is so transparent. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Myra Hopcroft (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: brian@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:56:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Brian Bevan (b)(6)

From: classiccalisurfer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:56:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Halden Broaders (b)(6)

From: linda1952gail@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:56:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Wheeler (b)(6)

From: acarter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:56:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amanda Carter (b)(6)

From: robertsonlb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:56:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Robertson (b)(6)

From: karen4wi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:56:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Karen Millard (b)(6)

From: philip.pugh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:56:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Philip Pugh (b)(6)

From: vrcapps1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:56:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Virginia Capps (b)(6)

From: brent@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:44:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Brent Crawford (b)(6)

From: pedro_robinson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:44:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Pete Robinson (b)(6)

From: mauiredow2008@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:44:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ann Oswald (b)(6)

From: pconstantine@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:44:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paul Constantine (b)(6)

From: txhaydens@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:44:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Andrew Hayden (b)(6)

From: Lizacook19@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:44:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Cook (b)(6)

From: aeichholz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:44:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

April Eichholz (b)(6)

From: chinnandteddy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:44:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Kathleen Thompson (b)(6)

From: Ktguzman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:44:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathy Guzman (b)(6)

From: rjmalawy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:44:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Angela Malawy (b)(6)

From: Merna2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:33:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Myra Pierce (b)(6)

From: mwander5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:33:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Melissa Wander (b)(6)

From: sccstim@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:33:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Tim Steele (b)(6)

From: e.m.james@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:33:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Mr. Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I trust it comes as no surprise that there are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Since education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion, politics has NO place in K-12 education. Ideologies forced on parents and students from the federal level must stop. You must evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; we send our children to school to learn. You should take very seriously the violation of public trust and parental rights you have before you. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Lastly, Title IX protections for girls' sports must be honored based on sex, NOT gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you, Elaine James (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Lany4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:33:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Linda Anthony (b)(6)

From: pat.bertola@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:33:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Bertola (b)(6)

From: glenda.s.dunbar@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:23:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Glenda Dunbar (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: carribeansoul1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:23:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathy Tussa (b)(6)

From: Abby.n856@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:23:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Abigail Fisher [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: david.rosenzweig@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:23:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Rosenzweig (b)(6)

From: jandkhope@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:23:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As a professional educator with many years of experience, I understand that any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has NO PLACE in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Teachers around the country are speaking out, and willing to step out of education if this ideology continues to be forced on us against our will and against the will of the parents in our districts. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn ACADEMICS and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Academically our schools are failing. This should be the main consideration of the Biden administration instead of forcing a political ideology. However, if Biden wants to put a voucher system into place and allow parents the choice of where to send their children, then more freedom may be allowed. The issue here is that children are required to attend the school chosen for them by their district unless their parents have the financial means to make a different choice. So, it is an equity issue -- only those with financial means can "opt out" of this indoctrination. In our district many parents are making that choice despite financial difficulties. Parents want their children to learn academics not politics at school. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Kimberley Hope (b)(6)

From: esrwoo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:23:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Erica Woo (b)(6)

From: pbrooks1804@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:11:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. pat W. brooks (b)(6)

From: steveningino@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:11:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Steven Ingino (b)(6)

From: maume05@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:11:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I reflect on the fact that women have sought equality in our society for decades. Much progress has been made in that regard. But using gender identity and sexual orientation as a means for males to compete in women's sports is not an issue of equality. It is a denial of the biological differences between males and females as supported by science. Allowing biological males to compete in women's sports and forcing this ideology into the K-12 schools will be the demise of women's sports. That certainly does not support the dignity of women in our society or the progress they have made. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Maureen Meyer (b)(6)

From: carson7797@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:11:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. In addition, what do you think if your granddaughter get hurt? in a sport/competition that IS for the female biological sex? What do you think after she (put her name here) practicing and working so..... .hard for that goal and the winning is given to another person based in gender and not in female biological sex? Do you think that is fare to your granddaughter? Just put yourself in your granddaughter's shoes. This action/decision would affected her (put your granddaughter's name here) for the rest of her live, mentally and emotionally thinking she, as a female biological sex, she is not enough to reach her dreams in life and be proud of WHOM SHE IS. There is enough identity issues with our kids that are affecting them as an adult, if they reached their adult live. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Clara Santos-Curcini (b)(6)

From: anglealejeune@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:11:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Angela Gowell (b)(6)

From: larry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:11:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Larry Gilson (b)(6)

From: glen_jones@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:11:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Glen Jones (b)(6)

From: jeniferpaschall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:11:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jenifer Paschall (b)(6)

From: kandreas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:11:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kip Andreas (b)(6)

From: raostonework@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:11:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. If you are going to introduce one person's theology then all theology's (religions) should be allowed to be discussed and or taught. Where does it stop? Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Rick Olmstead (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Bonniehickman04@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:11:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bonita Hickman (b)(6)

From: mbrownseas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:01:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Maureen Brown (b)(6)

From: n_grubbs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:01:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Norman Grubbs (b)(6)

From: buddy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:01:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Buddy Smith (b)(6)

From: davlin50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:01:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Cox (b)(6)

From: micahrwhitley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:01:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Micah Whitley (b)(6)

From: stratus727@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 13:01:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

William Clauss (b)(6)

From: Rosanne.iler@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:49:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rose Iler (b)(6)

From: richard@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:49:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard Willis (b)(6)

From: Fitts5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:49:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sheila Fitts (b)(6)

From: kerryvarnum@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:49:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

kerry Varnum (b)(6)

From: markconnor@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:49:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I sign the below form letter because I am tired, angry, and frustrated at the vicious attack on women, children and families by those who deny biological reality, harming the mentally ill and vulnerable with the lie that human nature itself can be changed. The indulgence of transgender mentality is the most violent attack against beauty, truth, and goodness imaginable and any support of it is an attack on our country. You have a responsibility to denounce it immediately. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Connor [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: deya.devorak@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:49:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Deya DeVorak (b)(6)

From: desirae.clark@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:38:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Desirae Clark (b)(6)

From: kermitdeterding@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:38:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kermit Deterding (b)(6)

From: davegordeuk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:38:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Bruce aka Caitlin Jenner - a famous athlete - also has stated that biological males should be banned from taking part in women's sports. It makes for a very uneven playing field for girls to have to compete against men because of the obvious biological differences between men and women. We are often told to "follow the science". Let's do that in this situation. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. David Gordeuk (b)(6)

From: marystroud@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:38:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Please DO NOT extend your legislative arm beyond your legal authority and put my granddaughters' futures at risk by removing the protections of Title IX. Thank you! Ms. Cat Stroud (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: bradleyruhmnn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:38:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Brad Ruhmann (b)(6)

From: Dfwgma@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:38:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Darla W Wilson (b)(6)

From: Diane3of4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:38:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Belanger (b)(6)

From: charlotte.nelis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:38:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Charlotte Nelis (b)(6)

From: Dfwgma@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:38:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Billie W Wilson (b)(6)

From: psb1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:38:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paul Barnett (b)(6)

From: Alanna613@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:28:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alanna McGovern (b)(6)

From: mills.ps@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:28:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Patricia Mills (b)(6)

From: Madmoo75@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:28:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lori Bushman (b)(6)

From: sarahheinle1020@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:28:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sarah Heinle (b)(6)

From: goff0531@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:28:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Melissa Goff (b)(6)

From: bruce@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:28:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bruce Ottway (b)(6)

From: scott.sweat@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:16:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Scott Sweat (b)(6)

From: cjsvcox@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:16:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Charles B Cox (b)(6)

From: Barbbartley1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:16:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I must add that many biological females have spent years training to be successful in their chosen track & field sport only to have their efforts not only diminished but smashed by others whose biological features make them superior in these sports. 'Apples to apples' competition needs to be returned for fairness and motivation for biological females to achieve goals in their chosen area. Thank you! Barb Bartley (b)(6)

From: burmaep@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:16:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Chaplain Eric Burmahl (b)(6)

From: dwmelnik@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:16:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deborah Melnik [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Mckensie.hollar@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:16:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

McKensie Grina [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: rvallillo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:05:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Raymond Vallillo (b)(6)

From: vince.fecteau@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:05:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, There are only two biological genders- male, and female. It is plain that the sexes are not identical, but complementary, with DIFFERENT strengths and weaknesses. The rights of individuals who identify otherwise should not violate the rights of the vast majority who believe otherwise. Girls and women should not be forced to directly compete or cohabit with biological men. Any rule or law that dictates otherwise will violate the rights and sensibilities of all but a tiny percentage of our citizens. That is not justice, it is not liberty, it is totalitarian. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct this review. First, any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vincent Fecteau (b)(6)

From: fmoncher@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:05:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Frank Moncher (b)(6)

From: sbartg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:05:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Steve Bartulovich (b)(6)

From: shepherds333@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:05:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Chris Kiesling (b)(6)

From: stevedkelley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:05:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diane Kelley (b)(6)

From: ccangelo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 12:05:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Candice Cangelosi (b)(6)

From: Msludlow4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:55:30 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

From: 7oceanwaves3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:55:30 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Nixon (b)(6)

From: farmeja@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:55:30 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Farmer (b)(6)

From: cstrunkmi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:55:30 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Hull (b)(6)

From: m-j-m@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:55:30 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please consider the following as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, education is primarily a state and local matter. Think about what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation could be an abuse of power. Again, education is best dealt with at the state and local level and it is protected by law from federal incursion. Do not allow controversial ideologies to be forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn basic subjects and how to reason for themselves. Parents do not necessarily consent to controversial topics or ideologies like Queer Theory or Critical Race Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Children with questions about identity must be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are vitally important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. I personally saw the difference in boys and girls physical ability in my grandchildren's field day event as early as second grade and it was more pronounced at the older grade levels. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. If you do not keep them separate it will be the end of women's sports. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mary Jane Sinclair

(b)(6)

From: dadp47@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:55:30 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Thomas Lauletta (b)(6)

From: lalammey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:55:30 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lou Ann Lammey (b)(6)

From: aengland1952@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:43:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. April England (b)(6)

From: Cyndil2pa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:43:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cyndi Leatherman (b)(6)

From: ajrgar@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:43:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony and Georgette Romito (b)(6)

From: emkmls@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:43:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ed Krakora (b)(6)

From: cmianecki@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:43:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Catherine Mianecki (b)(6)

From: Cmacbennett@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:32:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Bennett (b)(6)

From: felixlaw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:32:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Felix (b)(6)

From: Lizstang09@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:32:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Francis (b)(6)

From: ccarrsca@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:21:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Carla Carr-Scarberry (b)(6)

From: huffman.christy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:21:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Christy Propst [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: mrmaad1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:21:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Malcolm Davis [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: zakrzewskid@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:21:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard D Zakrzewski (b)(6)

From: fabbris2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:21:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Fabbri (b)(6)

From: gwyn2455@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:11:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gwyn Moore (b)(6)

From: clscdsmith@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:11:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Charles Smith (b)(6)

From: annrh1215@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:11:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ann Harrell (b)(6)

From: lisa.young4966@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:11:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lisa Young (b)(6)

From: turtlesfreak@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 11:11:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. When Title IX was written in 1972, I am sure that sex was intended to mean biological sex and not include gender identity or even sexual orientation. Please do not redefine it to mean what is convenient for your agenda. Legislation should be passed if you want to change title IX because what has been done by executive order is an overreach by the executive branch of our government. Title IX was a huge victory for women, but by redefining it, the POTUS has turned it on its head. Women and girls should be allowed privacy when they are changing or using the restroom. This is a fundamental right and it provides greater safety from men who might use this as a way to gain access to victims. This can be seen in the increased occurrences of peeping toms in Target restrooms and changing areas. When I was a girl, I loved to play sports. I was able to compete on a fair playing field because of Title IX. We have known from science that men have a physical advantage in almost every sport. This is why women's sports were started in the first place. Please do not be anti-science. There are real biological differences between boys and girls. I want my daughter to be able to compete fairly. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Sarah Jennings (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: hope2otherstz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 10:59:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule-making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Eliah Mauza , Ph. D. (b)(6)

From: rhlord@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 10:59:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without consent of the parents is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance, so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. If the trans community wants to compete - give them a "trans" league of their own. Biological males have a huge physiological advantage over females rendering this competition unfair. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ruth Vaccaro (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Kathybakewell296@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 10:59:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathy Bakewell (b)(6)

From: c5geckos@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 10:48:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Christina Greco (b)(6)

From: Jamesburchell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 10:48:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Burchell (b)(6)

From: dsjkmart@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 10:37:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Our public education system is failing our kids academically and I see less concern about improving academics than about pushing transgenderism on the public. Meanwhile other developed countries are achieving far better academic results and spending less money on education. Please put your focus on preparing the next generation academically to compete internationally instead of spending time and tax money on social issues. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. David Martella

(b)(6)

From: skterry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 10:37:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Sara Terry (b)(6)

From: dbeougher@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 10:28:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dennis Beougher (b)(6)

From: hoperoberts63@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 10:16:17 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Hope Roberts (b)(6)

From: Bedfordzoo55@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 10:04:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Willis Texas (b)(6)

From: dafranck75@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 10:04:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dana Franck (b)(6)

From: danielmutyala@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 10:04:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Daniel Mutyala (b)(6)

From: schochlerorders@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 09:42:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stacy Schochler (b)(6)

From: jrkarsjens@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 09:31:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joel Karsjens (b)(6)

From: victorlvb4420@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 09:20:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Victor Barncastle (b)(6)

From: Smyserdonna@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 09:20:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Donna Smyser (b)(6)

From: cmw1423@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 09:10:11 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Chuck Weaver (b)(6)

From: mandarinmissionhawaii@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 08:59:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Nathan C. (b)(6)

From: loweryrn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 08:47:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gail Lowery (b)(6)

From: callie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 08:26:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Callie Goodrum (b)(6)

From: maloriecoffman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 08:03:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Malorie Coffman (b)(6)

From: jtgibas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 07:53:47 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John T Gibas (b)(6)

From: Ohoner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 07:42:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Olga Honermann (b)(6)

From: kathykopenhagen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 07:42:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kathy Koppenhaver (b)(6)

From: actorsandrak@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 07:30:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Hello. I hope you are having a good day! I am writing in regard to the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Sandra Kord (b)(6)

From: hollywaechter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 07:08:52 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Holly Roeder (b)(6)

From: audithisworld@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 06:57:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kim Audi (b)(6)

From: engelalma@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 06:57:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Alma Engel [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: rclack@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 06:35:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ray Clack Jr. (b)(6)

From: sonia.shaw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 06:35:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Sonia Shae [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Sdierck4j@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 06:25:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sandra Y Dierckman [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jdunfee12@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 06:25:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to ask you to protect both the Title IX protections for girls, and the ethical issue of maintaining the definitions of boy and girl, when it comes to bathroom and locker rooms. I often push for local authorities to end the public school's monopoly on public funding for pre-k education. The current push to redefine gender is probably the best argument in my favor. And while I would lament the loss of that example on my side, my preference is to protect the students from this issue. So, I encourage you to withdraw from any push to require that schools allow individuals to have access to sports and gender-specific facilities such as locker rooms and toilets designated for the opposite sex. Thank you! Joseph Dunfee (b)(6)

From: Richs617@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 06:25:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Sorenson (b)(6)

From: diane4103@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 06:14:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Edward West (b)(6)

From: mike.loter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 06:02:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mike Loter (b)(6)

From: karen50earthenvessel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:52:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Karen Hitchcock (b)(6)

From: LittleWons@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:52:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Thank you for welcoming public input to the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) to improve guidance about enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Many of my family and friends have dedicated their lives to the welfare and development of children, including teachers, psychologists, social workers, doctors and nurses, coaches, and speech, occupational, and physical therapists among them. We have all noticed with dismay the increasing frustration, confusion, and fear needlessly caused when students are being confronted by political agendas of a vocal minority special interest group that keeps adding more letters (LGBTQIAPK+) to their ever-growing "inclusive" group which includes just about every sexual persuasion imaginable—except the two designated ones naturally provided by the Creator. We also have observed and experienced the infiltration and deliberate misuse of government and educational systems to pressure professionals to wrongly push children who are still developing their sense of self into non-traditional roles, sometimes with devastating or even fatal consequences. (See <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=-YbRNgBg9Og> for some such commentary) Our schools are for teaching children, not pushing personal ideology to indoctrinate them. Since when does it have to be stressful to decide which bathroom to use, or what pronoun to use in conversation or reports (when most languages have gender build right into their vocabulary), or to be labelled a bigot just because of your skin color or where you live? Or why are children shamed for embracing the positive values of our national history such as freedom, free speech without retribution for disagreement, justly judging people on their merit, and rewarding right over what is wrong? Only small minds with narcissistic personalities (a mental disorder with exaggerated feelings of self-importance, but low self-esteem) try to impose their self-centered and unpatriotic views to manipulate young minds entrusted to our care for learning. Children should not have to encounter such distracting distortions that take away focus from learning the foundations of education (like the 3Rs and factual--not opinionated--history and science). The role of our national schools is not social engineering! No wonder we now educationally fall behind many other nations! Political agendas such as these lead many of the most dedicated families with adequate resources to make sacrifices and withdraw their children's from public school, increasing the disparity between those that remain. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are vital and must be respected based on biologic sex, which is a fixed and factually measurable designation, and not gender identity, which is influenced by many pressures (including those artificially manipulated by meddling adults) and therefore can change over time. Males and females need to train and compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy--a common sense principle which could cause great liability for harm if violated. It is clearly discriminatory against females to effectively deny them the opportunity to safely and competitively participate in sports (and related opportunities such as scholarships) when they are biologically built differently in physical parameters ranging from size, bone density, strength, etc. We honor our young ladies when we recognize the biologic fact that they are wonderfully made but physically weaker vessels (1 Peter 3:7). Regardless of what gender identity an athlete assumes, fixed standards based upon biological sex are a necessity. Carefully evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Needs and types of resources vary greatly between communities, even something as seemingly simple as differences between city and rural folk (who for example tend to know more experientially where food comes from and how babies of all species are made). Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer THEORY being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Parents best know their children and have the lifelong moral and legal right and responsibility to care for them until they are mature enough to be able to independently offer informed consent for their decisions. Children are our most precious national resource and the hope for our future. I pray you will take these considerations into account and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX, knowing you will be accountable before We the People and God our Creator. Thank you! Denise Christopher (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: darangno@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:41:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Deborah Arangno (b)(6)

From: worland.ak@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:41:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Misty Worland (b)(6)

From: darangno@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:41:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Deborah Arangno (b)(6)

From: velvet@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:41:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Velvet Jones (b)(6)

From: joeandlenna@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:31:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. GOD CREATED EACH OF US EITHER MALE OR FEMALE. PERIOD! Biological males play biological males in sports. Biological girls play biological girls in sports. That should not need explaining! Thank you! Mr. Lenna Rains

(b)(6)

From: kirk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:31:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, RE: The U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. What legal ability do you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue? Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without my consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. The State does not have the authority, nor are they somehow better qualified to guide a child in a particular direction. Who made them an authority? They are just people. What makes them qualified? Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and sensible. My daughters should not have to compete against biological boys in any sports activity. I don't care if the boy decides to identify as a girl or not. Because I identify as a giraffe doesn't make me one. Boys and girls are physically and emotionally different. I am physically stronger than my every female that's ever been in my life, both family and friend, but some of the smartest, kindest people I have ever known were females. I am a son, a brother, a husband, and a Father - growing up I lived with my Mother and my sister; today I have two daughters and a son. They are each uniquely different. I do not want boys or men in a restroom or locker room where my daughters, my wife, my sister, or my Grandmother may be using. Girls and boys sports must be honored based on sex, not gender identity of the moment. (b)(6) is still a male; (b)(6) is still a female and when they competed, they competed against like body types. Males are physically dominant when it comes to things physical. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' rights to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I can't believe you are wasting time, breath, and money even considering such hogwash. No one should be bullied or picked on for being different or condemned for "out of the ordinary" behavior, but that does not mean everything is a good idea or should be embraced because someone, somewhere makes an impressionistic emotional plea. Some things don't make good sense. I hope you deeply ponder the ramifications of shortsighted policy decisions at the expense of the many. You cannot and you will never satisfy every roque request that crosses your desk - there will always be someone new pushing just a little further. I hope you are sober as you review Title IX. Thank you! Kindly, Kirk G. Hodson (b)(6)

From: fernwood@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:31:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Claudia Sheaffer (b)(6)

From: twhitfield81@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:18:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tami Whitfield (b)(6)

From: ms.burke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:18:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stephanie Burke (b)(6)

From: cwfd drums@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:08:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Scott Conway (b)(6)

From: Huggibear00@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:08:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amber Lamb (b)(6)

From: mariebach@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 05:08:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marie Bach (b)(6)

From: a.bonpen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:56:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ann Bonpensiero (b)(6)

From: dcostel1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:56:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I am concerned that rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation would have many undesirable consequences. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. In your deliberations, there should be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory or Gender Identity being taught to their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so they can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Daniel J Costello Jr. (b)(6)

From: cathy.upham@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:56:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Catherine Upham (b)(6)

From: jmuney88@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:46:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Miller (b)(6)

From: Lauriejackson50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:46:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Laurie Jackson (b)(6)

From: sandyjhoff@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:46:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandra Hoffman (b)(6)

From: cfalk9@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:46:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. You have no legal or moral right to indoctrinate my children with laws that are against the God-ordained family unit. You will be held accountable to the sovereign Lord God for every decision you make. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Joanene Falk (b)(6)

From: andrewpierceirv@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:46:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. We were created to be male and female in HIS IMAGE HE CREATED US. When we go against the way G_d created us bad things happen and when we follow His plan it works well in the long run. There are many people who regret transgender puberty blockers and surgery. Any proposal needs to talk about transgender regret. Walt Heir has heard from thousands of people regretting their surgeries. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Andrew Pierce (b)(6)

From: exlscheet@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:46:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Loretta Scheetz (b)(6)

From: mindydbish@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:46:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mindy Bischoff (b)(6)

From: ann7paul@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:46:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ann Paul (b)(6)

From: tjsmom18@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:46:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Connie Pridemore (b)(6)

From: joann.stricker@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:34:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jo Ann Stricker (b)(6)

From: chcpetercjensen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:34:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am responding to the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please be aware of several important considerations as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations: First, evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, give extensive consideration to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so those parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Also, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important! They should be honored based on sex, not "gender identity." Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women's and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Chaplain Peter Jensen , USN Ret. (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: shannonmoore@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:23:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Christopher Moore (b)(6)

From: jeannelouisekelley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:23:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeanne Neumann (b)(6)

From: docjr5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:23:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor David J Frank (b)(6)

From: sarahezzell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:23:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sarah Ezzell (b)(6)

From: mafibiger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:23:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Mary Ann Fibiger (b)(6)

From: llysen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:23:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lana Lysen (b)(6)

From: tlockie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:23:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Tim Lockie (b)(6)

From: milty@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:13:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Eaton (b)(6)

From: jbbardwell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:13:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! James Bardwell (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dwdunsmoor@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:13:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Douglas Dunsmoor (b)(6)

From: pkishii@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:13:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathryn Ishii (b)(6)

From: mltfb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:02:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. After a "transgender" surgery, a male is still a male, but mutilated, and is dependent on drugs. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Thomas Brands (b)(6)

From: mariasantas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:02:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Maria Declusin May I add that what this bill does DESTROYS all the good work from previous administrations! (b)(6)

From: jacques.patti@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:02:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

To Acting Director Goldberg, This letter is prompted by the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some, in my opinion, vitally important issues to be treated most cautiously when making any decisions on the Title IX regulations. The United States Constitution has, in the opinion of millions of citizens including myself, been abused by people in bureaucratic positions during a number of previous administrations. Just because political power-seekers want to please certain influential supporters by proving they are able to undermine the nature, character, virtue and morals of children is NO REASON to deliberately endanger and disadvantage female athletes of any age. Some people in government apparently feel the incomparable wisdom of our Constitution is too restrictive for their radical ideologies and theories. Most citizens, on the other hand, recognize and resent the abuses of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics should be given no place in K-12 education when bureaucrats and elected officials are allowed to get by with bullying policies to force parents and students to comply with risks to health and well-being. Children who may have questions about identity should be referred to their parents for guidance. It takes years to assess what policies work best and to weed out those that cause harm, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to common-sense issues of fairness, I know many parents who are hoping you will keep such suggestions as guidance for your thoughts as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mary Kummer (b)(6)

From: tdsdesigner56@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:02:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Tricia Seeman (b)(6)

From: bljchiro@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:02:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Ben Jennings (b)(6)

From: lc_tweedy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:02:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Tweedy (b)(6)

From: sljohns8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:02:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sharon Johnson (b)(6)

From: melonie.witscher@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 04:02:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Melonie Witscher (b)(6)

From: Lizzfnun@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 03:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth F Nunez (b)(6)

From: lyndenbiglin5174@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:17:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing It is no less than insane to allow biological males to compete on biological female sports teams.

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Biglin (b)(6)

From: janehg1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 21:48:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Anti-women legislation: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Any legislation that allows men to engage in sports created for women is unfair and anti-women if men are treated as though physically equal. This type of legislation should be eliminated. In sports such as horseracing jockeys are given weights to make them equal in weight. Horses are selected to race against similar horses. But now we think that women and men should oppose each other in sports. This is denigrating women. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Jane Gilroy (b)(6)

From: joydrewry50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 02:34:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joy Drewry (b)(6)

From: lafiero447@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 01:29:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Comments - Re: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Girls sports should be for true girls, and boys sports for true boys. If they want to have some mixed sports, where all sexes are involved, it should be clearly delineated as a mixed-sport. But to expect a girl to compete evenly with a biological male in a sport where a male's strength would certainly make a difference, is not fair to either party involved. And it is just ludicrous. It is actually quite unfathomable that we would even have to have such a conversation to point out the obvious facts. But the radical leftists don't deal with facts or simple, time-honored wisdom. They are only blinded by their bizarre agendas - absolutely not caring how many people/ children they hurt along the way. Our schools need to be places of real education; not to be used for politically corrupt and immoral indoctrination and/or actions. My husband is a retired school teacher. His parents were both teachers and my grandmother was a teacher. All excelled in their field and taught true history, as well as the needed basics and extras for functioning in an industrialized society; and those things naturally coordinated with a thankfulness and appreciation for our country and the many blessings we have had. But as teachers, they saw how the radical government parties were trying to re-write everything and make our schools a battleground for their efforts to warp the minds of children and roll back the successes of properly focused learning. So much in our public schools now is utter nonsense, not part of needed education, and/or downright destructive to the children and to the society around them as they become entangled in and confused by adults with absurd and unrealistic agendas. This email is regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Lorraine Grout (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dorythack@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 14:07:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Please don't put my granddaughters, or any other GIRLS at risk of injury by giving transcends an unfair advantage by allowing them to compete in the same areas.

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dorothy Thacker (b)(6)

From: chartsig@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 00:56:38 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please be aware of some very important considerations as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there must be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary decision makers of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are critical, and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Christine Ellis (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: jennmartens@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 23:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. What legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue? Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Please keep these thoughts at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you, Jennifer Martens

(b)(6)

From: billjanseabert@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:32:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Janet E Seabert (b)(6)

From: Twowahls1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:32:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard and Terry Wahl (b)(6)

From: jrjrbn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:19:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jerry carr [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jaimemalone@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:19:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jaime Malone (b)(6)

From: info@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:19:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Dr. Mona Davies (b)(6)

From: moltmt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:19:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eileen Rodriguez (b)(6)

From: sue_rice55@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:19:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Rice (b)(6)

From: t.bezmj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:19:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jane Crenshaw (b)(6)

From: scottmc51917@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:10:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Scott McElroy (b)(6)

From: blanchew301@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:10:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Blanche Williams (b)(6)

From: rogerandrosalie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:57:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Roger Perez (b)(6)

From: hagewoodwl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:46:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. William Lowell Hagewood (b)(6)

From: jomccoy1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:46:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joanne McCoy (b)(6)

From: gkjabrooks@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:46:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gaylord Brooks (b)(6)

From: Visiondr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:46:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael Simeone (b)(6)

From: joesydh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:46:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joe Hamilton (b)(6)

From: Oufanred@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:35:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathryn Chirico (b)(6)

From: don.volz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:35:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Don D Volz (b)(6)

From: 1st.kwarrior@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:35:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kenneth Wedekind (b)(6)

From: toconn2967@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:24:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Terry Oconnell (b)(6)

From: lifejoy1942@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:24:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Theresa Caruso (b)(6)

From: a.padilla5880@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:24:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the DOE for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As you gather information, please consider the following: First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule making by the DOE on gender identity and sexual orientation is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Extensive consideration must be given to parental rights, we are the primary arbiters of our child's education. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Alicia Padilla (b)(6)

From: ttrams@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:15:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

T Ramsey (b)(6)

From: dodge_matthew@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:02:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Matthew Pinkelman (b)(6)

From: LILLPRICE@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 02:02:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lillie O Price (b)(6)

From: 7ruthmyers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:51:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ruth Myers (b)(6)

From: sdritz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:51:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sterling Ritz [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: lewald79@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:51:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Laura Ewald (b)(6)

From: teesplace@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:51:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Theresa Lussi (b)(6)

From: dbauer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:41:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Even though the liberals believe that girls and young men who identify with the female sex should be able to compete against one another, this would be very unfair. Boys and girls are physically different. That is not to say that girls cannot be fast and strong; however, males innately have more strength and speed than females. That is why track events, races, and weightlifting competitions separate boys and girls. Having them compete together put the girls at a great disadvantage. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Debbie Bauer (b)(6)

From: nuclearnav@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:41:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, Title IX was to protect women and girls sports not to allow biological men to subvert women's sports. Allow women's sports to be destroyed by biological males by discouraging women from being able to compete, in my opinion, opposes the very reason Title IX was developed. In addition, Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. It is not the place of government to substitute its heavy handed and arbitrary "wisdom" in place of parents. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. William L Detwiler (b)(6)

From: garyandalice@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:41:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gary Nusbaum (b)(6)

From: Tiffanyannie1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:30:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tiffany Sharpe (b)(6)

From: Overholtfamily@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:30:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jaime Overholt (b)(6)

From: deidreh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:30:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Deidre Hill (b)(6)

From: albertmoy2003@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:30:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Albert Moy (b)(6)

From: trulygin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:18:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education. They send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance. Also, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these considerations at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Lyle E Russell (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: tsiegel0420@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:18:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Thomas Siegel (b)(6)

From: Tkhc161@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:18:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Karen Harper (b)(6)

From: cindyclar@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:07:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cynthia Vesperman (b)(6)

From: bbackstrom@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:07:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Brian Backstrom (b)(6)

From: sharon.calles@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:07:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sharon Calles (b)(6)

From: mgeorge@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:07:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. I am offering my comments as a proud grandfather of 12 beautiful children, seven girls and five boys. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. It is not for the federal government to interfere in matters designated by the Constitution as matters for the states to handle. In my opinion this is another vast overreach by the federal government and should be stopped. If you disregard the Constitution and continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Bottom line, it's not your business to raise our kids it's the parent's responsibility. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Myron George (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: amyardis60@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:07:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amy Rubenstein (b)(6)

From: mk11782@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 01:07:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marsha King (b)(6)

From: hntbowen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:57:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Theresa Bowen (b)(6)

From: mccarty17@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:57:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Steve McCarty (b)(6)

From: sommerramada@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:45:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Scott Sommer [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jamesberg.302@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:45:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James L Berg (b)(6)

From: lhansen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:45:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I agree and support everything written below. As a teacher, I know we are suppose to teach not preach and parents have ultimate say over what their children are exposed to. As a grandparent, I want my granddaughters treated fairly and safely in all areas of school. It is your job to protect the rights of all students. At the present time girls are not being treated fairly. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs Linda Hansen (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: sodapop2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:45:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Frank Soda (b)(6)

From: chall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:45:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Colleen Hall (b)(6)

From: GregAndVidie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:45:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; we will pull our children and future grand-children from public schools if the government continues down this "we know better than you" path. Government knows next to nothing. Continuing to teach politically driven ideology to young children without parental consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about sexual identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Government is supposed to serve the people. You seem to have completely forgotten that. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Greg Munson (b)(6)

From: mimi1940@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:45:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sharon McCall (b)(6)

From: leebeckhusen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:45:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Martha Beckhusen (b)(6)

From: Mitchrappfan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:45:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Latta (b)(6)

From: cathy2at@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:34:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cathy Thomas (b)(6)

From: auntbethharman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:34:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth A Harman (b)(6)

From: susan.lnb.edwards@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:34:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Edwards (b)(6)

From: heiditojack@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:34:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Heidi Lueken (b)(6)

From: jajordan80@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:34:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judith Jordan (b)(6)

From: lhansen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:24:12 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Charles Hansen (b)(6)

From: rlundy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:13:09 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Renwick Lundy (b)(6)

From: tthomasw316@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:13:09 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Thomas David Walter (b)(6)

From: klaabs818@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:13:09 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Laabs (b)(6)

From: jessicazolezzi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:13:09 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jessica Morales (b)(6)

From: jessicazolezzi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:13:09 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jessica Morales (b)(6)

From: timarkle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:01:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Timothy Arkle (b)(6)

From: shannonkayphelps@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:01:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Shannon Phelps (b)(6)

From: davidwalshsr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:01:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Walsh (b)(6)

From: timarkle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 00:01:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Timothy Arkle (b)(6)

From: raekeo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:50:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Raphaela Keohane (b)(6)

From: BDSPANGLE@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:50:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Becky Spangle (b)(6)

From: Colerenf@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:50:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cole Renfro (b)(6)

From: davis.markowitz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:50:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbie Markowitz (b)(6)

From: fnpforwellness@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:39:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Diane Infantino (b)(6)

From: humanbullet@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:39:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Carl Millard (b)(6)

From: nbyeomans@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:39:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Yeomans (b)(6)

From: sarah@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:39:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sarah Burnett (b)(6)

From: Gmazzuc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:28:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Women have fought so hard for so long to just compete, period! A biological advantage destroys everything women athletes have had to overcome in athletics! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Gina Mazzucola

(b)(6)

From: Deborahburcham@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:28:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I used to lift weights and there's no way that I could ever compete with males in the amount of weight that I could lift because Males are biologically stronger than women. This is not a prejudiced statement but it is a scientific fact. The only prejudice here is against women by not giving them a fair field of competition with other women. It would be like having a child compete against an adult. Thank you! Debbie Burcham (b)(6)

From: paranor@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:28:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lisa Thiel (b)(6)

From: pattersoncorner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:28:51 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Wesley Patterson None

From: schamburgg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:06:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gayla Schamburg (b)(6)

From: edithb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:06:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Edith K Burchell (b)(6)

From: jodeepreston@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:06:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jo Dee Preston (b)(6)

From: naiglerh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:56:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rick Naigle (b)(6)

From: isareed53@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:56:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dwight Reed (b)(6)

From: charkle9@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:56:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Klein (b)(6)

From: Manosteele60@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:56:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Stetson (b)(6)

From: modom@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:56:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Odom (b)(6)

From: omysoul@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:44:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Fred Demaio (b)(6)

From: dbvallier@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:44:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joseph Valliet (b)(6)

From: swc_xa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:23:16 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Imelda Aguilar (b)(6)

From: rosei43@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:23:16 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rose Silva (b)(6)

From: gala4051@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:23:16 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gail Dampman (b)(6)

From: Kimcaywood57@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:11:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kim Caywood (b)(6)

From: valanne.cardenas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:11:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Valanne Cardenas (b)(6)

From: Clkenyon2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:11:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Our youth-male and female- deserve to be treated as they are created/ born, not as some transitional/ gender to be changed. Thank you! Mrs. Martha L Kenyon (b)(6)

From: gloydj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:11:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I'm outraged at what is happening in our schools. I shouldn't have to be writing to you to stop the insanity. You should not be caving to the extremists and radicals. Children should be educated on math, science etc., not indoctrinated on such nonsense as this. Female sports and privacy should not be destroyed. I will let the rest of this letter, drafted by others, represent my feelings as this topic is heart-breaking, sad and insulting. Why is this insanity happening? Why is this assault on children, parents and religion occurring? There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. John Gloyd (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dawndawg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dawn Graham (b)(6)

From: teresamuller7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Teresa Muller (b)(6)

From: ann.brigham@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Ann Brigham (b)(6)

From: healmac@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Men are physically different from women and that never goes away. That is why 2 female boxers had their heads bashed in by transgender men. There is no way for fairness to occur when a biological male is opposing a biological female. Not to mention that females are losing scholarships to males, it's wrong. Science supports that there are only 2 genders, male and female, that cannot be changed, no matter how we may 'feel'. Many who changed who they were born as have committed suicide. Many find the changes made to their bodies did not stop the feelings they had prior to changing their gender identity. We are all made in the image of God and our identity is found in Jesus, not in the world. I believe counseling should be given first and children should wait until they are adults to make a change to their bodies. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Heather MacNaughton

(b)(6)

From: weh2002-inc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you these thoughts and suggestions will be considered and guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. William Hammer (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: pastorpetenbc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Peter Nargi (b)(6)

From: artlavigne@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Arthur LaVigne (b)(6)

From: rachelprice66@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:49:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rachel Price (b)(6)

From: jtoves@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:39:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please, as a female, a mother and a grandmother, do not eliminate female sports by adding males that want to be females. Biologically, they are at immediate advantage. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Debbie Toves (b)(6)

From: salfilippelli@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:39:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Sal Filippelli (b)(6)

From: sdelphia7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:39:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. shirley Clark (b)(6)

From: suepetral@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:29:12 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I am not necessarily associated with FRC, but I am a teacher in public education in Massachusetts. The direction my colleagues and I have seen over recent years, and in particular, under President Biden's administration, is disconcerting to us as educators and parents. The issues associated with Title IX are just one of the concerns, but one which I hope you will carefully consider. As an educator, I have seen first-hand the impact of recent decisions on my student's physical and mental well-being. I can assure you that my words in this petition will be insufficient to truly demonstrate to you the heartbreaking damage I've seen some of my students suffer under such ideology. I've witnessed a few of my students struggle, both emotionally and physically, when the playing field of sports becomes imbalanced under the fallacy of social equality despite the disparity of biological differences. I have watched well-balanced, socially mature, and academically superior student-athletes suddenly struggle with depression and anxiety while watching their academic performance decline. Oftentimes, the decline becomes a slippery slope that lands the student in a mental-health facility for a period of weeks to months. I have students that have missed extensive periods of school while hospitalized suffering a large loss in learning and periods of their life. This damage reaches far beyond the field of play. It reaches into the classroom and the emotional, intellectual, and mental development of young people. Your decision in regard to this matter impacts the lives of young people in ways in which you may not even be aware. Those of us who see these young people daily are invested in their well-being and development and not only bear witness to the fall-out of your decisions but are challenged with the responsibility to mitigate the results. For us, we know the names of the young people who are victims of political decisions. We know their young faces, their goals, their dreams, and their abilities. We watch their successes and their heartbreaks. I would like to caution you to consider the well-being and safety of female, student-athletes and put aside the illogical push for social equality which comes at too high of a price. Please do not disenfranchise young female students so young in their development. I further ask you to evaluate your legal ability to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Educators SHOULD NOT disenfranchise any of their students by mistaking ideology for curriculum, forcing students in regard to "what" they think and believe vs. "how" to question and think for themselves. This is at the heart of education and learning. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Petralia (b)(6)

From: msfink@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:29:12 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Susan Fink (b)(6)

From: 5300jl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:29:12 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Janet D. Lovitt (b)(6)

From: bawok33@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:29:12 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Woods (b)(6)

From: kieff2001@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:29:12 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, as an athlete, I understand that there is a vast difference in the biological makeup between a male and a female. No matter how much I train as a female, a male that trains as hard as I do will be faster, 95% of the time. I believe that is sexist to allow men to play with females, because it is taking away a woman's right to play sports. If males and females are allowed to try out for a team, what coach would choose the female over the male? None. Women's sports will soon cease to exist. Also, as a woman, I don't want to play with other males because I don't want them touching my body and I don't want to touch their body in sports such as basketball or soccer. Both sports are very up close and personal, and I wouldn't want to be that close to a male. If men were allowed on the women's team, I wouldn't play on the team. Please keep this in mind as you review Title IX. Secondly, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Catherine Kieffer

From: rwp728@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:16:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, In your public hearing regarding Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, there are some things you should be aware of: 1) Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Ideological indoctrination has no place in public education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. 2) Parents are the legitimate arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics such as Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. It is also the parents' responsibility to address children's personal questions about identity according to their own beliefs, not those of the government. Circumventing their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights, and has already resulted in massive movement of children out of the influence of politicized education bureaucrats. 3) Title IX protections for girls' sports must be honored based on actual sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to obvious biological differences, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls in sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these principles in mind as you review Title IX. The future of the public education system depends on common sense and cooperation with the parents. Thank you, Mr. Ron Purcell

(b)(6)

From: bmhannes@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:16:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beatrice Honnes (b)(6)

From: shelly.mabry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:16:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Steve Mabry (b)(6)

From: ehammerly1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:16:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ethel Hammerly (b)(6)

From: rebeccafuchser@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:16:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rebecca Fuchser (b)(6)

From: msjanbo1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:05:30 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Janette N Bohrer (b)(6)

From: wjlongjrmpa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:05:30 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William J Long (b)(6)

From: sylvitalinda@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 21:05:30 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Silvia Moore (b)(6)

From: afjgburns@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:54:52 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Anne Burns (b)(6)

From: saintshane67@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:54:52 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Shane Cantrell (b)(6)

From: gandshonaker@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:54:52 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sherye Honaker (b)(6)

From: idjones46@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:43:45 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Irvin Jones (b)(6)

From: misssherryd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:43:45 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sherry Dmitruchina (b)(6)

From: idjones46@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:43:45 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Irvin Jones (b)(6)

From: cm_gordon@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:43:45 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Christy Gordon (b)(6)

From: idjones46@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:43:45 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Irvin Jones (b)(6)

From: roycoats46@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:32:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue -- the answer is NONE! Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education. Should you continue to proceed, you should consider parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on SEX, NOT gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please allow these thoughts and suggestions to guide your actions as you review Title IX, for the sake of OUR children. Thank you! Mr. Roy Coats (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: ctimmons2121@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:32:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Chris Timmons (b)(6)

From: jef7f4s8impson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:32:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jeff Simpson (b)(6)

From: nhr1229@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:22:11 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Nina Heck-Russell (b)(6)

From: gelinerscpo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:22:11 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Peter Gelinas (b)(6)

From: anca4radu@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:22:11 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anca Farcas (b)(6)

From: nilsasanchez1956@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:00:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nilsa Sanchez (b)(6)

From: nilsasanchez1956@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:00:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nilsa Sanchez (b)(6)

From: reneandmarty@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:00:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Rene McSherry-Bray (b)(6)

From: payrogr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:00:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I appreciate your consideration. Thank you! Mr. Roger Payne (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: mgarringer273730@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:48:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael Garringer (b)(6)

From: hmbegb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:48:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeffrey Baker (b)(6)

From: christinamdoyle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:48:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christina Doyle (b)(6)

From: jespate1322@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:37:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jodi Patel (b)(6)

From: grammie21206@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:37:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judy Walton (b)(6)

From: keco5172@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:37:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Vickie Cole (b)(6)

From: matnd9@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:27:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marilyn Twist (b)(6)

From: amieke.desrouleaux@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:27:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amieke Desrouleaux (b)(6)

From: gfarmer77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:27:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Gail Farmer-Anderson (b)(6)

From: denbronco84@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:27:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cheryl Espe (b)(6)

From: runninglips815@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:27:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Donna Kay Brown (b)(6)

From: dooze88@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:27:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deborah Curylo (b)(6)

From: Valpmackey08@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:27:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Valerie Mackey (b)(6)

From: tx.shelly3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:16:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Shelly Knowles (b)(6)

From: oh2sew2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:16:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Barbara Delach (b)(6)

From: ccdow2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:16:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Christopher Dow [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: ddt3pott@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:16:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I have read that the Office for Civil Rights (OCR) has announced a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As review Title IX regulations, please seriously take my comments into account: (1) Promoting transgenderism and gender identity for minors are issues solely to be determined by individual families. Parents still have responsibility over their child's medical and emotional health needs. And, legally, this is not an issue for the federal government. Only individual states and local school boards should be debating these issues. (2) Title IX must protect girls' sports for biological girls. In the interest of physical safety and injury alone, this only makes sense. Thank you for making the thoughts of the American people a priority in your future actions. Sincerely, Ms. Pat Cranston (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: kevin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:04:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kevin Hendress (b)(6)

From: mathisons5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:04:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Mathison (b)(6)

From: eri24@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 18:53:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Edward Curtis (b)(6)

From: awk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 18:53:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Alan Keagy (b)(6)

From: bernicedueck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 18:53:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bernice Dueck (b)(6)

From: auntiemeem@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 18:44:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). You should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Education is, and should be, a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. There ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Respectfully, Ms. Marlene Stoick (b)(6)

From: Dlpsteelers1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 18:44:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Douglas Patterson (b)(6)

From: robertgriffith@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 18:44:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Griffith (b)(6)

From: gutierrezaraceli12@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 18:31:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Araceli Monroy (b)(6)

From: resh1442@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 18:20:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bernard Resh (b)(6)

From: jcawilks@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 18:10:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. It is simple fairness to biological females to not have to compete against biological males no matter what hormones or surgeries they use. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Jerry Wilkins (b)(6)

From: lrgayler@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 18:10:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lisa Gayler (b)(6)

From: db11612@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 18:10:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

DeAnna Bormann (b)(6)

From: JnsCraig78@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 17:59:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend James Craig (b)(6)

From: gary.alice99@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 17:47:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Myself as well as many other parents do not feel that gender identity and sexual orientation belong in the K-12 educational curriculum. Sadly, we the American people have let the Department of Education run rampant the last 30 years or so, with no accountability. During this time our educational standing has been on a continual decline. We are now ranked 26th in the world. Shameful! Most likely, this gathering of information on the enforcement of Title IX will result in the Department of Education imposing its' will upon the people, to implement policies that will continue with the indoctrination of our American children with progressive social agendas and anti-American ideologies. This is unacceptable. The Department of Education would better serve our country if they were to consider overhauling the entire educational system. Ditch the the desire to crucify western culture and it's Judeo Christian values. Instead focus on the basics reading, writing, math, American history vs revisionist history and technology. The Department of Education facilitates but should not dictate curriculum. Also the Department of Education should remember that Title IX protections exist for girls' sports. Females and males are biologically different therefore allowing a male to compete in a women's sport is unfair. Males are biologically stronger. Also, females do not want to be sharing a locker room with one of the opposite sex. Our female athletes should be protected and allowed their rights under Title IX without political ideology of the left being forced upon them. In closing, biological females should not be forced to compete against a biological male. It is simply unfair! Please consider this as you review the supposed improving of Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Alice Corbett

(b)(6)

From: lynnfriggs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 17:47:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the virtual public hearing about improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Lynn Riggs (b)(6)

From: hugandco@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 17:47:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Susan Kirkpatrick (b)(6)

From: jplindquist@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 17:47:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. In summary -- A government's takeover of education has been tried by numerous countries in the past - with tragic results. I point to Nazi Germany. Where the Nazi government felt that it was the government's job to "indoctrinate" the children and mold them into being good little brownshirts. The result was an entire generation was lost to the ruling party's warped immoral ideology. It is the parents' job the instill morals and virtues in their children - values that are seldom found in those in government. It is NOT the government's job to forcefully indoctrinate a child. Stay out of education!!! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! James Lindquist (b)(6)

From: rev.riggs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 17:47:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the virtual public hearing about improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Lee Riggs (b)(6)

From: karlamoldovan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 17:36:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karla Moldovan [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: cmdoll@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 17:36:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Clete Doll (b)(6)

From: Jaundey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 17:36:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judith Browning (b)(6)

From: kathleen.headrick@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 17:26:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathleen Headrick (b)(6)

From: lildutchgirl.k@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 17:26:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Kelsey Gjesdal (b)(6)

From: dbeauchemin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 17:15:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Beauchemin (b)(6)

From: jeholm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:53:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jane Holm (b)(6)

From: t_grnwd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:53:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tammy Greenwood (b)(6)

From: Oogaj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:53:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Georgia Hill (b)(6)

From: danielw.miller@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:53:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dan Miller Northwest (b)(6)

From: surf1dana@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:43:12 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dana Sorenson (b)(6)

From: t8trk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:43:12 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Samuel Mills (b)(6)

From: odonnell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:43:12 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, NOW is the time you should respect parental rights and protect schoolchildren, particularly young girls! I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Randall and Marilyn O'Donnell (b)(6)

From: gardenquilts@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:31:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael and Mrs. Terry Poor (b)(6)

From: rmcass@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:31:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rachel Cassada (b)(6)

From: salliehurley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:31:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sallie Hurley (b)(6)

From: bonnieps227@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:19:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Bonnie Semple (b)(6)

From: debbiehealy58@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:09:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Debbie J Healy (b)(6)

From: niveau1982@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:09:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Neveau (b)(6)

From: kluesner.bb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:09:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. We want our children to learn the truth, not some ideology that harms our children. It is a biological fact that boys and girls are different physically. This is settled science!! Title IX protections are to be based on sex, not identity. God made them male and female. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Bridget Kluesner

(b)(6)

From: bp_todd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 15:58:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Brian Todd (b)(6)

From: mehoch1934@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 15:58:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miriam Hochstetler (b)(6)

From: ichristine@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 15:47:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am asking you to protect Title IX! Protect Fairness! Call it XX and XY Sports if you have to, but the Biden Administration is disenfranchising ALL GIRLS in the country for the sake of a few and this is not a fair or ethical solution! GIRLS are going to become bitter, hurt and angry and simply drop out and this is BAD PRESS for everyone involved. If Transgenders want to compete and they don't want to compete with their birth league, give them a 3rd league, but don't disenfranchise and rob them of fairness, privacy and security. This is WRONG for our children. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christine Hackett (b)(6)

From: cgb20lmb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 15:35:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, We need to protect our children from horrendous harm. Our children are our future and they need to be given a real education on reading, writing and arithmetic not on social skills that are based on wickedness. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Cortland Bryant (b)(6)

From: dwpiersma@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 15:26:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. It is very likely that any decisions you and the Biden administration make will end up in the courts. But, of course, that's how you operate, act first and cause mass confusion and pain while the slow wheels of justice roll. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Your job is to make decisions that follow the rule of law. I am a high school Teacher in California and know the importance of sports to our students, parents and community. I am also have two granddaughters and I will fight against anything that permits biological males to compete as girls in sports or any other activity. Any rules made to allow this is immoral and destructive to families. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Our government is overreaching in these matters that should be left up to parents. You are contributing to this abuse of power. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Dick Piersma (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dotbroiles@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 15:26:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dorothy Broiles (b)(6)

From: annettasmall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 15:26:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Annetta Small (b)(6)

From: carolkaiser@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 15:26:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As a retired teacher, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Carol Kaiser (b)(6)

From: hagerman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 15:13:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, This is regarding the U.S. Dept of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please consider the following as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal interference. Politics has no place in K-12 education. Personal beliefs should not forced on parents and students from the federal level. The constitution guarantees freedom for individuals to make their own personal moral decisions. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. There ought to be ample consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary mediators of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like "Queer Theory" being taught to or practiced on their children. (Queer Theory Def: both theory and political action. Definition is impossible, but QT can be summarized as exploring the oppressive power of dominant norms, particularly those relating to sexuality, and the immiseration they cause to those who cannot, or do not wish to, live according to those norms.) Doing so without their consent is a breach of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Steven E Hagerman

(b)(6)

From: Ashley.B.Roth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 15:13:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ashley H Roth (b)(6)

From: grc_shorty79@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 15:02:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Gail Coverdale (b)(6)

From: rachel33scott@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 15:02:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rachel Scott (b)(6)

From: leach_elaine@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:51:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elaine Leach (b)(6)

From: rosaleedorris@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:41:11 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rosalee Dorris (b)(6)

From: laurasyme@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:41:11 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Laura Syme (b)(6)

From: faith.lorenz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:29:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Faith Lorenz (b)(6)

From: Mellow312@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:29:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Melody Janssen (b)(6)

From: christenson.denny@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:29:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Denny Christenson (b)(6)

From: 4pstorcclevlnd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:29:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Craig Cleveland (b)(6)

From: debbiawalsh37@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:18:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deborah Hardy (b)(6)

From: Laurajsimms@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:18:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, please evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Please give extensive consideration for parental rights. Parents are the foundation of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn facts, not political theories. Anything that is true and good for all can be defended openly. Shutting parents out and teaching controversial theories and topics without parents full consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. It also calls into question the truth of the theory and the motives of those pushing it on children, who do not and cannot defend themselves. Children with questions about gender identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of facts about biology, fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Laura Simms (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: schunks@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:18:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sarah Schunk [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Cindyrad2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:07:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cindy Radosevich (b)(6)

From: rtkm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:07:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Curtissa S Boyer (b)(6)

From: ricktucker1957@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 14:07:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Truly, I am appalled that the federal government I pay taxes to would be pushing an agenda that puts biological girls and boys together in locker rooms and showers, and it is a true injustice that some female athletes are losing scholarships because of gender confusion, or outright deception, by some male students. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Rick Tucker

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: roto899@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:56:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I have spent my 40 year career in athletics - as an instructor, coach and athletic administrator. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Frank Rotunda (b)(6)

From: cynthiakann@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:56:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cynthia Kann (b)(6)

From: Bagood129@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:56:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Betty Goodman (b)(6)

From: tarmigan2002@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:56:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Moore (b)(6)

From: eblee42@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:46:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elliot Lee (b)(6)

From: gebrwb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:46:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Garland Brown (b)(6)

From: jwalker12901@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:46:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John & Vicki J Walker (b)(6)

From: amandacmancuso@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:46:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Amanda Mancuso (b)(6)

From: 23aherman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:34:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anthony Herman (b)(6)

From: hawk035s@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:34:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Seth Hawkins (b)(6)

From: mareandjohn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:34:27 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marilee Reasoner (b)(6)

From: h.barbara38@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:26:16 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Huggins (b)(6)

From: janelle90@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:14:17 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Janelle Poland (b)(6)

From: jlazfam07@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:01:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jennifer Laszloffy (b)(6)

From: ariane_romero@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:01:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Melanie Rice (b)(6)

From: perchdriver1964@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 12:50:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Important considerations as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations: 1. Evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a STATE and LOCAL matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. NO CRT OR 1619 . 2. As you continue, there MUST be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory, sex education for kindergardeners eith drah queens, etc being "indoctrinated" on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. And level of morality for that heneration. Children with questions about identity MUST be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. If a transgenders must compete, let them compete as their own unbiological group. No mixing into. You mist keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ms. Sharon Fernandez (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: bblythe1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 12:50:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bradley Blythe (b)(6)

From: mymessagebyleah@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 12:50:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Leah Larkin (b)(6)

From: peterstepp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 12:50:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Peter Stepp (b)(6)

From: lrwells@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 12:42:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Know that most of the country is against what this administration is pushing on them. Parents and grandparents have had enough of these ideologies being pushed onto our kids and grandkids. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lisa Hastings-Wells (b)(6)

From: jeannedebarto@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 12:42:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeanne Debarbo (b)(6)

From: Jetmeetsworld@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 12:42:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janette Willacker (b)(6)

From: musicdocbrdcstr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 12:31:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mark Winters (b)(6)

From: resa.cancro@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 12:31:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Naresa Cancro (b)(6)

From: tomjuodaitis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 12:31:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Thomas Juodaitis (b)(6)

From: metyou@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 12:17:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miriam Thompson (b)(6)

From: mcgeorgerr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 12:06:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rebecca McGeorge (b)(6)

From: cassmcmhn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 11:55:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Catherine McMahon (b)(6)

From: kelijvon@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 11:55:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Keli Simpson (b)(6)

From: hamner.russell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 11:55:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. And please consider that gender mis-identity is a psychological issue not an education issue Thank you! Mr. Russell Hamner (b)(6)

From: roopuglover@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 11:45:48 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Christina Ervin (b)(6)

From: dmpratt6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 11:22:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Pratt [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: quietmanduke3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 11:22:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Troy Dueboay (b)(6)

From: srallen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 11:01:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Steve Allen (b)(6)

From: ratliffmom@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 11:01:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Crystal Ratliff (b)(6)

From: sfsnead@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 10:49:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Snead (b)(6)

From: sjtaylor725@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 10:49:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeffrey Taylor (b)(6)

From: pastorjohnbingham@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 10:49:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor John Bingham (b)(6)

From: hsauer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 10:28:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Hugh Sauer (b)(6)

From: drdanrausch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 10:28:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Daniel Rausch (b)(6)

From: ssf@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 10:16:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Laura Buchal (b)(6)

From: gwritder@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 09:44:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Judd (b)(6)

From: gorge@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 09:44:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Norbert Pfeiffer (b)(6)

From: conoverprinting@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 09:32:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dennis Schell (b)(6)

From: marisarogers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 09:11:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marisa May (b)(6)

From: grammykeithley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 09:00:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ann Keithley (b)(6)

From: lilian12345@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 07:53:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lilian Makar (b)(6)

From: daw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 07:31:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I think that Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Thank you! Mr. David White (b)(6)

From: jhwyatt7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 07:12:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joseph Wyatt (b)(6)

From: pioacayan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 06:47:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Pio Acayan (b)(6)

From: rdhcoll@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 06:38:08 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

M Colleen Danforth (b)(6)

From: jamietucker333777@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 06:14:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Tucker (b)(6)

From: amybhoov@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 05:41:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amy Hoover (b)(6)

From: julieclarkduncan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 05:41:35 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Julie Duncan (b)(6)

From: bruce@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 05:32:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bruce Beasley (b)(6)

From: kjimmer48@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 05:32:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Karen Jimmerson (b)(6)

From: Brownms218@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 05:09:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Michelle Brown [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Brownms218@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 05:09:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Michelle Brown (b)(6)

From: Brownms218@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 05:09:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Michelle Brown (b)(6)

From: danger229.da@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:58:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Darren Anger (b)(6)

From: c8ford@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:58:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lynette L Ford (b)(6)

From: eszterlm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:58:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eszter Lazar-Molnar (b)(6)

From: adriannaboutros@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:58:44 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Jennifer Boutros (b)(6)

From: tcsmith@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:35:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Thomas Smith (b)(6)

From: rsdavison828@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:26:17 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Davison (b)(6)

From: annptl814@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:26:17 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ann Malone (b)(6)

From: chuckodell73@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:26:17 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Charles D O'Dell (b)(6)

From: bobnanharris@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:26:17 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am a retired teacher writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX).. I feel that the federal government should have no say legally to mandate changes in policy . Doing so usurps the parental power which elects local school boards who enact policy. If you proceed to enact Pre.s. Biden's policies on gender identity you will be bringing even more confusion to our children.. Today's kids have been dealing with a myriad of social ills and look to school for normalcy. Science negates multiple identities. Science proves the differences in male and females, esp physically. That is why boys shouldn't be allowed to compete in girls' sports. As a teacher, I referred students ' questions about sexual matters back to their parents. As a parent. I expected my children's teachers to do the same. Parental rights must be observed and respected! Please remember this as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Robert Harris (b)(6)

From: Mdmgrm2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:15:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ginger Morgan (b)(6)

From: cdwhitman2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:15:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Craig Whitman (b)(6)

From: utzmom@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:15:54 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Fern Utz (b)(6)

From: jbswanstrom@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:02:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Barbara Swanstrom (b)(6)

From: Lhicks82@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:02:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Laurie Hicks (b)(6)

From: scline@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 04:02:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Stanley Cline (b)(6)

From: budhelicop@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:54:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Glen Wilson (b)(6)

From: lyndaputz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 16:43:12 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Protect Girls!

You're supposed to be all for promoting "Women's Rights," yet you are hamstringing girls. Why can't biological girls compete with biological girls? When biological boys are allowed to compete in girls sports, you are elevating them to a higher value than girls. Male supremacy wins again???? If a decomposing transgender body was found in a forest, DNA testing would identify it as male. You KNOW males and females are different, equal, but different. Stop hurting girls by making them compete against males who are muscularly superior! Stand up for women's rights! Stop using men to oppress them!!!

From: laurie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 19:27:00 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Re: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, In regards to the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX) I would like to submit some comments. Education has always been under state and local jurisdiction. K-12 education, is a partnership between parents and school districts. Ideologies should not be forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parental rights must be given extensive consideration. Parents have the 1st and last say in their children's education. We send our children to school to learn academics and do not consent to indoctrination of controversial topics like Queer Theory. Doing so without our knowledge or consent is a violation of public trust and our parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to parents for guidance so that we can address the situation as our family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Women have fought for equality and fairness in all areas of life and removing these protections puts us back decades. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. As you review Title IX protections, please keep the above points in view. Thank you! Laurie Smith (b)(6)

From: Darciedrees@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 20:32:23 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Regarding the Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are critical considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First of all, you must evaluate what legal ability you have as you consider to undertake any measures in this area. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Every student deserves access to education free from political divisiveness and tyrannical policies which will harm them. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. It is the parents' right to liberty—an inalienable right enshrined in our constitution and given to us by the Creator—to teach and train their children. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Darcie Rees (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: lilypurplepad2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 22:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Christine Laporte (b)(6)

From: Atcarragino@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:46:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, gender identity and sexual orientation ideologies do not belong in schools. Politics has no place in K-12 education. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents should decide and deal with any identity issues about their child. Schools do not override a parent's role. Schools need to provide education in math, English and science. Additionally, I can't believe this has to be said, but here we are. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ayse Carragino (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: elmathis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 13:01:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Eric & Mrs. Lori Mathis (b)(6)

From: ssrutland@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sun, 30 May 2021 23:06:57 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing out of concern for your review of the Title IX regulations. This concern arises out of the fact that any rule-making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is a federal overreach by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, please keep in mind the issue parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these concerns at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Shirley Rutland (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Supaul18@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:42:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Susan Paul (b)(6)

From: ftrousdale@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:42:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Francesca Trousdale (b)(6)

From: Twowahls1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:42:10 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard and Terry Wahl (b)(6)

From: jenniferhannah@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:32:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Hannah [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Patti.busenitz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Mon, 31 May 2021 03:32:01 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal control. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when wrong ideas are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents deserve their rights and should be the ones to determine their own children's education. They send their children to school to learn and do not have to consent to homosexual theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of educational trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation according to their beliefs. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on God-given sexuality, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their true God-given gender! Please keep these thoughts in mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Patricia Busenitz (b)(6)

(b)(6)