

From: gracefer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Grace Fernandez (b)(6)

From: timolguita@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Timothy Stiemann (b)(6)

From: jillinlg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). For your review of the Title IX regulations, these are important to us: Many of your constituents have gathered and gone over these policies and agree we would demand you examine what legally is your right in these matters. We understand that: "Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level." Parents should make these decisions- we decide What is best for them and love them more than anyone in the world. We send our children to school for education. The issues that are coming before and children such as these are not what we want our education system to turn into. LBGQ/ gender issues are things we do not want in school. These are personal and private and should be kept within the confines of homes/therapy offices and with doctors. "Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex." Thank you! Jill Price (b)(6)

From: sheilahmarshall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Children are the most vulnerable and impressionable in our society. Their parents have every right to choose what their children learn and are exposed to in public school. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Sheilah Marshall

(b)(6)

From: dm982@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dennis Knapik (b)(6)

From: gina-rubio-white@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gina Rubio White (b)(6)

From: glomill2014@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Gloria Miller (b)(6)

From: rlgorman2004@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard Gorman (b)(6)

From: sara.d.walker@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sara D. Walker (b)(6)

From: rickphillips180@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Phillips (b)(6)

From: Junos081@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Muther (b)(6)

From: Lsshops@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lenora Shepard (b)(6)

From: Stefynva@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stefania Kelly (b)(6)

From: backin67@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Rob Dixon (b)(6)

From: bluebird.grammie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Gabrielson (b)(6)

From: dionne014@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Laura VanNatta

(b)(6)

From: mcjintwocities@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cynthia Johnston (b)(6)

From: amromano@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Anthony Romano (b)(6)

From: j08mc64@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jacqueline Culbreath (b)(6)

From: trsgregg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Teresa Gregg (b)(6)

From: dd.walker@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Donald Walker (b)(6)

From: sdb51751@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Steven Burns III (b)(6)

From: atheriac@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Amy Theriac (b)(6)

From: jim_goodrum@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jim Goodrum (b)(6)

From: mtnmomk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Halterman (b)(6)

From: beebarcap@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Barbee Caporal (b)(6)

From: jimknauswayl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Knaus (b)(6)

From: 2dbfam@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. We outlawed the use of performance enhancing steroids in professional sports to protect the fairness of competition. Why would we now allow our precious children to have to compete with biological peers of the opposite gender, who have used hormones and surgical means trying to identify with the opposite gender. It is impossible to change your DNA, and regardless of which gender with which you may wish to identify, our laws and decisions on competition should be based on an individual's biological DNA. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Rebecca Horst (b)(6)

From: mjohnson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Michael Johnson (b)(6)

From: lganem3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lorraine Ganem (b)(6)

From: dqrn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. DebQuinn (b)(6)

From: hmagee48@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Helen Magee (b)(6)

From: bamagrad93@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lisa D Allen (b)(6)

From: Roaclu@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paul Roa (b)(6)

From: randgschwartz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gail Schwartz (b)(6)

From: 1daisy2maisy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cindy Mittleider (b)(6)

From: gbugsy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Byron Goodwin (b)(6)

From: caedmon2005@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please be aware of the following points. 1. Our society, and almost any society I can think of, has always segregated certain spaces and activities by sex. Although this benefits both sexes in allowing privacy and modesty, it is most important for the protection of girls and women, for obvious reasons. 2. Unfortunately, some males engage in bad habits of voyeurism, exhibitionism, and sexual assault. Keeping us males out of the shower and locker rooms, bathrooms, and dorm rooms used by women is a common-sense and effective response to this. If you do not believe me, speak with the corrections people in the UK, who earlier this year placed (at his own request) a male in a women's facility. He was serving time for sexual assault. Amazingly enough, he then molested 3 female inmates before the corrections people thought better of their move. Or Google the 2016 case of 'Heather' in the Toronto women's shelter (sexual assault) or the 2016 case of "Colleen" in the girl's locker room at Evergreen State University (voyeurism and exhibitionism.) Girls and women are also given, under Title IX, the opportunity to compete meaningfully in sports. Biologic/natal males have an indisputable advantage. As one track runner in my state said after 2 biologic males switched from boys' to girls' track and placed first and second, 'I feel like I'm competing for 3rd place.' Thank you! Mark Buchanan (b)(6)

From: richard@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Pope (b)(6)

From: amymillett97@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Amy Millett (b)(6)

From: brushr84bronco@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Brush (b)(6)

From: rskmak57@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr and Mrs Robert Kaminski (b)(6)

From: Chrisjenfree@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Free (b)(6)

From: dmcarlsons@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marilyn Carlson (b)(6)

From: Matkinson72@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Megan Atkinson (b)(6)

From: bassfishone@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, This letter is regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please consider the following: First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Bill Bass (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: ica@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ken Boeve (b)(6)

From: fayenladd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Faye Henderson (b)(6)

From: godly_daniel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Even more than that, it's a We the People matter and as the government you have no right to do something outside of what We the People want. Governments following your type of leadership will not stand, as you can see around the world. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. You in your conscience know they are not the same. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. One day when you stand before God, and you will, you will be called to account for your dictator-like actions. Thank you! Mr. Godly Daniel Mrs. Jincy Daniel (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: berngrant7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bernardette Grant (b)(6)

From: patom2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Lombard (b)(6)

From: bigpray@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eric Ruth (b)(6)

From: kay@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the Title IX regulations and my views as a grandparent. Biological males have no place in competing with females. It is entirely unfair for the girls to compete against males. The data for this is overwhelming and you have to be blind not to see it. Also, education is for scholastic purposes and not Queer training. Parents and grandparents have the right to determine the agenda. All of this should be handled at the local level where the decisions should be made. Parents are getting very upset with the mandates coming from Washington. Below are the considerations you need to review. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Kay Dallavalle (b)(6)

From: mimihapka@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miriam Hapka (b)(6)

From: kabon5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Let's use COMMON SENSE re men, women etc etc etc. Thank you! Mr. Kevin Wirsch (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: 6hagans@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Please evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Politics have hindered our nation's K-12 education in many ways these last few years especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. As a public elementary educator and parent to four children, I ask and encourage you to value the rights of we have as citizens. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbie Hagan (b)(6)

From: vrcb2000@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Virginia Breneman (b)(6)

From: humblehumble@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Bell (b)(6)

From: cd.shields@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Christie Shields (b)(6)

From: beesugarfree5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debra Derr [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: loriclancy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Hello. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some extremely important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you must evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is absolutely an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. This is common sense. This is obvious. I sincerely pray you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Lori Clancy (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: mdlife1323@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marlene Deneen (b)(6)

From: livjmac@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Olivia Hann [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: sweetinspirations1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sanda Goforth (b)(6)

From: ericmccarthy1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eric Mccarthy (b)(6)

From: 2251nana@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lynne Watson (b)(6)

From: steven.fritz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Steven Fritz (b)(6)

From: 1ornative@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Margaret Crowder (b)(6)

From: reid4299@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elaine Watson (b)(6)

From: breihanmichelle1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Michelle Breihan (b)(6)

From: bennette.sue@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg ~ IMPORTANT MESSAGE!, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. THANK YOU ~ THANK YOU ~ THANK YOU! Ms. Susan Bennette (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dianefreeby@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Diane Freeby (b)(6)

From: amandasaddress7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Doug Miller (b)(6)

From: amandasaddress7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amanda Long (b)(6)

From: melbissey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Melvin Bissey (b)(6)

From: shadowruby3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joseph Poirier (b)(6)

From: Torour10@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you about the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; we send our children to school to learn and do not consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on children. Doing so without a parent's consent is a violation of public trust and parent's rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be adhered to based on one's biological sex, and not a gender identity. An individual's personal identification should not come into play. Males and females need to continue to compete separately due to issues of fairness and risk of physical injury. Protecting a female's right to safe sports does not stop a transgender athlete from competing on sports teams agreeing with their biological sex. Please consider these requests as you review Title IX, for they come to you from one concerned parent. Thank you! Theresa O'Rourke (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: lindaobr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Linda O'Brien (b)(6)

From: sherestill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sherrie Estill (b)(6)

From: rebecca@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rebecca Dimit (b)(6)

From: cfoster@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:28:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cheryl Foster (b)(6)

From: eric_eckert@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eric Eckert (b)(6)

From: lbread2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Francine Bunn (b)(6)

From: tina@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tina Oliveri (b)(6)

From: demarree1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joan Demarree (b)(6)

From: joeste@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joel Sterenberg (b)(6)

From: aimeejobenedict727@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Aimee Benedict (b)(6)

From: trsalors@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Timothy Salors (b)(6)

From: Mommacaridi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bernadette Caridi (b)(6)

From: vinman-19@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Vincent Phelan (b)(6)

From: Kathrynlanzetta56@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathryn Lanzetta (b)(6)

From: goedkens@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Charles L. Goedken (b)(6)

From: a.hissong@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I, like many others, am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As a former teacher, I feel that there are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I was one of the activists working for Title IX and am gravely concerned at the abandonment of women's rights! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Amelia Hissong

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: vajohnsons@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diana Johnson (b)(6)

From: pamelafrealy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Larry Frealy (b)(6)

From: anderson_kathy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gail A Anderson (b)(6)

From: Jennifermanthony@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Anthony (b)(6)

From: CarolPalm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Palmquist (b)(6)

From: sandyskaalure@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandy Skaalure (b)(6)

From: ghunt0653@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Greg Hunter (b)(6)

From: Sbriggs5780@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Steve Briggs (b)(6)

From: jjesusfreakk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Michelle S Cortez (b)(6)

From: mfagan02@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mike Fagan (b)(6)

From: micki0713@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michelle Overton (b)(6)

From: dave.kraxberger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Kraxberger (b)(6)

From: megharing@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Meg Haring (b)(6)

From: mfagan02@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mike Fagan (b)(6)

From: freddy.batten@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Freddy Batten (b)(6)

From: rick.demarest@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have Tyrrhenian Ed see a to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. We do need to figure out how to care for students with gender identity concerns but the current bent of the Biden administration doesn't do that effectively. Thank you! Mr. Rick Demarest (b)(6)

From: skibryce@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard Bailey (b)(6)

From: kserotko@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Wright (b)(6)

From: raab.kd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karl Raab (b)(6)

From: grantandlila@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lila Benedict (b)(6)

From: Raechel.richmond@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Raechel Richmond (b)(6)

From: mollyk1167@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Molly Hershberger (b)(6)

From: dianelynagh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diane Lynagh (b)(6)

From: barbserba@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Barbara Serba (b)(6)

From: ivan.lydia.griffin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ivan Griffin (b)(6)

From: Dorothysh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Constance Heintzelman (b)(6)

From: c_d_miller@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Christopher Miller (b)(6)

From: mhall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Markeda Hall (b)(6)

From: castlebar11@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Patrick Stanton (b)(6)

From: dpjubilee@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dorene Pullen (b)(6)

From: wfrance2003@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wayne France (b)(6)

From: ag.hoff@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anna Hoff (b)(6)

From: dffleeman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:16:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Darlene Fleeman (b)(6)

From: willistown@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jacqueline Willis (b)(6)

From: Pabond1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Bond [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Pattyeagan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Eagan (b)(6)

From: arainvill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you, Dr. Alice Rainville (b)(6)

From: purpleorchid.714@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Matt Joyner (b)(6)

From: rickb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rick Bush [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jacmareire14@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Ellen Moran (b)(6)

From: gennygirl808@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Genevieve Teixeira (b)(6)

From: dennis.cox@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dennis Cox (b)(6)

From: Upsdan777@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Daniel Kensinger (b)(6)

From: Amylloesch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Amy Loesch (b)(6)

From: jesus_loves_me_gg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Virginia Gadsby (b)(6)

From: carolfouchet@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Fouchet (b)(6)

From: johnnysierrajr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Johnny Sierra (b)(6)

From: annahoff123@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amy Hoff [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: norcaent@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carl Scheuman (b)(6) (b)(6)

From: joeandtish@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Tish Roberts [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: ddsorensen1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dale Sorensen (b)(6)

From: kelmnop@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Anna Adams (b)(6)

From: sandykaye00@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandra Schmidt (b)(6)

From: angie.whitted@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Angela Whitted (b)(6)

From: dtoby50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dianne Jensen (b)(6)

From: live4theking@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Lately it seems every time we turn around we find that America is at a crossroads. This time it involves our our children, my children (b)(6) Their innocence is being assaulted continuously. The one place that it should not be under attack is at school. Boys are not better than girls and girls are not better than boys. They are simply different, just like you and I. Our differences add richness to our everyday lives. Just think how boring it would be if we were all the same. We should be respecting and honoring these differences not pushing them aside. In order to protect our children we should be requiring people to participate in sports based upon their biological sex and use restrooms designated for their biological sex. When I was younger I was propositioned by someone of the same sex. I didn't do anything to invite this person to approach me. I only treated him with the same kindness and respect that I would treat you with. We should use extreme caution when it comes to things we teach children about sex and gender and error on the side of caution. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. It is best left to be worked out on a local level. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. My children are not there to be experimented on. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. John Smith (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: micwiggley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael S Farrell (b)(6)

From: codger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Donald Powell (b)(6)

From: hammemc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Elaine Hamm [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: shomeryisrael@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Whitley (b)(6)

From: joannahoy301@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations namely the legality and morality of any changes you make, parental and women's/girls' rights. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important, based on sound science, and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. This is purely and simply biology. Protecting women's and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Joanna Hoy (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: av.hoff@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

April Hoff (b)(6)

From: hdhite@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. As a former 3 sport athlete, I find it absolutely appalling at any level for biological males to be allowed to leave their own competitive realm and compete in female events, effectively negating the hard work the female athletes have undertaken and potentially affecting any number of personal records, not to mention scholarship opportunities. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Heather Bilsland (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: tandk91@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kristyn Moury (b)(6)

From: btravers85@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Travers (b)(6)

From: gina@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Gina Cooksey (b)(6)

From: jonlezie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lezlie Steiner [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: lorrikramer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lorri Kramer (b)(6)

From: willistown@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jacqueline Willis (b)(6)

From: melgamble1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Melvin Gamble (b)(6)

From: stratmeyer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Stratmeyer (b)(6)

From: Carrie.perry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carrie Perry (b)(6)

From: grubert@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Thomas Gruber (b)(6)

From: banhall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Betty A. Hall (b)(6)

From: danny@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Danny Alexander (b)(6)

From: jd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor J.D. Tew (b)(6)

From: KarenUSA@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Clayton (b)(6)

From: cmakowski@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carole Makowski (b)(6)

From: jordon.winker@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jordon winker (b)(6)

From: crystalmrtns@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Crystal Martens (b)(6)

From: dragoneye57@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Douglas Clark (b)(6)

From: Dohrnamelia@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amelia Dohrn (b)(6)

From: casale.cathy28@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cathy Casale (b)(6)

From: randygerber@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:05:31 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Randall Gerber (b)(6)

From: dc-gardner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cindy Gardner (b)(6)

From: josephsutschek@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joseph Sutschek (b)(6)

From: deborahar.1964@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deborah Arisman (b)(6)

From: pjohnstone.johnstone@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Johnstone (b)(6)

From: dedradaehn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dedra Daehn (b)(6)

From: VICKIE.BOES@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vickie Boesdorfer (b)(6)

From: Mbsneakers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss MaryBeth Fuller (b)(6)

From: sharon.matney@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sharon Matney (b)(6)

From: nichollsvi2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Regarding the OCR virtual public hearing announcement on information gathering to improve enforcement of Title IX: What legal ability do you have to undertake these measures? What you are doing on gender id/orientation is an abuse of power. States/local govt. entities are the ones who decide this, not the feds. Forcing ideology on young developing girls is wrong. Parents decide kids education: that's been proven for years. They don't want the state teaching garbage. The state is there to teach 2+2, nothing else. Topics should never be taken over by the govt, only by parents. Title IX MUST be protected for women, not identity. There are physical differences that show that men in women's sports hurts them. Transgender folks can still compete either in their chromosomal group or in groups for them. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Vic Nicholls (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: martinjackw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jack Martin (b)(6)

From: zjlg380@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jerry Gale (b)(6)

From: markrpendleton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. And finally, you like all humans, will answer directly to the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Seek His guidance like King David did. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mark Pendleton (b)(6)

From: hainesjillmc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jill Haines (b)(6)

From: danoone@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Daniel Auman (b)(6)

From: rodchowry-ats@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Rodney Chowry (b)(6)

From: nancyperrone@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Nancy Perrone (b)(6)

From: pattymc64@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia McNamara (b)(6)

From: julietteleith@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Juliette Leith (b)(6)

From: dmrc3184@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dominick Costanza (b)(6)

From: blgky71@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Glass (b)(6)

From: oldmissionrose@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gail Holland (b)(6)

From: mjones4200@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael Jones (b)(6)

From: jackycoleman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jacky Coleman (b)(6)

From: Lindabenge3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Bengé (b)(6)

From: glendarowan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:56:53 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Glenda Rowan (b)(6)

From: Kathy.cumber@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathy Cumber (b)(6)

From: iamhis50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Eileen Roth (b)(6)

From: rodfrancisco@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rod Francisco (b)(6)

From: trey.austin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Trey Austin (b)(6)

From: hootiehoostew@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stewart Tammy (b)(6)

From: lakmeter10@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Brian Lakner (b)(6)

From: wetileitall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Charles Selby (b)(6)

From: giuseppedrumsticks@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joseph Baricelli (b)(6)

From: eva.daniel52@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Eva Daniel [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: nancy.roanhorse@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Protect children against LGBT indoctrination. Keep boys and girls sports separate based on true biological sex. Thank you! Mrs. Nancy Roanhorse

(b)(6)

From: 5780gladheart@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Katherine Negrini (b)(6)

From: banolder88@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Becky Nolder (b)(6)

From: toddhathorne@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Todd Hathorne (b)(6)

From: patriotm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, First, I appreciate the opportunity to share my concerns over the direction the US Department of Education is taking regarding our children. My heart is grieved that we have abandoned common sense and science, itself, not to mention the authority of God's Word regarding the Creator's intentions for the human race. Specifically, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Dr. Michael Myers (b)(6)

From: SMStubbs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Scott Stubbs (b)(6)

From: rbartlett2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I am finishing my 37th year as a teacher in the public school system and am very well aware of how this will destroy girls athletics programs. Please protect our girls from this unscientific political experiment. Thank you! Mr. Raymond Bartlett (b)(6)

From: amybeckner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Amy Beckner (b)(6)

From: zipzappy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dave Zornes (b)(6)

From: 3trees@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Thomas Selvaggio (b)(6)

From: b.hersh1946@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). To even think that this is a 'amending/changing/getting rid of Title IX in the manner you are heading towards - - - you gotta be a 'SPECIAL KIND OF STUPID'! Go back to school!!!!!!!!!! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! William Hersh (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: rev_fredd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Freddie Moretz (b)(6)

From: mptowns@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Towns (b)(6)

From: sara.irizarry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sara Irizarry (b)(6)

From: jclobianco@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janice Lobianco (b)(6)

From: beverlyhemmann@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Respectfully Ms. Beverly Hemmann (b)(6)

From: hannah.rinehart@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Hannah Rinehart (b)(6)

From: rmichel645@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. How many females are you preventing from getting scholarships or from being able to attend the college of their choice because you are forcing them to compete against biological males? I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Ruth Michel (b)(6)

From: twbruce@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Thomas W Bruice (b)(6)

From: dsavold@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Savold (b)(6)

From: frankmccarley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Frank Mc Carley (b)(6)

From: mrshobbihorse@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cheryl Davidson (b)(6)

From: Vlr7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vicki Runtich (b)(6)

From: vrice3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Vitena Ross (b)(6)

From: 15wjmb50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Warren J Britz (b)(6)

From: bubba.victorsmith@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Victor Smith (b)(6)

From: qtdx54a@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James T Avery (b)(6)

From: Spell1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, We support protection of children and promoting good health and practices based on their biological sex and encourage you to honor parents in their decision-making roles, not social engineering. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael L Spell (b)(6)

From: Kmpn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Maupin (b)(6)

From: everes@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Veres (b)(6)

From: reiter.cm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Reiter (b)(6)

From: jbooe9@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Juliet Booe (b)(6)

From: scj4281970@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anthony Manfre (b)(6)

From: grammythigpen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Judy Thigpen (b)(6)

From: schwartzrosie2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. This title puts women's right back 50 years. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Rosie Schwartz

(b)(6)

From: larry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Larry Eekhoff (b)(6)

From: denski555@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:44:13 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dennis Kwiatkoski (b)(6)

From: Barbrein88@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. I have always been a very physically active female athlete but also know that there is no way that I could have successfully competed against any 'biologically male' athlete! Additionally, the last thing I would have wanted - and believe is criminal if allowed with these dangerous efforts - would have been to have biological males in any restroom/locker room setting with me as a young female! I was raped at 15 years of age and, thankfully, have survived that experience through counseling and loving family/friends. This administration's RECKLESS AND UNETHICAL DISREGARD for young females is disgusting! First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Barbara Reincke (b)(6)

From: jhysong@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jim Hysong (b)(6)

From: Jyeagle1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jim A Yeagle (b)(6)

From: psalm19.9m@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Whitley (b)(6)

From: imarec43@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rhonda Coker (b)(6)

From: bobstevens@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bob Stevens (b)(6)

From: talltexasag@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Lynn B Weesner Jr. (b)(6)

From: jmcginty2857@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joseph McGinty (b)(6)

From: garyjersild@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Jersild (b)(6)

From: qtdx54a@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ada T Avery (b)(6)

From: robnrach6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you about the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). PLEASE think about these important issues when you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you need to evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I appreciate your attention to these vital considerations. I will pray you will do the right thing. Thank you! Mrs. Rachel England (b)(6)

From: bjm786@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I have two granddaughters for whom I am very concerned about involvement in sports. Their biological physique does not allow fair competition with boys. Title IX recognized this fact back in the 70's and it has worked well for these many years. Why would we want to put our girls in jeopardy and deny them the opportunity to succeed in the sports of their choice? I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Barbara McKinley (b)(6)

From: smccoy59@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan McCoy (b)(6)

From: bentleyrobison@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bentley Robison (b)(6)

From: rjsjyoung@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Joyce Young (b)(6)

From: brianasmith4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, It is common sense that boys should not be playing in girls' sports. Also, I do not want my children to be learning about LGBT in school. Follow God's way. Read Leviticus 18:22. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Briana Smith (b)(6)

From: mackin.bradley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bradley Mackin (b)(6)

From: blkshk139@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. YOU ARE THUS IN OPPOSITION TO THE GOD OF THE BIBLE HE KNOWS YOUR HEART. Thank you! William Black (b)(6)

From: tlorimer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tom Lorimer (b)(6) (b)(6)

From: asmurphy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anita Murphy (b)(6)

From: swp1984@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Maureen Peeler (b)(6)

From: adonica.moore@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Adonica Moore (b)(6)

From: kjbaer92@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kathy Baer (b)(6)

From: vickiepierre@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Victoria Pierre (b)(6)

From: bfgdm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Matt Prusecki Jr. (b)(6)

From: miracleinc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Again, you have no rights here under the Constitution. You should stop now. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are very important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I'm praying that you take my suggestions to heart and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. D. Coffey (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dondavis85@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Don Davis (b)(6)

From: nsmith4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nancy Smith (b)(6)

From: brundagealan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Alan Brundage (b)(6)

From: jhysong@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:32:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jim Hysong (b)(6)

From: tarr4life@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amy Tarr (b)(6)

From: susansutphin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Susan Sutphin (b)(6)

From: yrmysunshine2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Bennig [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: judynorton50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Thomas Norton (b)(6)

From: wraavan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wayne Van Andel (b)(6)

From: chadcash03@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Chad Cash (b)(6)

From: juliedaugherty89@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Julie Daugherty (b)(6)

From: samuel.lyon85@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Samuel Lyon (b)(6)

From: psterczela@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Peter Sterczela (b)(6)

From: elfygirl99@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Emily Bendler (b)(6)

From: refister@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard Fister (b)(6)

From: robertbowman563@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert K Bowman (b)(6)

From: lhbenfield@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Leslie Benfield (b)(6)

From: amarho2016@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amanda Rhodes (b)(6)

From: fredryb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Fred Rybczynski (b)(6)

From: tamibowen8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tamra Bowen (b)(6)

From: Christinamh5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christina Johnson (b)(6)

From: ghmeiners@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gordon Meiners (b)(6)

From: brookaltmann1998@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Brook Matheis (b)(6)

From: cdgillen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carla Gillen (b)(6)

From: martha21w@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Martha Waltz (b)(6)

From: abocik@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:22:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alean Zeiler Bocik (b)(6)

From: coffeejean5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jean Ecroyd (b)(6)

From: rnenlow@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Enlow (b)(6)

From: kreiserpaul@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. In the realm of sports it is inconsistent with what is considered normal for boys and girls to allow biological males to compete with females on the same field and not distort the results and in fact destroy the ability of the girls in the sport to remain truly competitive with their counterparts. This is not what the creation of female sports was intended to produce. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Paul J. Kreiser (b)(6)

From: jcpalmer25@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jack Palmer (b)(6)

From: Lindamc63@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda McClain (b)(6)

From: snuffy2u@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gary Allen (b)(6)

From: seaglass263@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Barbara Kulick (b)(6)

From: heidiannebonner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Heidi Bonner (b)(6)

From: btblackcat@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Brad Thomas (b)(6)

From: kgizowski@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathryn Gizowski (b)(6)

From: hribick@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Stephen Hribick [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: ruffsimi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Howell (b)(6)

From: hanleys.j.s@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James L. Hanley (b)(6) Mr. James Hanley (b)(6)
(b)(6)

From: gretchcant@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Gretchen Canterbury (b)(6)

From: ccwingard@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christine [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: hilbyj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Hilb (b)(6)

From: bixlerjd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jacob Bixler (b)(6)

From: bsmith5254@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barry Smith (b)(6)

From: crjzschwarz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rebecca Schwarz (b)(6)

From: pastorpete53@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend William E Petersen (b)(6)

From: bross@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beth Ross (b)(6)

From: LMDLombard@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lynn Lombard (b)(6)

From: beverlystrouth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:11:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Beverly Strouth (b)(6)

From: bigglewis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory, Gender Identity and CRT being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Biological Males and Females have very different muscle mass and bone structure which almost always make males stronger, faster and more rigorous than females. If you really want to make it fair, create a transgender teams. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Gerry Lewis (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: buddyramey2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Hubert Ramey (b)(6)

From: Maureen.Zanoni@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maureen Zanoni (b)(6)

From: jamesmichaellawrence@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Lawrence { (b)(6) }

From: patrick.vaughan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patrick Vaughan (b)(6)

From: roxettagroenen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Roxetta Groenen (b)(6)

From: ministryconnection@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rhonda Thiele (b)(6)

From: jmariedickey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joan Dickey II (b)(6)

From: johnfam@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dale Johnson (b)(6)

From: sallylr57@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sally Rhodes (b)(6)

From: ssallywags@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Sally Wagner None

From: ps14009@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Patricia Schaffer (b)(6)

From: dscarpellino@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Danielle Scarpellino (b)(6)

From: Beladianna@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dianna James (b)(6)

From: clarejameson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Clare Jameson (b)(6)

From: pewalton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Phyllis E Walton (b)(6)

From: sue.feeder@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Feeder [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Delliot@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Elliot (b)(6)

From: gardner1a@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). What is happening is utter madness! I read about men who want to be women, women who want to be men, and apparently neuter individuals who want to be of neither sex. Now, as if these aberrations are not enough, we have government edicts forcing this nonsense on perfectly normal people, on families, on CHILDREN! THIS MUST STOP!! First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on sexual identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports must be honored based on actual, physical sex, not this invented concept of "gender identity." Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Thank you! James Gardner (b)(6)

From: romans58road@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barry Reiter (b)(6)

From: Fodderwing1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jennifer Rowell (b)(6)

From: tripplej1959@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Joseph [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jpbell78@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 10:01:05 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Bell (b)(6)

From: cstaylor327@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carolyn Taylor (b)(6)

From: mcgaeth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael A. Gaeth (b)(6)

From: actannersmith@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Andrea Smith (b)(6)

From: ronkrifchin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ronald Krifchin (b)(6)

From: tmueth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Terry Mueth (b)(6)

From: jjbobolia@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, We are writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. We hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. James & Mrs. Jennifer Bobolia

(b)(6)

From: mzenk1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mike Zenk (b)(6)

From: ron.carpenter51@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ron Carpenter (b)(6)

From: cuto.ashley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ashley Couto-Tewell (b)(6)

From: kevanchuck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kenneth Evanchuck (b)(6)

From: psalm63burtch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. I firmly agree with the well written argument above. This instruction and influence should remain with the parents not the government enforcing an agenda that is of a minority group and not a mainstream of practice. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Pamela Burtch (b)(6)

From: rdianeholden@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diane Holden (b)(6)

From: pastorjosh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joshua Hernandez (b)(6)

From: rydermom3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Brenda Ryder (b)(6)

From: ronkrifchin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ronald Krifchin (b)(6)

From: phyllhavensfw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:48:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). For years, the federal government has been extorting whatever hair brained scheme they wish to pursue from the states. This must stop but it is very apparent in the most recent and absolutely mindless execution of edicts that allow athletically superior males to compete against females in sports. The federal government has no business meddling in the what is rightfully state business. No federal agency is empowered to rescind a law passed by congress. Recent edicts by your regime have done this to title 9 sports. This law was setup to protect women's sports while your meddling driven by a vocal group of unhinged sexual deviants and communists in our government seeks to harm it. No male simply by saying he feels like a female should be empowered to compete unfairly in women's sports. It is un-American, it is un-fair, it is inhuman and beyond any logic to justify in a majority of the people's minds. Stop it! This communist coup has gone far enough and will be dealt with harshly in the future. Thank you!

Phyll Havens (b)(6)

From: holly@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Holly Marinkoch (b)(6)

From: Moodye123@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Moody (b)(6)

From: harnishtb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Terrance Harnish (b)(6)

From: woodystang@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Keith Bailey (b)(6)

From: kaymgray60@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kay Gray (b)(6)

From: mht921023@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Tenos (b)(6)

From: shannonatconnected@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Shannon Waltman (b)(6)

From: marlena.120.jones@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marlene Jones (b)(6)

From: isorianoiii1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. If we have age requirements for drinking, driving, or voting, then why are we thinking that children can decide or have the mental maturity to decide their gender. If we really want to advance gender equality, then why are we making the playing field, literally, unequal. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Isidro B Soriano III

(b)(6)

From: map4101@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Powers (b)(6)

From: robert@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Robert Roper (b)(6)

From: luginbil@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ron W Luginbill (b)(6)

From: herb.genung@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:37:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Herb Genung (b)(6)

From: bob_scruton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Scruton (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: mpsebera@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mark Sebera (b)(6)

From: julie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Julie Leppert (b)(6)

From: Fischer.roberta@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Roberta Fischer (b)(6)

From: fursty@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jim Furstenberg (b)(6)

From: jeanchiappelli@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gloria Chiappelli (b)(6)

From: dtwolfe1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daniel Wolfe (b)(6)

From: fcoffman44@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Franklin Coffman (b)(6)

From: wesley.r.johnson6.civ@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wesley Johnson (b)(6)

From: jonfsbg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jonathan Farnham (b)(6)

From: tllovelady@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I am very concerned about the politicization and propaganda of text being introduced through the education system. Our education institutes are not here to indoctrinate our children they are here to educate i.e. reading, writing, arithmetic, social studies, government etc... The parent is responsible for teaching and influencing their children with regard to moral issues not the government. At point is the question of definition of male and female. This use to not be a question. How confusing for young impressionable children to start asking are you male or female? It is reprehensible. How are they suppose to know if the adults don't know. The answer is in science/ biology. There is a biological difference between male and female down to DNA which cannot be erased with surgery or drugs. It is unfair to girls/females to compete with biological males in sports. If that were not the case we would have neutral gender sports. There would be no men and women divisions. Simply because a male identifies as a female does not negate their physical advantage. Note you don't hear any reverse complaints that biological females are invading male division of sports. That is because females identifying as males still can't compete physically at a level to threaten the biological male's position. If it didn't matter than those female identifying as male would be able to compete on the same level as the their biological males peers. That is obviously not the case. Title IX was created to provide protection for women. Protection that was deemed needed and enacted by law through elected officials. The Education Department is required to follow the law and not try to circumvent or redefine it's meaning. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ms. Tammy Lovelady (b)(1)

(b)(6)

From: joankefr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joan Kieffer (b)(6)

From: Pittsmom31@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anita Pitts

From: thewowlady@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Although this is a "cookie cutter" letter, it expresses my own thoughts too well to try to write something that more accurately reflects my attitude toward current education policies. The United States is still a republic and child rearing is still the parents' responsibility. Please stop the actions of the Biden government's attempts circumvent parental authority. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janet Grine Loizeaux (b)(6)

From: csimone9@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carole Simone (b)(6)

From: whitedixie58@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:26:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Biological females are stripped of their right to excel in competitive sports when forced to compete against biological males. This administration is taking this hard fought right away from these females it has claimed to support. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Dixie White (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: rodger.wesch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:15:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rodger Wesch (b)(6)

From: rybar@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:15:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Leeanna Ryba (b)(6)

From: joannemainer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:15:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joanne Mainer (b)(6)

From: nlackeymk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:15:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nicholee Lackey (b)(6)

From: csiena@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:15:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Siena (b)(6)

From: guido539@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:15:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Guido Nicaud (b)(6)

From: patriciamarseglia@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:15:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, give total consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Title IX protections for girls' sports must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Thank you for keeping this at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide review of Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Patricia Marseglia (b)(6)

From: rjmteach@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:15:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Regina McMillian (b)(6)

From: lisagarmstrong@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:04:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. And not racial agenda Thank you! Greg Armstrong (b)(6)

From: trg1040@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:04:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Bonnie Ryan (b)(6)

From: michaelpeppe@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:04:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael Peppe (b)(6)

From: mannipu2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:04:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Paul Richenburg (b)(6)

From: duranthilary@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:04:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Hilary Durant (b)(6)

From: Reskew@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 09:04:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I think there are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Title IX was written in 1972, thus life was totally different, back then, the Department of Education was totally different, back then. You are trying to cram current thinking, which I consider wrong, into a current agenda, which has nothing to do with education, in the classic sense of the word. First, you should evaluate what "legal right" and ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration! Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, or even 12 plus education especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn academics, the old saying was "reading, writing and arithmetic", history, math, science, economics and government (our Constitutional Republic (not Republican government) government not democracy) and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex, or with similar "chosen" assignment gender. I seriously doubt if anyone will read these comments, but I love expressing my thoughts and opinions on things I really care about, my children and grand children. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ron Eskew (b)(6)

From: debbiLhall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:53:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbi Hall (b)(6)

From: mannipu2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:53:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Paul Richenburg (b)(6)

From: vnlinder@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:53:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Be aware of the following as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations: Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. You have no legal right to interfere. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; we send our children to school to learn, and we do not consent to Queer Theory being taught to, or practiced on, our children. Doing so without our consent is a violation of parental rights. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Transgender athletes should compete in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Keep these thoughts at the forefront of your mind and as you review Title IX. Thank you! Virginia Linder [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: timme2004@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:53:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Timme [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: cmesser0001@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:53:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I'm saddened that eliminating these protections are even a possibility for girls. Thank you! Miss Christina Messer (b)(6)

From: katheswartz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:53:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathleen Swartz (b)(6)

From: tmortenson53@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:53:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, My wife and I are concerned about your plans for Title IX. We urge you to consider our thoughts. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Thank you! Dr. Terry J Mortenson (b)(6)

From: grumpypj59@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:53:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Peyton Johnston (b)(6)

From: Lauren.welch99@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:53:55 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lauren Welch (b)(6)

From: douglas_carr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:42:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Douglas Carr (b)(6)

From: dianawtt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:42:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diana Witt (b)(6)

From: jsahan777@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:42:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Nahas (b)(6)

From: DDupie2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:42:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you proceed with your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Danene Dupie (b)(6)

From: psychcare613@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:42:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gary Freedman Rechov Derech Hahar (b)(6)

From: timc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:42:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tim Chastain (b)(6)

From: Djflynn78@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:42:40 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbie Flynn (b)(6)

From: franzgerl1959@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:31:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Franz Gerl (b)(6)

From: gentryfire@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:31:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Gentry (b)(6)

From: jdfs1953@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:31:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jon Farris (b)(6)

From: ba.1961@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:31:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alan Beck (b)(6)

From: dnrkup@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:31:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Ronald Kupper (b)(6)

From: lchildress800@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:31:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, You are in a pivotal position to influence our country for good or ill. Current political moves are making our children, girls in particular, victims in an awful game of political chess. I refer to the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I'm sure you are aware of most of the facts in this situation but there are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you evaluate the Title IX regulations. Please be aware of the limitations to your legal ability to undertake any measures of pursuit. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, reserved to the states specifically to protect them by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you decide to continue with this effort, extensive consideration must be given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or especially practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a gross violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the center of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. LuEllen Childress (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: atkisond@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:31:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms Diane Atkison (b)(6)

From: nappyjroots@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:31:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Chris Carano (b)(6)

From: proverbs99a@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:31:22 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jerome Pietrzak (b)(6)

From: chavivah@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:20:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

TO Acting Director Goldberg Re: The U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). 1. Education is supposed to be a state and local matter. Putting politics into K-12 education is wrong, especially when foisting policies that go against common sense. 2. If my child were to want to pretend to be an animal such as a goat or cow, or to be a tree, or anything else, we might indulge him for a brief while but we'd worry about his mental health if he insisted for too long. Yet policies are being foisted upon communities that if a boy wants to pretend to be a girl (or vice-versa), we are to encourage them in that instead of seriously addressing their issues with reality. 3. Children should not be encouraged to believe that they might be a gender that they are not. This is not only silly but can cause damage to young impressionable minds. The idea that a person might be one gender trapped in another's body has no basis in fact. Instead it would make sense to encourage children to know that gender roles are flexible--boys can play with toys typically used by girls and still be boys (and vice versa). 4. Allowing those whose bodies are biologically male to play in sports with girls undermines all the efforts of recent decades to give girls a chance to perform well without boys, who are typically built with stronger muscles and bigger bodies, giving them no chance to shine. Allowing those born with male bodies to participate in female sports will ruin many girls' chances for trophies, scholarships, increased self-esteem, and more. As you review Title IX, let common sense and girls' rights be remembered. If you want a place for children who are confused about gender to play, then you really need to eliminate gender-identified sports and the advantages they have given to so many girls. Thank you! Cheryl Trzasko (b)(6)

From: Sopheryork@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:20:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Daniel F F Sopher (b)(6)

From: cwalton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:20:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James E Walton (b)(6)

From: twosmeltz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:20:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Janice Smeltz (b)(6)

From: banjoman1968@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:20:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

William Dodd (b)(6)

From: kzie2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:20:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kay Wright (b)(6)

From: mararias@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:20:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mragaret Arias (b)(6)

From: pmharris71@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:09:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Pam M Harris (b)(6)

From: jejose@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:09:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Josei [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: pastorjohnrabby@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:09:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John rister (b)(6)

From: karen.baumgart47@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:09:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Baumgart (b)(6)

From: caninechum@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:09:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lorrie L Ege (b)(6)

From: gagnon_ministries@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 08:09:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Philip Gagnon (b)(6)

From: barb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:59:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Barb Bolin (b)(6)

From: dasims67@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:59:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Delores Sims (b)(6)

From: damian.riggs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:59:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Damian Riggs (b)(6)

From: jameslt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:59:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Thurston (b)(6)

From: jekgren@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:59:07 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jacqueline Ekgren (b)(6)

From: maryrgcutler@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:47:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary R Cutler (b)(6)

From: cliffjwilkinson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:47:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Cliff Wilkinson (b)(6)

From: Selmayo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:47:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Selwyn May None

From: abraham.gonzales@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:47:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Abraham Gonzales (b)(6)

From: Jrchild2007@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:47:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeanette Childers (b)(6)

From: maidel82115@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:36:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Camarena (b)(6)

From: partner1313@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:36:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As a retired teacher who experienced public education prior to and after the formation of the US Department of Education, federal regulations limit local input. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they are their child's primary advocate. Parents send their children to school to continue building the foundation necessary for a life-long learner. That would entail basic skills, as well as, advanced critical thinking. Political ideologies should not be a component of that curriculum. Implementing controversial political policies is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. As an educator, each child has individual needs that should be met at the local level with the parent at the forefront of the decision-making process.

Jane Hulse (b)(6)

From: mickimc2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:36:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Title IX calls for common sense - not social engineering. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Micki McLaughlin (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: a59430802sojourner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:36:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ronald Lee Sells (b)(6)

From: jonovichd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:36:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard Jonovich (b)(6)

From: garywilson32@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:25:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gary Wilson (b)(6)

From: bpnesbit@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:25:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's stance. I take great offense because you have stopped protecting our children the the school system. How dare you allow this to happen? This is sickening & very tragic. Politics don't belong in the classroom. I won't tolerate this! Thank you! Byron Nesbit (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Jinjerlee11@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:25:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule-making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pamela Walls (b)(6)

From: femesare@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:25:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Melody Joe (b)(6)

From: cbowman5275@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:14:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Bowman (b)(6)

From: rvmalott@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:14:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Ron Malott (b)(6)

From: damom40@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:14:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nancy Cooney (b)(6)

From: robinson.carla.a@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:14:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Carla Robinson (b)(6)

From: kennedy.ken4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:14:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ken Kennedy (b)(6)

From: puterman7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:14:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Lloyd Landry (b)(6)

From: johncraiglarson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:14:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Larson [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: gjfitch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:14:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gerald Fitch (b)(6)

From: kellwood6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:14:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dale Strickland (b)(6)

From: patriciamabbiss@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:14:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Abbiss (b)(6)

From: marilyn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:14:58 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marilyn Beaubien (b)(6)

From: sawkrnut@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Anthony Velasquez (b)(6)

From: joellenbranham@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Jo Ellen Branham (b)(6)

From: johnmeadors5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor John Meadors (b)(6)

From: kstueckle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathryn Stueckle (b)(6)

From: res0b261@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandra Morrison (b)(6)

From: asuthard@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Suthard (b)(6)

From: joyita310@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joyita Sio (b)(6)

From: mcaapappas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carolyn Pappas (b)(6)

From: ann_tavares@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Ann Johnson Tavares (b)(6)

From: gloriawalsh2001@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gloria Bray (b)(6)

From: vetluvr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Keith Adams (b)(6)

From: Dr.judycampbell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please note that female and male physical strength and abilities differ greatly. To allow men to compete as females within the sports arena is physically unfair because of the physical differences. Males should NOT be allowed to compete with women based on the gender identity (just because they feel like being a female on any particular day). This is unjust and illegal. Again, such determinations must be based on state and local requirements, not national rules. If transgenders wish to compete within the sports arena, allow them to compete as transgender groups, not to be identified as female or male genders. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Judy Campbell (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: hollandia@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 07:03:20 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Regarding your work on Title 9, your job is NEITHER repeat IS NEITHER social engineering nor parenting. Education is protected from federal interference, by force of law. Parents know what is good for their children a damned better than you "feds" do! As far as gender is concerned, anyone with half a brain can identify a person as male or female, despite any screwy ideas anyone might have to the contrary. A person's wishful thinking about themselves does not in any way affect the reality of their gender. It never has and it never will. Remember this when you are considering Title 9. Thank you! Kurt Brandon (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: juliegeetoo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:53:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Julie Gates (b)(6)

From: semisa0426@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:53:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Misa (b)(6)

From: julia.yano@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:53:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Julia Yano (b)(6)

From: inchristjesus@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:53:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Denise Artzer [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: matteson.jm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:53:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As an elementary school administrator I spent many years teaching young people to interact successfully on the playground. Students were taught to jointly stand up to and not tolerate bullying. The virtue fairness was an essential value. "Fairness works for everyone," was a catch phrase children understood and learned to apply. It seems obvious to me that some of the bullies making the rules today should go back to our school playgrounds at learn. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Jon Michael Matteson

(b)(6)

From: katherinefbell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:53:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Katherine Bell (b)(6)

From: huntreg1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:53:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Regina Hunt (b)(6)

From: ralph_merletti@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:53:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ralph Merletti (b)(6)

From: nosleep4paula@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:42:08 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Paula Strome (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: mzeptman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:42:08 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Micki Zartman (b)(6)

From: brianlovesgod@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:42:08 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Brian Adel (b)(6)

From: tcsmith@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:42:08 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Thomas Smith (b)(6)

From: alamotime@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:42:08 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Timothy McNicoll , MD (b)(6)

From: david.w.caudle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:42:08 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend David W Caudle (b)(6)

From: bstone058@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:42:08 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Stone (b)(6)

From: lorrieb316@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:42:08 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lorrie Byers (b)(6)

From: chrismendell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:42:08 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Christian Mendell (b)(6)

From: pilimili5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:42:08 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maria Marcotte (b)(6)

From: ARTHUR.TULAK@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please stop the destruction of American education with radicalism. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Arthur Tulak, Ed.D. (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: gfgarber@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Greg Garber (b)(6)

From: Rob46esebago@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you about the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I'm concerned as a parent and ask you to respect parental rights and protect our children from the proposed rules by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation. The executive order aimed at removing Title X protections for women and girls' sports, and the executive order with the goal of entrenching the LGBT agenda into schools is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Please give extensive consideration to parental rights. We as Parents are the primary arbiters of our children's education. We send our children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on our children. Doing so without our parental consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Rob A Poissant (b)

(b)(6)

From: dietrichgbuss@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Dietrich Buss (b)(6)

From: lisadsky@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Kowalsky (b)(6)

From: cdrod2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you as the father of a 16 year old daughter who plays multiple sports regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Rule-making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex, or perhaps there should be a new competition category for non-binary individuals who have chosen not to identify with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Rodney James Meyers (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: fredcaval@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Fred Cavallucci (b)(6)

From: dvristine@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Ristine (b)(6)

From: hbshannonw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Shannon Winter (b)(6) P.S. It's time to remember who you work for!

From: nreed107@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nancy Reed (b)(6)

From: Kevans007@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Papillon (b)(6)

From: dietrichgbuss@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Most importantly truth about biological reality must come first and foremost. Every person born has all their billions of cells stamped with chromosomes determining the gender: either male or female. Body characteristics then develop in making them either male or female. There is not third set of chromosomes in any race or culture anywhere in the world. Asserting that there are more than two genders is simply delusional. Given this hard fact, both the Obama and Biden administrations have pushed policies that are based on delusional premises contrary to reality. Facts are stubborn things. To be sure, there are young people who are dysphoric and should be given reality-based guidance in light of the fixed nature of their genitalia. Mature guidance will not reinforce their dysphoria but put them on the path of accepting their God-given gender and help them to face realities of life. Such guidance helps kids become responsible adults. I hope you keep these thoughts at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. the legislation creating Title IX was based based on the premises of two sexes: male and female. Congress never passed legislation interpreting sex as gender identity. This is where the recent Bostock decision muddled the waters by conflating "gender identity" with sex: male and female genders. Parents have a right to stand up against delusional mentality of contemporary left-wing culture of the Biden administration. They want their boys and girls to grow up as mature men and women who can face reality including their maleness and femaleness. To put forward policies for boys and girls that distort reality will sooner or later prove destructive for the individuals and society. We already have too many delusional young people in cities such as Portland and Seattle. the wokeness of gender identify policy and politics is a barometer of a culture in decline. Biden's gender policy is making for a trajectory of steeper cultural decline. Very sincerely, Dietrich Buss

Ph.D. (b)(6)

From: seekers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:30:59 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please consider our concerns regarding the public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, please evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, please give extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on other teams. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Dawn Davidson (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: s.marie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:19:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Shirleen Rannals (b)(6)

From: jimsjoy2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:19:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. We are talking about our most precious gifts as humans when we discuss our children. No one knows them nor can make decisions for and with them as well as do and can we. Please allow us to care for them the best way possible. They are OUR children. Thank you! Mrs. Joyce Nord (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: mary.luttrell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:19:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Luttrell (b)(6)

From: engelmohrtheo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:19:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Theo Engelmohr (b)(6)

From: irenefaye333@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:19:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. I would suggest making a separate gay lesbian athletic division so they can compete correctly Within in their specific athletic prowess division. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Irene Daleo (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: nellew82@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:19:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Nelda Lewis (b)(6)

From: lindawagner24@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:19:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Linda Wagner (b)(6)

From: marymac2791@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:19:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marian McBride (b)(6)

From: don.e.henson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:19:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please use some common sense and real science data when you consider this issue as opposed to Marxist social engineering. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Don Henson (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: stevenhamburger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:19:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Steven Hamburger (b)(6)

From: tutorprof@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:19:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ronald Stevens (b)(6)

From: milthorst@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations, please be aware of these very important considerations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule-making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions in mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Milton Horst

(b)(6)

From: tlstraub@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Terry Straub (b)(6)

From: sastiner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Stephen Stiner (b)(6)

From: christine.adelman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christine Adelman (b)(6)

From: meilee.tseng@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mei Lee Doong (b)(6)

From: agw50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Anthony Woods (b)(6)

From: ladykayealto@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kaye Pescatello (b)(6)

From: thechief324@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Arthur Brown (b)(6)

From: johnrcarlson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Carlson (b)(6)

From: erdeamicis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Elizabeth DeAmicis (b)(6)

From: jerrilynnnc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jerri Lynn Charron (b)(6)

From: rpricks1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Ricks (b)(6)

From: synkowicz2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Anne S Synkowicz (b)(6)

From: norwaybound7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dwight Talbot (b)(6)

From: riyoalaska@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ricky Bryant (b)(6)

From: sueannjac@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sue-Ann Jacobson (b)(6)

From: Jenngillette@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Gillette (b)(6)

From: dpross@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I love freedom, and our way of life in America, where no one is legally discriminated against, nor legally handicapped in any way. Please preserve our way of life. The reality of the genetic unequal physical ability between biological males and females (of any species) is where there must be reasonable accommodation made for such inherent disadvantages experienced by one gender against another if we are to be fair. That is the reason for having "Girls/Boys" and "Men's/Women's" Sports in the first place. Accommodating a minority by creating an arbitrary rule which disadvantages the majority is not equality, it is handicapping the majority. If there is a need for "Trans " Sports, then let them build it, don't let them deconstruct the Sports and Competitions which have been engaged in and enjoyed by generations for years. Thank you for your service! Thank you! Mr. David Ross (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Shandabernadette@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Please consider what this will do for generations to come. We cannot continue to do what everyone else is doing because we are worried about the backlash. Thank you! Shanda Oxendine (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: conita777@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I have been a school teacher and coach since 1992. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Connie Cooper (b)(6)

From: jagnet@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Margaret Groetsch (b)(6)

From: drlsellis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Luanne Ellis (b)(6)

From: rwgriffin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 06:08:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Randy Griffin (b)(6)

From: kandjbradley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jeanette E Bradley (b)(6)

From: pamelazuzi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ann Harris (b)(6) アーリントン バージニア州
アメリカ合衆国

From: barbaraesau10@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Esau (b)(6)

From: vguise@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex (science) not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Lynne Guise (b)(6)

From: lkpupek@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lynn Pupek (b)(6)

From: johnvespinosa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Espinosa (b)(6)

From: wininger5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cynthia Wininger (b)(6)

From: ChildOfValor@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Glenn Forman

From: pegfiggins@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Margaret Figgins (b)(6)

From: candacecade@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Candace Cade (b)(6)

From: prayforus@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Douglas Decarlo (b)(6)

From: Darcie.Saruwatari@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Darcie Saruwatari (b)(6)

From: DanielandRose@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Garvin (b)(6)

From: ljcrilly@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Already, my 7 year old granddaughter has been forced to read a book in school about a boy who wants to dress like a girl. The book is called, "Jacob's Dress" and is listed in the Chicago Public School system as a preferred book addressing LGBT issues. She is a small child. Leave her out of this. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ms. Laura Lynn Jackson (b)(6)

From: jssisneros@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John J Sisneros (b)(6)

From: klabiaga@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kara Labiaga (b)(6)

From: jeanne.schoettle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jeanne Schoettle (b)(6)

From: miriamgalgar@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:57:56 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miriam Garcia (b)(6)

From: beckyns@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I agree with the writer of this letter, and beg you wholeheartedly to respect the rights of girls and women who desire to compete with others whose DNA matches theirs. The superstars can at least still vie for a position the team, but may be second string. But the ones who would have to compete for the backup roles will find themselves off the team! That IS NOT fair, so please do not take away the joy of team sports from our young women and girls! I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rebecca North Stephens (b)(6)

From: kat.veliz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kathleen Veliz (b)(6)

From: abweskin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Roberta West [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: beckyjomcd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion! Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children! Doing so without their consent is a flagrant violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that PARENTS can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are VERY important and must be honored based on sex, not so-called gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their God-given BIOLOGICAL sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mc Dowell (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: danderson9190@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Dora Anderson (b)(6)

From: markh2365@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Howard (b)(6)

From: michael@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Thank you! Michael England (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Maryandrickallen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Kevan (b)(6)

From: discoguy52@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ricckie Schulte (b)(6)

From: filingsoz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tere Ocampo (b)(6)

From: mailvics@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Victor Subala (b)(6)

From: jacob.hall1114@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jacob Hall (b)(6)

From: battcher@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William Battcher (b)(6)

From: mrslsims@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you as a teacher regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. What you do could have far-reaching results for years to come. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. You cannot overstep your boundaries and run rough-shod over the very people to whom you are accountable. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Schools should stay within the purpose of teaching children to read, write, and get a solid education in core subjects, not ideologies. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Hiding the knowledge of what is being taught from the primary educators--parents--is not the way to build a stronger nation. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. To do otherwise gives unfair advantages to biological males especially in girls'/women's sports. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Lynda Sims (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: cyndy.csm0902@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Please, let's put an end to social engineering in our public schools. We send our kids to school for academics not to infect their minds with other people's values. Get back to reading, writing, and arithmetic, and true, correct history. The truth, not what some want to be the truth. Thank you! Cyndy Melnyk (b)(6)

From: cyndy.csm0902@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:46:25 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cyndy Melnyk (b)(6)

From: coco@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Coco Stone (b)(6)

From: tlctrump@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Engi Nole (b)(6)

From: psalm46ten2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lisa Larson (b)(6)

From: karlaluciadelarosa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Karla De La Rosa (b)(6)

From: mckerrrowja@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Justin McKerrow (b)(6)

From: srjgriff@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Griffith (b)(6)

From: tlitteral0622@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Timothy Litteral (b)(6)

From: goodsonds56@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Shannon Friedman (b)(6)

From: rbtnccardiff@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Snyder (b)(6)

From: Charsan47@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Charlotte Dahlberg (b)(6)

From: dragonfleye20022000@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr and Mrs. Richard (Gail Elizabeth) Flickinger (b)(6)

From: nancydoty@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nancy Doty (b)(6)

From: jesus1slord4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dawn Warner (b)(6)

From: tonirachel69@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Toni Apodaca (b)(6)

From: plainhix@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Anne Streger (b)(6)

From: gabaker22@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Glen Baker (b)(6)

From: snorwood3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandra Norwood (b)(6)

From: diaz3pack@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daniel Diaz (b)(6)

From: kimmytaylor@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kimberly Taylor (b)(6)

From: siberian-missionary@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joseph Rhodes (b)(6)

From: greg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

The Right Supplies Llc (b)(6)

From: btee828@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barry Shadoan (b)(6)

From: barneyco@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Scott Barney (b)(6)

From: scuba839@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As a female athlete who grew up in the late seventies and eighties fighting for the right first to play sports and to have female sports alongside what were considered male sports, I have been appalled at biological males RUINING female sports. In junior high I played basketball on the boys team because there was no girls team. It wasn't to prove I was better than the boys but rather it was for love of the game. At that age (13 and 14), having gone through puberty I was one of the tallest on the team. I was able to successfully complete which was a huge confidence builder. Now there's another side of that story. Among the boys who were well on their way along the puberty road, there was absolutely no way I could compete against them. They were faster, stronger, and could jump much higher all due to that magical hormone testosterone. Title IX gave biological females the ability to compete against other females on a level playing field. I fought for that right. To throw that out in the name of not hurting the feelings of a few males who have gender dysphoria is nothing short of ridiculous. It's not progressive in any way. It's really very regressive and will completely decimate women's sports. An equitable solution is for those with gender dysphoria to have a league of their own. Until such time, play on the team of their biological gender so as not to ruin women's sports. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Kathleen Steele (b)(6)

From: frankmosc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Frank J Moscioni (b)(6)

From: mrsjamesyi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judy Yi (b)(6)

From: deniseesther@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Denise Carpenter (b)(6)

From: jmschieffer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janet Schieffer (b)(6)

From: laura_ydr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Laura Yoder (b)(6)

From: cnequette@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:35:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carol A Appel (b)(6)

From: joyfilled93@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I am very concerned about the decisions being made that will affect the next generation of leaders being taught in schools currently. That is why there are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Alma Harder

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Sdoyle92@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Charlene Stacy Doyle (b)(6)

From: sullyd123@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deborah Sullivan (b)(6)

From: pflournoy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Flournoy (b)(6)

From: k2andcrew@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I have some comments that I think the DOE OCR should consider during its review of the Title IX regulations. We have a history as a nation of promoting fairness and equality of opportunity. The application of Title IX to high school and college athletics was a big step towards showing that the US is a nation that strives to give everyone an equal opportunity to compete in a fair competition without giving anyone an undue advantage. Title IX leveled the financial playing field between men's and women's athletics. Many women have benefited from these changes, which includes some professional leagues for basketball, golf, soccer and tennis. There are numerous other examples. In the past 50 years or so, there has been a lot of controversy associated with international athletes taking hormones, steroids, and other 'body doping' substances in order to gain an advantage over other athletes. When these were discovered, there were huge scandals and investigations into the behavior of the athletes. In some cases, athletes were disqualified from competing in future events and lost any awards and prizes that were received due to a perception of "cheating" and violating the integrity of the sporting events. Counter measures were employed to ensure that athletes have as level a playing field as possible for the individual competition events. In the past couple of years, our nation has seen the equality of opportunity reputation of this nation get turned aside in favor of a notion that giving a person some drug hormones suddenly changes the sex of the individual. That notion also has been mingled with the sense of fairness to produce a theory that what matters in an athletic competition is what gender the competitor claims to have. This is in opposition to the nation's cultural history of fairness of opportunity. Out of fairness to both men and women, we have promoted a system whereby athletes compete on the basis of biological sex. This is to establish as level a field as possible for all in the particular event. Because that is fair and appropriate. Title IX protections for women's athletics are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. A perceived gender identity and the application of some drug substances does not change that males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Kevin Keating (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: gwenzr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Karen Bruni (b)(6)

From: dansa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sandra Higgins (b)(6)

From: ljd74@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Leonard W DeWitt (b)(6)

From: mackessler@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Here are important for you to consider as you conduct your review. First, evaluate what legal ability you have for undertaking any measures you pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power at the federal level, so do not force ideologies on parents and students. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Should you proceed, give earnest consideration to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn skills and knowledge that will lead to a balanced, healthy, and productive life once they reach adulthood. Focusing on controversial topics without the parents' consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Protecting women and girls' right to sports is fair to all and does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Martha Kessler (b)(6)

From: sghopsing@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandra Watson (b)(6)

From: mptallent@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Pamela Tallent (b)(6)

From: dansa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sandra Higgins (b)(6)

From: bobbi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Regarding the US Dept of Education's Office for Civil Rights' request for public hearing relevant to Title IX: The federal government has a duty to respect the rights of parents to oversee and control the education of their children, and has an obligation to not usurp the authority of local and state governments to protect those parental rights. I trust that your decisions and rulings in the matter will reflect a sensible and reasonable recognition of the basic facts of science: a biological boy is a boy, and a biological girl is a girl. Facts are what they intrinsically are - not what we want or merely claim them to be. I implore you, who at the federal level are charged with protecting the privileges and integrity of education in our country, to act in an educated and rational manner, and not undermine the very essence of meaningful and legitimate education. Regards, Mrs. Bobbi Mitchell (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: cfanny@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Neuman (b)(6)

From: mbbraaksma@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. This is a very serious issue with very negative implications for women's freedoms as well as freedom in general. To accept others for what they choose for their worldview and lifestyle is good and is one thing, however, to push their lifestyle choices on others and force them to promote and embrace a lifestyle against their worldview is totally unacceptable and not right. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maribeth Braaksma (b)(6)

From: belackey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Barbara Lackey (b)(6)

From: annelpappas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anne Pappas (b)(6)

From: deebeyl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. DeMaris Beyl (b)(6)

From: wowmom9@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gayle Drake (b)(6)

From: amy.rebecca.byrd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amy Byrd (b)(6)

From: r.cambra@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Bio Males taking some female Hormones does NOT make them Female ! Bio Males will always have a Huge advantage over Bio Females because of the Amount of testosterone they have . Testosterone builds MUSCLE MASS all over the body of Males , Builds Strength , Speed and Endurance and doubles Mass from the waist up in Males . I feel this issue of allowing Men to compete against Women should be outlawed and it is as if there is a message to Women and Girls to stop being Fit , Athletic and Motivated and this is not allowing Women to be the best they can be and holding Women down ! Thank you! Rachelle Cambra (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: marthahampton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Martha Hampton (b)(6)

From: missymiss@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Girls are girls. Boys are boys. Separate sports. This is absolutely ridiculous. The world looks at America and laughs. I trust you know in your heart what is right. Please do not use any administration to darken children's minds. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Melissa Oosthuizen (b)(6)

From: touring3d@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jesse Perez (b)(6)

From: john_bloom@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Bloom (b)(6)

From: cmvowels60@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Chris Vowels (b)(6)

From: redclingno@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Edwin King (b)(6)

From: tlw2309@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:25:32 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tracie Wiegert (b)(6)

From: bowersmicky@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Michelle Bowers (b)(6)

From: j.dyrdal@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janet Dyrdal None

From: lh7bling@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Laura Hanson (b)(6)

From: kevinjen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kevin Nolan (b)(6)

From: odaggers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sherrie Burkett (b)(6)

From: laneyshirley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lane Shirley (b)(6)

From: sharonmatthews43@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sharon Matthews (b)(6)

From: aggieband74@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Pat Phillips (b)(6)

From: pamhundley89121@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Director Goldberg, I believe there are MANY young women from all nationalities, colors, religions, and financial levels. There are so many of them and they deserve to compete with female body types that are not as strong as male body types. Why should we punish all the girls for a few boys that don't think they are boys. Leave the girls alone. If you have to accommodate a few boys that believe they are girls, start a whole new division. In wrestling, they are divided by weights to be more fair. You could have boys, girls, and "others" and call the third group whatever they want to be called. The girls should NEVER be forced to share a locker room or showers with "people" that are not physical girls. Why make the "MANY" suffer for the "FEW" ? Thank you! Pam Hundley (b)(6)

From: philipd408@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Philip Driscoll (b)(6)

From: violet.rugh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Violet Rugh (b)(6)

From: doglady1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Nancy Sue Wainwright (b)(6)

From: mcleodmann8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lisa McLeod (b)(6)

From: peterkemp12@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Peter Kemp (b)(6)

From: mrs.aune@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Darcy Aune (b)(6)

From: keithasampson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Keith Sampson (b)(6)

From: dickstone@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, It is incredible to me that intelligent, thoughtful individuals would even be considering actions of this nature. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Dick Stone (b)(6)

From: musicb4me@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Julie Burgess [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: wdmn627@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dale Newman (b)(6)

From: a_design@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Clay Allen (b)(6)

From: cc122540@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Charles Cave (b)(6)

From: rilene@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Simpson (b)(6)

From: niemeyer64@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Niemeyer (b)(6)

From: j.elmore1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Elmore (b)(6)

From: nationalexecutive@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ryan Muhammad (b)(6)

From: joannehp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Joanne Piccini (b)(6)

From: Gdsollinger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration!!!! Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Leave us alone!!! Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Parents are in charge of our children, not the government. You come to us to ask us, the parents, how may the gov assist us. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Gary Sollinger (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: baslahlberg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:15:49 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sandra Ahlberg (b)(6)

From: celestescents@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Celeste Wirtz (b)(6)

From: jamihaila@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Josie Mihaila (b)(6)

From: dbehrens1020@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Donna Behrens (b)(6)

From: curtfulton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Larry C Fulton (b)(6)

From: juanr459@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Juan Rodriguez [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: ambererichards@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amber Richards (b)(6)

From: juanr459@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Juan Rodriguez (b)(6)

From: Gene.Dwyer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gene Dwyer (b)(6)

From: Rkm1931@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am strongly opposed to letting boys compete against girls in sports intended for girls. It's not fair to the girls. Thank you! Mr. Richard Moore (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: b2surprenant@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Barbara Surprenant (b)(6)

From: bobbiebo74@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bobbie Dickerson (b)(6)

From: tstrickin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Terri Stricklin (b)(6)

From: Guribe1212@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Gina Uribe (b)(6)

From: kathy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kathleen Donley (b)(6)

From: andres@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Andres Cervantes (b)(6)

From: killrb2000@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Kill (b)(6)

From: srhawkinsr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Colonel Stephen Hawkins (b)(6)

From: geser@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you for your time! M Northrup (b)(6)

From: ca.madsen81@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carolyn Madsen (b)(6)

From: karenjmonnig@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Monnig (b)(6)

From: richnaz3927@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Nazaremus (b)(6)

From: kblanco612@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I have a number of concerns that I would like you to take into account as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First of all, education regulations should be handled at the local level. Federally interfering with it to push an agenda that has NOTHING to do with educating kids is against the law. Why are politicians obsessed with teaching children about sexual topics?? We should stay focused on actual education in language arts, science, math, history and the arts. You know, things that improve a child's MIND. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Should you proceed down this path, in spite of it being a horrible assault on the hearts and minds of children, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. This is absolutely NOT the job of the educators. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. If it's absolutely impossible to assign kids to sports based on biology (actual science), then create a third tier where trans athletes compete against each other. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kristina Blanco (b)(6)

From: forgivenmuch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Leslie Dean (b)(6)

From: v_hanacek@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Male and female bodies are constructed differently. Even after taking puberty blockers/hormones, a male is stronger and faster than a female. Please consider privacy, as well. Young women today may not be brought up as modestly as I was, but there is something inherent in most females that makes them uncomfortable being undressed in front of a male, unless there is a romantic connection. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Sincerely yours, Vicki Hanacek (b)(6)

From: nc71660@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bernadette Hudson (b)(6)

From: hardy9331@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 05:02:24 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). The most important consideration would be understanding what was intended by Title IX, that being giving girls a safe, level playing field to pursue sports and competition with fairness and without additional physical risk that comes with males being added as participants. At the very least, it MUST include safety when it comes to locker rooms. At a foundational level, biological men are not allowed in the same area where girls are showering and changing clothes. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, social experimentation is NOT the purpose of public schooling. Thus, the importance of local implementation of community standards and respect for parental rights in their child's education. Federal interference is totally unjustified. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Debbie Hardy (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: jamahn47@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jeffrey A Mahn (b)(6)

From: alialso4d4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Ali Ford (b)(6)

From: harris@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Conway Harris (b)(6)

From: karenjmonnig@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Monnig (b)(6)

From: cmarone33@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christina Marone (b)(6)

From: gmartin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Geraldine Martin (b)(6)

From: prettykitty0018@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Betty Henry (b)(6)

From: amydale998@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Amy House (b)(6)

From: judybarrick7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judy Barrick (b)(6)

From: meandthee@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Weber (b)(6)

From: elizabeth-grace@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Please consider whether the function of education is to give information to students which they can use in their future personal, social, working and general lives. This information should be politically neutral, and subject to parental review and consent. Information such as math facts, writing skills, and familiarity with historical events (not necessarily interpreted for them by politicians) and scientific fact (not social opinion) and independent thinking skills are appropriate. Incorporation of politically motivated social change and orientations is not appropriate when presented as fact in the public school systems. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. That is, unless you consider the State the ultimate arbiter of children's education and beliefs, and agree that their parents have no right to object to the State's current political agendas. That is, I believe, very similar to the school system in China and other totalitarian countries. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Sports are a physical, not an emotional activity. They involve bodies, not what people think they want their bodies to be. Disconnects between bodies and desires about bodies can be recognized without abandoning all reason, and declaring that male and female are no longer an issue of bodies, which are definitely one or the other. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Progress is great, justice is great, and goodwill to all is great. However, we do not need to enter the realm of insanity and Doublespeak, where words mean only what the authority of the moment wants them to mean. That attitude precludes any kind of meaningful discussion. Thank you! Elisabeth Davies (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: skendallb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Sanford Bernard (b)(6)

From: mav.haskins@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Megan Haskins (b)(6)

From: shonreel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Cheryl Howe (b)(6)

From: mom.jaguar@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Elaine L Jaureguizar (b)(6)

From: pmarone33@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Philip Marone (b)(6)

From: jccrawf@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing regarding the Office for Civil Rights' announcement of a public hearing on enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about such things should be referred back to their parents. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on actual sex, not delusions of "gender identity". Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop "transgender" athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Thanks for your consideration. Mr. Chad Crawford (b)(6)

From: gmcmil@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Virginia Mcmillen (b)(6)

From: iam533happy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mike Ayers (b)(6)

From: janicese62@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janice Echols (b)(6)

From: tjsemic@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Teresa Semic (b)(6)

From: jannalboyer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Janna Boyer (b)(6)

From: rodneyljacobson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Rodney L Jacobson (b)(6)

From: brendacarrow@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Brenda Carrow [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: czplwskkb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As you review the Title IX regulations, please be more aware of the potential harm you could be inflicting on our children. What you may consider to be compassionate towards a small group of people may be harmful in many ways to the larger group of young women. Please also consider that taking this matter into federal hands usurps the powers of state and local community governments to make decisions regarding education; any attempt at a federal power grab in this area is unconstitutional and you should refrain from doing so. You also do not have the right to force parents and local educational systems to accept an ideology which is not of their choosing. You have neither a mandate nor a constitutional right to override parental authority and dictate what is taught to our children. If you truly have respect for women, then you will honor the previous Title IX protections for girls' sports based on sex, not gender identity. To allow biological males to compete against biological females in sports is unfair, and could be physically dangerous as well as disrespectful of young women's right to privacy. Transgender athletes are free to compete in sports on teams that align with their biological sex; to remove the protections afforded to young women by Title IX would be a travesty. Thank you for taking these comments into consideration as you review Title IX. I hope that you will treat women fairly in your decision-making process. Sincerely, Kathryn Czaplewski (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: pmarone33@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Philip Marone (b)(6)

From: janicese62@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janice Echols (b)(6)

From: ambullofli@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sharon Mitchell (b)(6)

From: chrisspanish2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Chris Spader (b)(6)

From: neufcrew@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Gail Neufeld (b)(6)

From: jjpoovey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Poovey (b)(6)

From: yshua.dg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Marr (b)(6)

From: masanosuke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Wesley M. Cummins (b)(6)

From: brush@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). My entire 33 year career in higher education was dedicated to providing opportunities for girls and women in athletics. The so-called "equality act" will denigrate everything that thousands of women (and men) spent their professional lives developing and providing for female athletes. A biological male, who identifies himself a a female, has NO right to use his superior innate physical prowess to deny a woman her opportunities in physical competition. "Follow the science" has been the battle cry of the past year. YES, let's follow the science which says the DNA of a male gives him different (superior) physiology and strength, no matter waht name he may give himself. Be realistic and FAIR in your consideration of legislation that will undo all the progress of Title IX and the opportunities women deserve in sports participation. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Marguerite Brush (b)

(b)(6)

From: justicemark@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Melinda (b)(6)

From: ngvarner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nancy Varner (b)(6)

From: gmartin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Geraldine Martin (b)(6)

From: jthah@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:51:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX), these are my thoughts. As a parent, grandmother and now a great-grandmother, I feel VERY STRONGLY about Title IX protections for women and girls' sports! Men and women are created differently; they are biologically different with different strengths. Women should NOT be forced to compete against "men who identify as women". That is TOTALLY UNFAIR and should NOT BE ALLOWED under any circumstances! Transgender athletes should only be allowed to compete in sports that align with their biological sex. Secondly, Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education. We send our children to school to learn how to read, write, do math, participate in sports, and learn to work hard and be kind to ALL students. Rigorous academic accomplishment should be the goal - not time spent on teaching students about alternative lifestyles or sexuality issues. That is a violation of public trust and our parental rights. America is falling behind other countries academically because too much time is being spent on "cultural issues" that should be left to parents to teach their children. As a former math teacher who loved teaching and took my job very seriously to make sure that the students I had every year would have learned the concepts necessary to move successfully to the next grade level, I know "time of of the essence". Teachers need to be allowed time to teach their core subject matter. They should not be required to spend precious class time trying to influence students with federal mandates about controversial subjects that in many ways go AGAINST parental values. The Department of Education should be inspiring and equipping teachers to help every child achieve academic success and protecting the rights of girls to compete against biological girls only in sports. It is only FAIR! Thank you!

Joanie Haley (b)(6)

From: vlabe264@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Victor LaBelle (b)(6)

From: daniel.w.cheatham@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Dan Cheatham (b)(6)

From: mdgx2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Gillespie (b)(6)

From: campbellkn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kenneth Campbell (b)(6)

From: gayleschoemehl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gayle Schoemehl (b)(6)

From: the_eaker_family@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Tammy Eaker (b)(6)

From: kikih@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Hendren (b)(6)

From: jpbrett65@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jean Brett (b)(6)

From: nerl945@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ed Ross (b)(6)

From: trevino0329@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gregorio Trevino Jr Jr. (b)(6)

From: trevino0329@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gregorio Trevino Jr Jr. (b)(6)

From: jschaf264@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James L Schaffer (b)(6)

From: troy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, This is very important to me as a father and grandfather! I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Our job as parents is to raise good citizens that will benefit those around them. As a parent I believe there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not consent to the teaching of controversial topics like Queer Theory. School teachers, counselors and management have no place teaching our children about anything unnatural. These things should never be taught to or practiced on our children. Doing so without parental consent is a violation of the public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family's beliefs dictate. With regard to sports, there has always been a separation of biological girls and boys from due to the physical abilities of each. There are many sports designated as women's sports that would be totally dominated by a physical man if allowed to compete against them and it makes no difference if the man identifies as a man or a woman. Sports must be based on sex, not gender identity. If not society is no longer adhering to the long standing principles of fairness. Other issues should also be considered. These include but are not limited to, risk of physical injury, and privacy. It should also be noted that transgender persons are not prevented from participating in sports or on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep men's and women's sports separated so that things are fair for my daughters and granddaughters. Please also keep the locker rooms separated so that I do not have to worry about a man viewing my daughter's or granddaughter's naked body. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Troy Haskell (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: johndee16@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Without this protection you might as well cancel girls' sports as biological males will win and the girls will quite. What would be the point in competing as they could not win. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. John P. Atkinson (b)(6)

From: cjnajplus@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Amber Johnson (b)(6)

From: sugdaddyg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Regarding the virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Shaju George (b)(6)

From: moboy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mark Oboy (b)(6)

From: razzmataz1946@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I HOPE THAT THE LEADERSHIP COMES TO THE TABLE WITH "COMMON SENSE" AND NOT POLITICAL VIEWS. AFTER ALL, WE ALL HAVE OUR OWN VIEWS. BUT, OUR CHILDREN COME FIRST AND NOT POLITICAL PARTIES !!!!!!!!!!!!!!! Thank you! Chris Rasmussen (b)(6)

From: samm3377@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their sex. I would suggest offering co-ed sports teams in addition to male/female teams. The emotional and physical well being of ALL students must be considered, especially if the goal is to offer All students the same opportunities. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Samantha Melancon (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: 22markboyer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Boyer (b)(6)

From: dhart1018@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Donna Hart (b)(6)

From: rossdm68@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations I want you to be aware of as you review the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake these measures. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Dianna Ross (b)(6)

From: dmkrebs38@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John D Krebs (b)(6)

From: gv565@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Seidel (b)(6)

From: handy.amy2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Amy Jo Baker (b)(6)

From: adernfa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Delia Bautista-Tobin (b)(6)

From: shotzysue@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Angela STEFFEN (b)(6)

From: Drewsfamilytx@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marsha Drews (b)(6)

From: cdrkaem@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Elarde-Mccuaig (b)(6)

From: tonyjo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Tony Oliver (b)(6)

From: tsp2outta3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Tanya Peterson (b)(6)

From: Dragonfly.erika@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Erika Capellupo (b)(6)

From: marroccolia@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Angela Marroccoli (b)(6)

From: bosmans@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Bosman (b)(6)

From: terry_bridges@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Bridges (b)(6)

From: rschmidttulsa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Schmidt (b)(6)

From: junique144@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. If you have children, think what you want them to learn instead of or in addition to reading, writing, arithmetic, science, vocational and honest sports experiences. Thank you! June Gross (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: christianesalts@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. There ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Christiane Salts (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: jakwilli@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jack Williams (b)(6)

From: wyattd80@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. More importantly, girls and women need to have their privacy rights respected, and should not be forced to share bathrooms, locker rooms and showers with males. No girl should be forced to undress in front of a boy. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Susan J. Wyatt (b)(6)

From: aritcheywilson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

ALyssa RItchey-WIlson (b)(6)

From: aricoke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Frank Sanchez (b)(6)

From: Aghambrhoa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, This below: I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Angie Graham (b)(6)

From: kkmtm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:40:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please hear my views regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please protect women and girls rights! Sincerely, Keli Miller

(b)(6)

From: lauragrig@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Laura Martinson [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: john.gaede@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Gaede (b)(6)

From: dred@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Or we can provide another third division just for the "X" competitors or whatever they want to call it, just not in girls sports that Title IX was supposed to protect and provide opportunity for biological females. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Dr. Dr Edwin J Travis (b)(6)

From: steven.t.bergquist@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing this to you in regards to the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Steven Bergquist (b)(6)

From: demayer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Duane E Mayer (b)(6)

From: clthurber6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cynthia Thurber [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: terryclad@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Teresa Messinger (b)(6)

From: Jnkelr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Randy Grove (b)(6)

From: skmeyer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Susan K Meyer (b)(6)

From: cyberhiker48@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sarah Wright (b)(6)

From: lydia2hg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Linda Decker (b)(6)

From: Jkoll45@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judy E Kollstedt (b)(6)

From: Brandeenm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marjorie Brandeen (b)(6)

From: Mlkwoman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Melinda Klineman (b)(6)

From: haras1993.sb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sarah Burkart (b)(6)

From: marmcp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Please focus on parents and the rights of young women. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Keep politics out of education. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Parents should not be ignored. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Michael McPoland (b)(6)

From: worldwbr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Anthony Reitano (b)(6)

From: hfaith123@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judy Waldron (b)(6)

From: janescorner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Allow women to have rights that are not superceded by males who want to be women! Allow those individuals to compete against each other. And those born with a female body to be able to compete against each other. Protect title IX as it was intended. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Jane Derrington (b)(6)

From: rhbberry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Roger Berry (b)(6)

From: sprucefarm95@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lori Barbaresi (b)(6)

From: claudiaorellana430@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Claudia Orellana (b)(6)

From: b.ripoll@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bernadette Ripoll (b)(6)

From: gslone1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gary Slone (b)(6)

From: egstrombomco@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Erik Strombom (b)(6)

From: s4r4ng_h3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tabatha Klouda (b)(6)

From: richca1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Cairnes (b)(6)

From: adaisrae@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. While I was competing in sports as a young female, I competed in all-male leagues in youth baseball and youth football. When my body and my male counterparts bodies "matured", my competitiveness against them became limited. Transitioning to women's volleyball, basketball and softball enabled me to remain competitive and earn a college softball scholarship. The scholarship encouraged my completion of two degrees, so I was able to become competitive with my male counterparts in the workplace. If transgenders had been able to compete in female sports during my years of competing, I may not have been able to receive a scholarship. Sports gave me confidence and identity of an athlete that is still with me today. I am a better wife, mom of four, coach to my kids, and Intel Analyst because of the opportunities female sports gave me. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sunny Vitanov (b)(6)

From: apaulo52@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Paul Moore (b)(6)

From: leahfarish@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I write this as a civil rights attorney and former adjunct professor of School Law. The U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) is receiving comment on improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). The federal government should follow the guidance of the Trump administration's January 8th memo, which was sensible. Parents, the states, and local districts should decide their own rules on gender identity/orientation issues. But where Title IX is invoked in women's sports, it should protect girls. Males and females should compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Transgender athletes are depriving girls of scholarships and other achievements. Trans kids must participate in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope these thoughts and suggestions guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Leah Farish, JD (b)(6)

From: jckaeggers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kim Eggers (b)(6)

From: bopdahl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights announcement of a public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. Here is my input. Education is the purview of state and local government protected by law from undue federal pressure. Radical liberal ideas are being forced on parents and students from federal bureaucrats. Some of these views are in direct conflict with the views of vast numbers of Americans, perhaps even a majority. There ought to be primary consideration given to parental rights. Parents are first and foremost responsible for their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these views in mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Brian Opdahl (b)(6)

From: rhonda_lofing@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rhonda Lofing (b)(6)

From: coralfam3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Diane Coral (b)(6)

From: jbar914@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. George Barchuk (b)(6)

From: siouxbee@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. (This seems like a page taken from the communist manifesto. America has always prided itself on a separation of church and state and now we seek to force a "religion of LGBTQ . . . rights" upon society? We should have the freedom to disapprove of any lifestyle we find abhorrent, as well as live out those beliefs in a loving, nonviolent way, of course.) Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. (We should never force our views on anyone else. People have free choice to believe whatever they want. Think about the Inquisition, the Chinese gulags, the quest of Islam and you will realize how wrong forcing a belief system is.) Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. (If they feel uncomfortable with this, then so be it. They must face the consequences of their decisions. As a side note, even my brother competed against me handicapped by playing left-handed in table tennis. If we do not "level the playing field", we might as well kiss women's sports goodbye. So much for women's rights.) I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Susanne Butler (b)(6)

From: bdockan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I must first remind you that the federal government has no authority to make rules on gender identity and sexual orientation. That is an abuse of power. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education. They send their children to school to learn core subjects, not to be indoctrinated with controversial topics like Queer Theory or a multitude of genders from which to choose. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Common sense dictates that males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. As you review Title IX, I remind you that you work for the people. You are accountable to the parents for the decisions you make. Sincerely, Mrs. Bonnie Dockan (b)(6)

From: timbanumerouno@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Timothy Patton (b)(6)

From: ricandaud2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Male anatomy with its' musculature and bone density and strength gives an unfair advantage to males in comparison to females. This has already been demonstrated in track and field, cycling, boxing, etc. where female athletes were outpaced by the males competing against them. This effectively cuts women and girls out of scholarship opportunities and competing at higher levels. My (b)(6) is a swimmer which is one of the most grueling sports. To force them to compete against males would shut them out of swim championships and opportunities to swim in college via scholarships. Also this is a very intimate sport as to the interactions between the girls in showers, preparing for league meets (group shaving of their bodies) as well as the freedom to talk about and commiserate with each other about "women's issues" and monthly menstrual cycles that no male could relate to nor would the girls feel comfortable in sharing with them. There are team sleepovers and other team bonding activities that the girls enjoy and would be awkward and inappropriate for males to participate in. This boys into put women and girls in danger in allowing men and boys into these private areas. Recently a five year old girl was molested by a male student in a school bathroom that allowed males access. (b)(6) has spoken up against such an encroachment on women's sports and safety by men. Even (b)(6) is against this! Ironically I don't hear much about women banging down the doors of men's locker rooms and bathrooms to gain access to them nor do I see women who identify as men insisting on joining men's sports teams and competing against men. This also "smells" strongly of male dominance over females and dictating to them what it means to be a female! I'm still not sure what exactly the goal is here. It CERTAINLY isn't about helping to advance women! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Audrey Olenzek

(b)(6)

From: harshmanjs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sharon Harshman (b)(6)

From: plong@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:29:50 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Penny Long (b)(6)

From: foxxden87@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Allowing biological males to compete against females in athletics completely disregards and undermines all of the equal treatment under the law which has been achieved for girls to date. I consider it a grave offense to even consider this as an option. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Kim Fox (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Alnadie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Ann Marie Marie Lilly (b)(6)

From: geoffrey.rose@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Geoffrey Rose (b)(6)

From: snway18@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Samantha Way (b)(6)

From: charlottewat@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please protect parental rights. Please protect girls' and women's sports. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Charlotte Watson (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: pmwestbroek@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Daryl Westbrook (b)(6)

From: jillitchka1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Jill Mikesell (b)(6)

From: jesusbivesinme75@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tammy Bejide (b)(6)

From: Twylas43@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Twyla Steinburg (b)(6)

From: patlewis_1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Lewis (b)(6)

From: mhelena325@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marshall L Helena (b)(6)

From: yandura5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kevin Yandura (b)(6)

From: Alnadie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Ann Marie Marie Lilly (b)(6)

From: echoleiser@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eugene Echols (b)(6)

From: Cheryl8756@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cheryl Carlson (b)(6)

From: jeremycannon43@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeremy Cannon (b)(6)

From: marymcconnell923@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary McConnell (b)(6)

From: lpmcrae@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please bear in mind the the American Public solidly agree allowing boys to compete as girls in girls sport is patently unfair and should be stopped. Biologic boys must compete against as and in boys' leagues. Also bear in mind, I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. LP McRae

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: vozmoshnakhs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kenneth Spencer (b)(6)

From: Jeannine.kellogg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeannine Kellogg (b)(6)

From: jhunt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jason Hunt [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: pamelapatterson111@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pamela Patterson (b)(6)

From: rjdsbrown@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debra Brown (b)(6)

From: tony.fajkus@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Anthony Fajkus (b)(6)

From: jbynums@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Bynum Sparks (b)(6)

From: stcoliver71@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Stacey Lopez (b)(6)

From: stewart_joycel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joyce Stewart (b)(6)

From: busymom4girls1boy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sonya Thomas (b)(6)

From: carlisedj529@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Carlisle (b)(6)

From: Fritzaz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sherry Weers (b)(6)

From: stark12602@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Stark [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: johncassidy05@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Cassidy (b)(6)

From: dlwarner17@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I am very concerned about the education of our children. The purpose of schools should be to teach the fundamental facts and information which will help children to live productive lives, such as the 3 Rs (reading, writing and arithmetic), factual history of our country, job skills, love and patriotism of our country because of the wonderful advantages we have received. There should not be any politics or controversial topics forced on our children which should be taught by their parents, such as gender identity and sexual orientation, Queer Theory, cross dressing, racism (except that the color of ones skin should not be a factor in making judgments). Parents should have the right to determine what is being taught. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. I hope you will consider my thoughts and suggestions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. D. Louise Warner (b)(6)

From: virginia.fitzsimmons@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should always be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that are the same biologically. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX.' ' Thank you! Ms. Virginia Fitzsimmons (b)(6)

From: hbhoffman2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Today I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you may ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Secondly should you continue to proceed, there needs to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education as they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a true violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Third and finally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Holly Hoffman (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: joshuafishguy1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joshua Sanchez : (b)(6)

From: jel625@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Janet LaVallier (b)(6)

From: Fischernr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nancy Fischer (b)(6)

From: burchjenny@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Burch (b)(6)

From: starrettbill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William A Starrett (b)(6)

From: jmon636@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joseph Montero (b)(6)

From: masurber@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mark Surber (b)(6)

From: taylor8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marilyn Taylor (b)(6)

From: treva.clowe@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Treva Clowe (b)(6)

From: knorman816@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:18:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Karen Norman (b)(6)

From: mjhertel77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Michael Hertel (b)(6)

From: boutilij@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Jordan Boutilier (b)(6)

From: hsamim@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Harriet Samim (b)(6)

From: jan_guiterrez@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janice Guiterrez (b)(6)

From: tmcaaward@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Michelle Ward (b)(6)

From: Hoperissler@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Hope Rissler (b)(6)

From: thomasmasty@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Director, As a former teacher educator, I realize that sports must be evenly matched for true competition to occur. Allowing transgender athletes to compete against biological females is unfair. It robs the women of their chance for success. Plus too many people are taking advantage of the loophole and stealing scholarships from the women. Please be fair. My granddaughter deserves the right to compete against peers. Forcing her to give up her opportunity in sports is unfair and unAmerican. If trans people want to compete against other trans individuals it would be fair. But don't deprive the majority of girls scholarships by forcing them to compete against biological males who identify as female. Tom Masty

From: ms1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. William Applegate (b)(6)

From: rigert3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mary Rigert [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: pjboehr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). It is extremely important to my wife and I that you lead education in the hands of the local people whose children attend the schools. We love our children and want the best for them and are offended that the federal government thinks they know what is best for the local community. We are glad to know that there is a hearing. Here are some of our concerns that need to be addressed: First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Phil Boehr (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: bjmaggard@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Jean Maggard (b)(6)

From: tsevlie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Tamra Sevlie (b)(6)

From: terry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Terry Warth (b)(6)

From: billfrizo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

William Friszolowski (b)(6)

From: dave.shirley55@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Shirley (b)(6)

From: susan.eveland@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Susan Eveland (b)(6)

From: susan.ujiiye@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director⁸ Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Susan Ujiiye (b)(6)

From: airycanary78@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Erin Luna (b)(6)

From: v.and.t.rail.fan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Charles Thompson (b)(6)

From: lcharlesking@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Charles King (b)(6)

From: tinadubreuil@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tina Dubreuil [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: johnkarabaic@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). You will understand, there are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you must evaluate and confirm what legal ability, if any, you have to undertake any measures you may decide to pursue. Any rule-making by the Department of Education regarding gender identity and sexual orientation is simply an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Identity politics, gender identity and sexual orientation, have no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Extensive consideration must be given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. To do otherwise is child abuse! Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I will appreciate an acknowledgement that you have received this communication. Thank you! Mr. John Karabaic

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: kettelkimberly@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kimberly Carter (b)(6)

From: bevie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beverly Carter (b)(6)

From: fortapachecaptain@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Henry Romero (b)(6)

From: uamo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Becky Pine [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Janellvanderford@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janell Vanderford (b)(6)

From: mommyxenos@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs Melissa Xenos (b)(6)

From: hmbegb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeffrey Baker (b)(6)

From: starlaholley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Starla Holley (b)(6)

From: msdielman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Matt Dielman (b)(6)

From: tmkeck1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Thank you for your part regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Philosophy, aka politics, has no place the in K-12 education of minors, especially when ideologies are candidly forced on parents and students from the federal level. Ideologies differ from education in that they come and go. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn. How might Queer Theory practiced on their children help them on a future job? Doing so without their consent is a violation of both a minor and their parent's rights. Every educator knows that parent's hold family beliefs. Any educators belief - faith - is rarely a better faith than the parents. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. It is known scientifically that biological males are physiologically stronger than their female counterparts. Stop the farce of "fair competition." I pray you will allow your God given conscience to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Reverend Milo Keck (b)(6)

From: cstuckey1217@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Carrie Stuckey (b)(6)

From: sstevenstewart1954@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Steven Stewart (b)(6)

From: cb_lippert@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. All of these things above have been outlined by others who stand for Title IX and against transgender access to facilities previously available solely based on biological sex. But there is one more personal factor I want you to take into consideration. Our children are barely out of secondary school now, one in college and one starting a career. My (b)(6) in particular was a district champion swimmer in the 500 yard freestyle. If my children had been subjected to these new policies allowing transgender females into women's sports, locker rooms and other private facilities (and vice versa, trans males into male sports and changing facilities), I would most certainly have immediately taken my children out of school and competition so as not to be subjected to these risky policies that have been foisted on us by the Biden administration. Others I know feel the same. I hope you will consider the mass exodus of students from public and private in-person education and sporting activities these dangerous policies will precipitate. Thank you for your careful consideration of parental opinion. Catherine Lippert (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: killjoy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Barbara Joy (b)(6)

From: tgijdf@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joel Friday (b)(6)

From: lesliehutchinsonduchange@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Leslie Hutchinson (b)(6)

From: thomas_malone@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

2021 May 27 Dear Director Goldberg, [REDACTED] The announcement by the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights to hold a virtual public hearing to gather information to assess if further enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 is needed. [REDACTED] This prompts me to offer a perspective shared by many American citizens. First of all, it is apparent that the Biden Administration is bent on foisting an unproven premise of gender identity and sexual orientation that is not supported by the well-defined science of human physiology, a branch of biology. As such, this pursuit of allowing for changes to Title IX based on those two unscientific theories is an abuse of political power by the Biden Administration. It is politicizing education all the way from a student's entry into public education at kindergarten and continues all the way up through post-graduate level studies in universities. [REDACTED] Where do parents' rights in how their children are educated factor into Biden's arbitrary distortion of Title IX? Parents send their children to public schools to be educated to master the basic core academic subjects of the math, language arts—reading, expansion of vocabulary so that they can better comprehend what they read, spelling, legible penmanship, writing coherently to whatever point with which any topic they are prompted to address—science, and social studies. Parents do not send their children to public schools to be indoctrinated with the narrative and agenda of university Leftists who are striving to remake American society to fit said narrative through their subversive agenda. Subversive?? That is a strong accusation, but it is a significant and mostly silent portion of America's parents who are genuinely alarmed by how their rights and consent are being circumvented by the pressure that the dominant Left in university education is having upon K-12 schools to conform to their controversial agenda with topics like "Queer Theory" is being foisted upon their children as if it has a physiologically scientific basis. Neither do. Doing so without parental consent violates their rights and the trust that the public has placed in administrators and boards of education across America. If children have questions about their sexual identity, they should be referred back to their parents for guidance according to their parents' beliefs, which are often more firmly grounded in the actual, immutable science of physiology and not some conjured up theory regarding human sexuality and sexual orientation in an ever-changing field of speculative misnamed science of psychology. [REDACTED] An injustice that is even more stark is the latest push that has invaded public education's extracurricular field of athletics by incredibly allowing biological males to compete in and dominate girls in sports. How is that fair? Would any of you want your daughters or granddaughters to be unjustly denied the opportunity to compete against other biological girls? I would hope this last question would evoke a resounding "NO!" [REDACTED] Physiological boys and girls need to compete separately due to the obvious physical advantages that males measurably have over females. There is also the very real risk of physical injury and the violation of any of our daughters' privacy in their locker rooms. Preserving girls' and women's right to compete on a level physiological field does not prevent boys and men who are afflicted with gender dysphoria from competing in sports with others of their same physiological sex. [REDACTED] Please keep these perspectives at the forefront of thought as you weigh what is fair for all in your review of the original intent of Title IX. [REDACTED] Respectfully, [REDACTED] — T.S. Malone [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: armoireangel8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 04:07:26 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kelli Cameron (b)(6)

From: drbrettmorris1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 17:00:30 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing -- Avoid Anti-Feminist Pressure

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Concerning the U.S. DOE's Office for Civil Rights announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for changes to Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, there are some essential issues that shouldn't be missed. You should not repeat the mistakes seen elsewhere of disadvantaging biological women when making changes. Title IX protections for female sports has been essential since it was established. It's important we continue to honor our commitments to women and the reality of science rather than the unscientific and anti-feminist decisions based on gender identity. Protecting females' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex, nor does it prevent the creation of teams suited to the specific gender identity that still honors the known differences between biological males and females. However, pretending there are no differences between an 18-year-old woman and an 18-year-old transgendered individual who identifies as female is unscientific. It's also potentially harmful to the biological female and less changing for the transgendered female. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Brett Morris (b)(6)

From: 1thankfullyblessed@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 18:07:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing - please read!

Dear Acting Director Goldberg: I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a STATE and LOCAL Matter matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has NO place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. If you wrongly continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete SEPARATELY due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Paula Nugent (b)(6)

From: jl_hinman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Sat, 29 May 2021 03:50:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Hinman (b)(6)

From: cnw653@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 21:15:03 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing Some Common Sense

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please invoke and exercise a dose of common sense regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important common sense considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation might be an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to nonsensical topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. How about a bit of common sense? Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Charles Whitecotton (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: 1thankfullyblessed@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 18:07:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing!

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Nugent (b)(6)

From: 1thankfullyblessed@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 18:07:29 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing!

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I HAVE 3 ATHLETIC DAUGHTERS AND I WANT THEM TO HAVE EQUAL OPPORTUNITIES TO EXCEL IN SPORTS AND TO LEARN ALL THEY CAN FROM BEING PART OF SPORTS TEAMS. I ALSO WANT THEM TO BE SAFE WHILE DOING THAT! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Kyle Nugent (b)(6)

From: Peter Zanias
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 12:16:57 -0400
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing: Title IX Education Amendments Of 1972 enforcement.

To: Acting Director Goldberg,

From: Peter Zanias - (b)(6)

Subject: Protecting Our Children from Dangerous Ideologies and Theories.

I would like to thank the Dept. of Education for providing this virtual public hearing regarding Title IX Education Amendments Of 1972 enforcement.

I am very concerned about the Biden administration's abuse of power in the areas of gender identification and sexual orientation. I don't understand how they can have the ability to create or modify educational laws that are state and local matters. My understanding (gained from legal writings) is that these things are protected from federal intrusion. I don't want political issues and ideologies to do further damage to the education of our children. We are already fighting for the truth that doesn't make it into the classrooms as it should.

If I want my children to learn about controversial topics like Critical Race Theory, Queer Theory, gender and sexual topics that are not scientifically verified, I will do so. We send our children to school to learn facts, real history, and STEM subjects that will help them be productive and proud Americans. I can show them and provide guidance on issues that affect who they are as people.

If a girl wants to compete in GIRLS' sports, she should be able to compete on a level playing field with other biological girls, not with biological males who currently think they are females. Biology is actual science, bones, muscles, and abilities actually differ according to the biological truths of a person's body.

Please consider this as you review Title IX. The United States must get back to educational policies and practices that work to develop educated, competent, and motivated citizens able to think logically, act respectfully, and live responsibly.

Sincerely,
Mr. Peter Zanias

From: k.pline@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 12:36:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing-PROTECT OUR GIRLS!

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As a concerned parent of 6 (5 girls), I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex, as is only right. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Karen Pline (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: wss9062@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Shane Story (b)(6)

From: jkeenan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Jeffrey Keenan (b)(6)

From: valerie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Valerie Ballner (b)(6)

From: Hiseaglewarrior@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Adams (b)(6)

From: eleanor_stevens@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eleanor Stevens (b)(6)

From: alordj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Andrew L Johnston (b)(6)

From: dcooley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard E Cooley (b)(6)

From: edieadams100@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Edie Adams (b)(6)

From: mtipton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mike Tipton (b)(6)

From: Cynthiacallahan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cynthia Callahan (b)(6)

From: rlensing@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Roger Ensing (b)(6)

From: Toni@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 11:39:43 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

