

From: thomassabrina001@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sabrina Thomas (b)(6)

From: alwest1974@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Aubrey West (b)(6)

From: Faholcomb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Frederick Holcomb (b)(6)

From: barbhamit@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Hamit (b)(6)

From: supershopper4568@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. April Mancuso (b)(6)

From: Lectricbruce@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bruce Chapman [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: canzo4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Canzoneri (b)(6)

From: stonehouse@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Stephen Stone (b)(6)

From: follettrh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Follett (b)(6)

From: shermquinlan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. If a person was born with a y-chromosome he is male and must not be allowed to compete in sports with persons born with two x-chromosomes who are females. There are only two human sexes, male or female (with very few exceptions for hermaphroditism). All the biochemical and surgical attempts to alter God-given sex is futile so there really is no such thing as transgender, except in the imaginations of the confused. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Sherman Quinlan

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Kamicam.58@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kimberly Ingram (b)(6)

From: rredmer1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Randall Redmer (b)(6)

From: lmlinnemann03@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lara Linnemann (b)(6)

From: kristincardoza@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kristin Cardoza (b)(6)

From: eastmanandrea@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Discrimination against any human being can be a federal mandate, but the placement of those who plays on a sports team is not. Title IX addressed an issue of discrimination against women's sports compared to men's sports. It had nothing to do with team placement within the teams. Furthermore, constitutionally, personal ideology is also protected by the First Amendment and any specific ideological position is forbidden to be enforced in a government funded facility. Even as we may not discriminate, we may not enforce any belief system. The LGTB population has a right to protection and non-discrimination, but have no right to promote their beliefs any more than people of other beliefs. Their history may be taught. Their ideology may not be given preferential treatment. There must also be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education. It is not a school's place to discuss sexual orientation, pros or cons, anymore than the validity of a belief in God. Doing so without parental consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation within their family beliefs, as their First Amendment rights, dictate. Concerning Title IX, per se, Title IX was passed for equal consideration and fairness in girls' and women's sports. For those same reasons, Title IX remains important to be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Boys/men who choose to trans to girls/women can change their stated identity, but cannot fundamentally change their biology. It is unfair to young women, especially in high school, to have to compete with biological men. Biological males and females need to continue to compete separately due to issues of physical fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. The education needed and necessary to enforce, however, is to know that it is illegal and unacceptable to discriminate based on sexual preferences as much as race, religion, etc. This right must extend to the locker rooms as well as the playing fields. In other words, men (coaches, players and spectators) must learn to accept a trans woman on their team, and conversely, women to accept a trans man. The truth is, to prevent a trans woman from competing with her male peers is actually discriminatory. Likewise for a trans man competing with his biological female peers. Asking biological women to not have to compete against biological men who choose to identify as women is not discriminatory. They should be welcome to play with their biological equals. And visa versa. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Andrea Higashibaba (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: rjmitchem@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Having been a public school teacher for 38 years, retiring in 2007, I believe I have significant professional time with 'young minds' to realize how vital this topic is for your crucial deliberation. I appreciate you considering the above. Thank you! Ray E. Mitchem (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: rjarntz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Arntz (b)(6)

From: jdandtamy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Tamy Smith (b)(6)

From: maglac777@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I would like to raise some issues to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. The states and ultimately parents should decide what the public school teaches our children. Tax payers should also have a strong voice. Our country is lagging in every academic category behind much of the world. Let's focus on the basics: math, reading, writing. Critical thinking would be good too! We do NOT need to teach our children what to think, but how to think and make a well-balanced, logical, debatable and defensible decision. Critical Race Theory should never be allowed in school. Teaching our children that one race is worse than another, or should be hated or blamed for past mistakes, will not heal and strengthen our great nation. It will bring it to its knees. All people are created equal and should have the opportunity to reach their highest potential. The outcome won't look the same for everybody, but the opportunity, at least, should be available to all regardless of ability, race, ethnicity, gender, religion or other "identities." Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I truly hope you consider what the American people, the parents, the taxpayers, desire for our children. This is not up to the minority elites-it's up to the American people. Thank you! Maggie Lackey (b)(6)

From: brucepackard@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I strongly agree with all of the following: I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Bruce Packard (b)(6)

From: tammie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness (the empirical scientific facts of the male body prohibit an equal opportunity for females in athletics) , risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Tammie Stelter

(b)(6)

From: grandymarsh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Tommy Marsh (b)(6)

From: justinvoigt1960@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Justin Voigt (b)(6)

From: ddnette@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, RE: U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) virtual public hearing for Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As you review the Title IX regulations, please consider the laws protecting the local control of education from federal incursion. They will be used by families to protect their children from any federal rules insisting on ideologies being taught that are in direct conflict with their own. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Politics has no place in K-12 education. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity must be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are vitally important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Lynnette Dvorak (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dmcellini@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, we are going backwards in women's sports. All the progress women have made will be set back. We are ignoring science for ideology. Even with hormones, they are not taking into consideration that men's bones are different as well. Women's locker rooms will be another issue if no gender reassessment was done. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Dolores Astuto

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: jgb3122@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jerry Babbitt (b)(6)

From: kthsherry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Edward Tom Sheery Sheery (b)(6)

From: geneeva86@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eva Monroe (b)(6)

From: barbara@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I have been in education for 35 years, and America was #1 until the dept of education was invented. Nothing good has been done, and lots of harm. I understand the need to indoctrinate our children, and the obvious goal to dumb down the population. But now to push your agenda to the point of immorality is evil beyond comprehension. Stop the pretense. We are not stupid, and you are not succeeding. Rename your department. It has not 1 thing to do with education. You know it. And so does the nation. Thank you! Barbara Gay

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dianealford123@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diane Alford (b)(6)

From: gcjcaz.j@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gregory Chida (b)(6)

From: f4gsama@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate your legal ability to undertake measures you decide to pursue. Rule-making by the Department of Education concerning gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially if particular ideologies they disagree with, are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Extensive consideration must be given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education, not the state; they send their children to school to learn. Many parents do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex at birth, not gender "identity". Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness (that's the reason there have always been separate women and men's events, such as high-jump or pole-vault, at the Olympics and all sports competition), risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these facts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joseph Healy III (b)(6)

From: peggie_hatfield@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Peggie Hatfield (b)(6)

From: yankeephil44@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when idiotic ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to NON-sensical and controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a flaming violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, privacy, REAL science, and COMMON SENSE. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Phillip R Culp (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: yoderlr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Randall Yoder (b)(6)

From: cab3332003@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Craig Bachman [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: myersfamily737@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Every successful society has this principle in place. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. These viewpoints are unfair to all people and to society as a whole. Freedom denied to even one person, denies it to all. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ms. Bethany Myers (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: lsbufton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Bufton [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: barbeewvrly@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Barbee (b)(6)

From: WDHaskins@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Walter Haskins (b)(6)

From: Kath.howard182@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathleen Howard (b)(6)

From: maureenflynnbecerra@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maureen Flynn-Becerra

(b)(6)

From: j-christopher@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jill Christopher [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: slexington4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Extensive consideration must be given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and not to be indoctrinated on topics like Queer Theory. Doing so without their consent is a violation of parental rights and public trust. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so the parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. You must protect women and girls' right to sports. Thank you, Stefanie Lexington (b)(6)

From: moorlc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lucinda Moore (b)(6)

From: rainekenney@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). It is my belief that any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a STATE AND LOCAL MATTER, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents should make the primary decisions regarding their children's education. They send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without parental consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with any questions about gender identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Loraine Kenney (b)(6)

From: deniseodevans@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Denise Evans (b)(6)

From: jozetta19roberts@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jozetta Roberts (b)(6)

From: mkay.danley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kay Danley (b)(6)

From: jollyjune92@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Holly Miller (b)(6)

From: streetjan50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janice Street (b)(6)

From: jkjhaj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jerome Jackson (b)(6)

From: seburch52@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Calvert (b)(6)

From: c.sawyer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cheryl Sawyer (b)(6)

From: bam102354@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Becky Madawick (b)(6)

From: jamesmarie.hodges@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Marie Hodges (b)(6)

From: wjwfyroq@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

William Wolterstorff (b)(6)

From: shardiman2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Linda Hardiman (b)(6)

From: ericandkimpoulin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. As a father of 3 school-aged girls/women, we have exercised this right by exclusively home-schooling, then choosing a private college that aligns with our values. We chose this educational route precisely because of issues like this. Our girls participate in community sports teams, some mixed, some all-girls, depending on the sport. They do this for skill development and physical fitness, not to compete for college scholarships. However, my son did compete for this purpose in public high school wrestling, on a championship team, so I understand the process and how unfair it would be for some girls sports. Imagine an all-women wrestling league at the high school varsity level allowing biological men to compete. This has not happened because the result is so predictably unfair. The sport of wrestling more clearly reveals the competitive biological differences in the sexes, compared to some other sports. This is the reality of science--the reality of truth. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness and privacy. Protecting women and girls' rights to competitive fairness and safety does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Thank you! Eric Poulin, MD (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: jcschul@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important items of concern to me you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James C Schul [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: greg2pray@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gregory Rice (b)(6)

From: thillsv56@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Trudy Hill (b)(6)

From: cacram81@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Charity Cram [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: carolyn.ferro1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carolyn Ferro (b)(6)

From: Melsnel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Melinda Snelgrove (b)(6)

From: bkwebb87@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kim Webb (b)(6)

From: elizabeth6942@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. WHO HAS THE RIGHT TO TAKE DECISIONS OUT OF THE HANDS OF A CHILD'S PARENTS????? Thank you! Ms. Elizabeth Nethery

(b)(6)

From: Gateman7.62@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Walter Scott (b)(6)

From: w13capcom_58@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wm Counterman (b)(6)

From: csteele368@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carmen Steele (b)(6)

From: Topma5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lisa Norris (b)(6)

From: amjilling@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alicia Jilling (b)(6)

From: cwilliams032351@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Williams (b)(6)

From: martyjan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. A few points: Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. There ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Furthermore, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Please keep these things in mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jan Unterreiner (b)(6)

From: gwmcgraw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Wende McGraw (b)(6)

From: mpj1965@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Martha Johnston (b)(6)

From: raquelidalia@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Raquel Soberal (b)(6)

From: sarahmbushman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. The above reflects my beliefs, opinions, and concerns. The Federal Government and politics should have no place in being involved in the education of children. This responsibility belongs to parents and local school boards, with the consent of parents. Thank you! Sarah Bushman (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: benny.perez@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Benny Perez [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: ed@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ed Hamlin (b)(6)

From: Christa.Roseberry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Allowing boys to participate in women's sports will destroy by undermining the original intent of women's sports and dramatically increase the risk of injury to female athletes competing against a male. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Christa Roseberry (b)(6)

From: polly.rowcliffe@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Polly Rowcliffe (b)(6)

From: lejllwilliams@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Linda Williams (b)(6)

From: bjwalker45@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Betty Walker (b)(6)

From: anniebmo59@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Ann Moss (b)(6)

From: lalinamen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lois Linamen (b)(6)

From: derekiverson8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. There are only two sexes—male and female, as God created, marked by DNA in every cell, and evident in body design. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Nor was such a perverted concept part of original thinking or language if Title IX. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Please do not implement such a weird draconian reinterpretation of one of the most basic constructs of humanity, subject students to evil indoctrination, attack family structure, or infringe on God given principles enshrined in our nation's founding documents. Thank you! Mr. Derek Iverson

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: cw022415@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Charles Williams (b)(6)

From: rake.darlene@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I am a retired educator who taught for 32 years in a high school setting. I remember the battle to gain equal access for girls to compete in sports. I believe that Title IX is threatened by the current emphasis on gender identity and that girls are at an extreme biological disadvantage when forced to compete with biological males (no matter that they "feel" like they are females). Logic and common sense tell us that allowing males to compete in girls' sports is unfair and that allowing biological males to share girls' locker rooms and showers defies the boundaries of privacy. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ms. Darlene Rake (b)(6)

From: debra.yager@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debra Yager (b)(6)

From: tlaaretfam@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Retych (b)(6)

From: lsbeebe@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lynda Beebe (b)(6)

From: cscj01@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cecil Carpenter (b)(6)

From: mpd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Morgan Dickerman III (b)(6)

From: mctbjt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I have two grandchildren that I need to protect and issues like these just violate their rights to compete with those of their own sex. Thank you! Mrs. Barbara Thomson

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: rachorem@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rachel Orem

(b)(6)

From: chester2jb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bruce Ch [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: pdday2003@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX.ey Thank you! Douglas Day (b)(6)

From: ncook@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Nathanael Cook (b)(6)

From: rustyski@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As a parent of two stellar young men, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). First and foremost, like many parents, I am fed up with the indoctrination of young Americans. The over-reach of your department is breath taking. Why can't teachers just teach reading, writing, math, history, etc. and stay out of "parenting", "controlling", and "guiding" the lives of our youngest Americans? The end result is turning out to be catastrophic. Just look around. How about re-introducing God back into the class-room instead of filling young minds with sick and demented considerations. I know why and you know why. It's all about destroying the family unit. Isn't that really the goal? That on top of eliminating real history and dumbing down the nation. And.....math is now "racist"? Imagine what our bridges will look like with a bunch of engineers that cannot add 2+2. Please evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Rusty Taylor (b)(6)

From: rbelinc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, It is critical to our daughters futures that you support this enforcement! I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Rhonda Belinc (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: valmoorehomes@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Valarie Moore (b)(6)

From: donna.wenger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Donna Wenger (b)(6)

From: rdcsr413@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Acting Director Goldberg; This letter is concerning the Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Some things that you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations are: (1), You should first determine if you have the legal ability to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there has to be consideration given to the rights of parents. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education. They send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to and/or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Should a child have questions about identity they should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. (2), Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Respectfully! Robert D. Champion Sr (b)(6)

From: marty.martin111@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Colonel George Martin (b)(6)

From: jc_05_flipt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joshua Nicholl (b)(6)

From: cszczot1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Christopher Szczotka (b)(6)

From: Sarahawagner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sarah Wagner (b)(6)

From: jm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Molitor (b)(6)

From: sjoedoyle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sean Doyle (b)(6)

From: melantizerbusch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Melanie Williams (b)(6)

From: hermanlee@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Herman Lee Jr. (b)(6)

From: jbcarl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Joan B Carl (b)(6)

From: dennis7928@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dennis L. Anderson (b)(6)

From: tbart2415@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Tambra Herbert (b)(6)

From: djpetron@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Father David Petron (b)(6)

From: stiarwalt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sheridan Stiarwalt (b)(6)

From: danielle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Danielle Davidson (b)(6)

From: sasargentine@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Priscilla Argentine (b)(6)

From: jchpod@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As a mom and an educator, I am concerned about the children we are teaching. Please consider the following important items you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Heather Podbielski (b)(6)

From: 616nelson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alan Wetzel (b)(6)

From: tareasoner10@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Allowing men who identify as women to compete against women can seriously impede females' ability to win college scholarships in their sports. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Michael and Terry Reasoner (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: mr.opus1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathleen Leto (b)(6)

From: maryjeansmith@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary jean Smith (b)(6)

From: cjruffolo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Craig Ruffolo (b)(6)

From: kay.lovell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Susan K Lovell (b)(6)

From: jjolly@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). At 73, I am one of those women who were short changed when it came to girls' sports. There were no rules that said that girls had to have about the same amount of time in sports activities as boys had, and certainly there were no rules on how much money was to be spent on girls athletics compared to boys athletics. My daughters had many more choices in the sports they could participate in and much more money was available to their coaches. And my daughters loved their soccer, swimming, basketball, soft ball, and cheerleading as much as their female peers loved volley ball, cross country running and track and field sports. How can you even think of taking those improvements in girls' sports away from them? And you will be if you do not attach money to provide the right kind of locker room facilities for all concerned. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. You might notice there are now shows appearing on TV that have now adults telling about how changing their sexual identity because some adult thought they were helping truly made their lives more difficult. That issue is not the domain of school personnel. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Or since it is the national feeling that there is such a large number of students who have gender identity issues, agree to have those students work out with their biological peers including use of showers and then when they meet for what ever events they are competing in arrange for a separate category: biological guys who identify as girls swim against each other while biological girls who identify as guys swim each other. It would not increase a swim meet's length by much and those students would get a much more accurate view of their actual skills against a true peer. Their teammates would cheer for them, because their wins help the team. Let me tell you, girls did not get all the sports available given to them right after the Title IX rules came into existence, so why should the LGBTQ students get to have all sports available to them. Just like in wrestling

if a weight class is missing an entrant then the team misses out on points, why not when a team is missing the transgender student for an event then that team forfeits those points. Thus certain sports will have coaches trying to encourage that whole demographic that have been sidelined for being weird thus making the sport be more inclusive. As a former teacher of special education students, I saw constant exclusion of children from the extra activities unless I pushed the envelope, now coaches will be making a mistake not providing for them and so will the NCAA Rule people. Include them in your discussions to protect women's sports. However, as a mother of two adult athletes, and a grandmother of 6 grand children that are athletes (4 boys and 2 girls) in many sports, the bathroom issue must be addressed with the federal government sending schools money to provide separate but equal facilities for transgender etc. students. Your demanding schools provide facilities or force illogical and down right dangerous situations to be happening is a serious felony waiting to happen. Do not ask small and poor schools to figure it out how to provide separate facilities, which will be taken out of academic funds. Forcing schools to pay the cost of YOUR, altering the Title IX rules, rules we older females waited decades to see happen, will make it harder on those students who do not identify with their biological sex fit in and further isolate those students. Leaving Washington, DC might help you see what we are already hearing about. There is too much chance of a true heterosexual student taking advantage of female locker rooms openness, because it is already happening and it is certainly happening in jails. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Janet Jolly

(b)(6)

From: grayladydiana90@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diana Owensby (b)(6)

From: bharbin.willis19@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Brenda willis (b)(6)

From: marilynmeyer29@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marilyn Meyer (b)(6)

From: fitterer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Thomas Fitterer (b)(6)

From: richardliles9420@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Liles (b)(6)

From: frizzle0409@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Barry Kissell [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: hwrwdws@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Howard Woods (b)(6)

From: resolutionwilliams@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bill Williams (b)(6)

From: revrod.duckett@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Rodney Duckett (b)(6)

From: ries.korstjens@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students, especially from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Ries Korstjens (b)(6)

From: darci1984@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Darci Szymanski (b)(6)

From: elain3smith@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Thank you for reaching out to get the input of the people. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please consider the following: evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please seriously consider these thoughts as you review Title IX. The outcome has far reaching consequences. Thank you! Ms. Elaine Smith (b)(6)

From: carolyn.lein@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carolyn Lein (b)(6)

From: jkfehr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Julie Fehr (b)(6)

From: rcdettmer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ryan Dettmer (b)(6)

From: peggy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Peggy Dillabaugh (b)(6)

From: rjguetzkow@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. This is a common sense approach. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Roger E Guetzkow

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: bcn333@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Nesmith (b)(6)

From: cger5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex AT BIRTH. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Co Palmer

(b)(6)

From: k8ed@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mark Shaw (b)(6)

From: lawmanee@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Please keep your destructive policies away from the medically and scientific differences between men and women. Male and female are created differently and you destroy people when you seek to blur the lines and "make" them all the same. Be real and honest. Please. Thank you! Eric Lawman

(b)(6)

From: rmccune28@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rachel Bartels (b)(6)

From: flajazz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jan Whited (b)(6)

From: kdmyers20@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kim Myers (b)(6)

From: khath4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. If you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Women and girls need to compete on a level playing field against other women and girls. Otherwise, you will be harming women and girls which is not what Title IX was designed for. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Karri Hathcoat (b)(6)

From: srnrosa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sister Nancy Tomaso (b)(6)

From: fgjdarien@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Frank Girdwain (b)(6)

From: iamiwana@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Iwana McKay (b)(6)

From: sedgerton20@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sherrie Smith (b)(6)

From: Pogamill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Philip Pogge (b)(6)

From: savogel8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michelle Vogel (b)(6)

From: ldhartwig@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Larry Hartwig (b)(6)

From: pkieft@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paul Kieft (b)(6)

From: helfenbein@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Phillip Helfenbein

From: whitedove_93230@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Anita McMurtrey (b)(6)

From: johnthinkspaint1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Wilkinson (b)(6)

From: lgevirtz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Larry Gevirtz (b)(6)

From: kemerritt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kirk Merritt [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jerimk1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeri Karsten [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: fgoodrich1536@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. William Goodrich (b)(6)

From: ekddarden@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ellen Darden (b)(6)

From: gregjeanne@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Doty Greg [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jamesray75@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Ray (b)(6)

From: welikecats@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nancy Shryock (b)(6)

From: alprichard80@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As a parent, grandparent, and public school teacher; I have concerns about the repercussions of the review and enforcement of Title IX. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX Please consider the following as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Any rulemaking by the federal government concerning forcibly teaching gender identity in our schools is overstepping the rights of our government. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education. They do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents. for guidance so that parents for guidance. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Amy Prichard (b)(6)

From: mota.daniel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, PLEASE ! I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daniel Mota (b)(6)

From: wilsonmargaret322@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maggie Wilson (b)(6)

From: bdmartin777@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Barry D Martin (b)(6)

From: jmhawk933@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Willard Hawkins (b)(6)

From: EMILY.BOGES@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Please don't reject the common sense practices that have been in place for many years, men's and women's bathrooms and separate sports for men and women as examples. These protect men and women, boys and girls. Thank you! Mrs. Emily Boge (b)(6)

From: edrolette@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Edith Drolette (b)(6)

From: eberlec@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Cliff Eberle (b)(6)

From: doug@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Douglas Wilson (b)(6)

From: wmpreach@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William Mieir (b)(6)

From: rdhovis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Roger Hovis (b)(6)

From: popsidypop@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Duffee Williams (b)(6)

From: omafitzpatrick@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Oma Fitzpatrick (b)(6)

From: skmspinharney@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sharon Spinharney (b)(6)

From: cvillebrus@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Gayle F Brubaker (b)(6)

From: pyoung114@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pamela Young

(b)(6)

From: daniel.tindall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Daniel Tindall [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Wickstrom.amy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amy Wickstrom (b)(6)

From: jermz4u@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeremy Williams (b)(6)

From: gw.ka8e@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Glenn Wright (b)(6)

From: dbunruh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lt. Cdr. Daniel Unruh , USCG (Ret.) (b)(6)

From: Kwilliams510@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kelsey Williams (b)(6)

From: gjhs58stucker@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rex Stucker

(b)(6)

From: Kebel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kelley Ebel [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Leslie.weishaupt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate!! Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Perhaps, a new category needs to be created, a "they" category and let them compete amongst themselves. It is completely offensive that anyone would think a male who now wants to be a girl would have the same physical ability as a biological female. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Leslie Weishaupt (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: pc.lehman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carla Lehman (b)(6)

From: audrey.seres@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics should have NO PLACE IN K-12 EDUCATION. IF YOU PROCEED, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. !!!DOING SO WITHOUT THEIR CONSENT IS A VIOLATION OF PUBLIC TRUST & PARENTAL RIGHTS!!! Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females NEED to compete SEPARATELY due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports DOES NOT stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! A free thinker, Audrey Seres (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: linda.trimpey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Trimpey (b)(6)

From: wwjdglh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gary Hill (b)(6)

From: lgdavis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Lindy Davis (b)(6)

From: jennifer.filipski@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Filipski (b)(6)

From: silviaqshubert@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Silvia Shubert (b)(6)

From: barthandvalarie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, I am old enough to remember when Title IX was passed in order to provide females equal opportunity to compete in sports. That was during a time of great progress for women, and as the number of women competing in sports increased so did the number of women attending college. Sports improves the confidence of young women to take on challenges in all areas of life. However the admission of transgender athletes in women's sports jeopardizes the progress that the Democrat party has made for all women. Biological males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Admission of transgender athletes will essentially return women to the pre-Title IX era of a lack of competition due to biological differences. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Any changes to this protection by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration and a blow to all women everywhere. Second, there must be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Valarie Canfield (b)(6)

From: info@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. David Hupp [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: srlschoen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stephanie Todd (b)(6)

From: tkeller@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ted Keller (b)(6)

From: ronnie.wise@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ronnie Wise (b)(6)

From: dean.fairweather@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dean Fairweather (b)(6)

From: Malpeckels@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mallory Miralda (b)(6)

From: moorewhiz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gwen G Moore (b)(6)

From: calvin.jude@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Calvin Jude (b)(6)

From: Csosebee@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Sosebee (b)(6)

From: histime@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. I, followed by my daughter and granddaughters would have felt and would feel very vulnerable with biological males in restrooms, locker rooms and showers at the same time. There are bound to be those "males" who take advantage of this situation. The distress caused us might very well lead to skipping classes or showers or not going into the restroom alone. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Allowing biological males to compete with women effectively destroys equality for women and would cause them to lose scholarships and incentive to play. Allowing biological males to compete with women flies in the face of sound scientific evidence that these males, reassigned or not still have several biological advantages of being born male. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Sheryl A Smith Jr.

(b)(6)

From: bkquigley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bill Quigley (b)(6)

From: jlb6568@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David A Bess (b)(6)

From: bd401@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Beverly Dye (b)(6)

From: Bettyh144@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Betty Hartsell (b)(6)

From: robertward@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Ward Jr. (b)(6)

From: Amo.te@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rita Stull (b)(6)

From: MRKirshberger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to express my concern over the actions being taken concerning girls sports. No matter how one "feels", biological males are different physically than females. Women waited long and worked hard to get an equal right to have teams and play sports, and now you are thinking of destroying that. My daughters and granddaughters love sports. Please end this attempt to destroy womens/girls sports. Thank you! Mrs. Marilyn Kirshberger

(b)(6)

From: pastor_jpfulton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor John Fulton (b)(6)

From: hollanstyles@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Hollan Stiles (b)(6)

From: je0161@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Let us parent our children. Please stop this madness. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Janet Eckhoff

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: hsmith4969@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Hugh Smith (b)(6)

From: monanjacobson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Ramona Jacobson (b)(6)

From: janienui@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janie Null (b)(6)

From: momhempel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please consider the following concerns: First, education is a state and local matter protected by law, such that the federal government should not force the acceptance of gender identity and sexual orientation ideologies on children or their parents. Second, consideration ought to be given to parental rights. Parents are primarily responsible for their children and have the right to educate them in accordance with their values. Controversial topics, associated with sex and gender identity, should not be taught without parental consent. Children with questions in these areas should be referred to their parents. Third, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males are biologically stronger than females and will most often win against females, unfairly depriving them of athletic honors and scholarships, to say nothing of the risk to females of physical injury and the disrespect for females' privacy. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Muriel Hempel (b)(6)

From: big.gtribe@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I am having a very hard time understanding how these beliefs are being sold as necessary for continued education. I believe it is a private matter. Our children are facing so many confusing signals from all sorts of media. The classroom is for learning skills, history, mathematics, language.... Please stop Title IX Thank you! Mrs. Lisa Garcia (b)(6)

From: baumkerry39@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kerry Baum (b)(6)

From: patreminder@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pat Reminder

(b)(6)

From: bethaguilar1121@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beth Aguilar (b)(6)

From: rebekahaperkins@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As a parent, and responsible tax paying citizen, I am greatly concerned about this topic! First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. This is a HUGE concern of mine as a parent, as well as many many other parents I know. I am alarmed, concerned, and prepared to pursue any action needed to oppose this form of exposure and ruling on these topics. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Raising a child and exposing them to a set of beliefs, morals, values, and even religious beliefs is NOT the role of the school system, NOR the government. It is first and foremost, the role of the parents. The values and belief systems of the family unit should not be jeopardized and undermined by forcing views on young children and teaching them things about LGBTQ community and critical race theory, to name a few. Parents need to be able to trust the school systems with the things being taught to their children- and this is greatly at odds with what is being incorporated into the curriculums. It is an overreach of our government, overreach of the education system, and it is placing those systems at odds with the very people paying for it. Allowing biological males to compete in girls sports at any age level- not only destroys the decades of progress of fighting for girls' rights, but it also robs our girls of their hard work and successes when we clearly know males have a physical advantage. This is disturbing and extremely detrimental on all levels. Please understand how important this is, and how many other American families feel the same as I do. Thank you for your time. Thank you! Mrs. Rebekah

(b)(6)

From: jsinn4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jim A Sinnerud (b)(6) You are setting about to destroy the sane understanding of the human person. It is a collapse into an insane maelstrom.

From: jenkins-moore@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Sharon Jenkins (b)(6)

From: wajacque@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Paul D Hackett (b)(6)

From: leroy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Leroy K Earhart (b)(6)

From: emlers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sue Emler (b)(6)

From: ben@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ben Gilliard (b)(6)

From: jillnan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Anthon L Davis (b)(6)

From: tracybarth1956@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tracy Barth (b)(6)

From: llaskin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Linda Laskin (b)(6)

From: mikebattaglia3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. If you allow this total disregard of the God given differences between males and females you will totally destroy the female sports programs in the schools throughout the USA. All the records currently held by females will soon fall to males who compete with a strength advantage given males by God. If you don't realize that difference it's time to get your head out of the sand. Title IX was intended to do just and that, protect females sports programs. Thank you! Mr. Michael Battaglia

(b)(6)

From: jgarrington5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jim Garrington [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: fellolr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lawrence Fellows (b)(6)

From: jesuslover3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Andrews (b)(6)

From: jeanib3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:07:02 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). The Department of Education should be involved in the education of our children; not reassigning and implementing social experiments without parental involvement. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. We are still a Constitutional Republic not a UN Rights of the Child country where the parents have no rights. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Jeanine Baberadt (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: salvador.rodriguez@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Salvador R Rodriguez (b)(6)

From: diane.pulido1964@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Diane Pulido (b)(6)

From: deborahb888@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deborah Blanchard (b)(6)

From: hebrazzell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Hubert Brazzell (b)(6)

From: wordfirst.dishongh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jeff Dishongh (b)(6)

From: deptsrn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I was a college athlete when Title IX was passed, and the improvement in women's sports was immediate and noticeable. These improvements would disappear if transgender girls (biologic males) are allowed to compete against biologic girls. Even if a transgender girl is receiving hormone treatments, there are still body structure differences that give the biologic male a huge advantage. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Diane Peterson (b)(6)

From: bldeniston@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beverly Deniston (b)(6)

From: dacs753@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Deborah Stevenson (b)(6)

From: sml_cstl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rhoda Burgett (b)(6)

From: rmpetrey7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Petrey (b)(6)

From: flomanning@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Wayne L Manning (b)(6)

From: oncallcjr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Hogan (b)(6)

From: que_watts@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathy Watts (b)(6)

From: pe.ellstarr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Phillip Elliott (b)(6)

From: mdeverter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jeff DeVerter [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: clarkrickdr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Rick Clark (b)(6)

From: bwichterman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William B Wichterman (b)(6)

From: simmonspitt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rhonda Simmons (b)(6)

From: erica@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As a mother whose daughters participated in high school athletics, the thought of our girls being forced to compete against biological males is unfair. Please consider the future of female opportunities and safety as well as the following important information. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Erica Rhoads (b)(6)

From: terry.meyenburg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Meyenburg (b)(6)

From: jones@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex, or having a league of their own. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Emily Jones (b)(6)

From: hgilbert1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Harvey Gilbert (b)(6)

From: larry12@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Larry Cotton (b)(6)

From: dockellar@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paula Kellar (b)(6)

From: kathleenlorenz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, ^aand privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathleen Lorencz (b)(6)

From: prophetsretreat@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Phyllis Gaunt (b)(6)

From: doggydeli@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I believe you do not have the right to mandate this since education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, Parents are the primary overseers of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and not the latest political thinking. Encouraging a certain type of behavior is not the job of the schools. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Korinne Kramer (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: amymndnhll@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amy Mendenhall (b)(6)

From: dianadelegatenc02@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I find it interesting that those who are making these decisions and rules certainly did not have to abide by them when they were in middle school and high school. Your parents wouldn't have allowed it. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Diana Gallagher (b)(6)

From: revkturner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kevin Turner [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: isharvizu@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Second, what scientific proof is there to support these measures. Why is the Department of Education working so hard to confuse young children. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ismael Arvizu

(b)(6)

From: amyaylor139@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Amy Taylor (b)(6)

From: annajvb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anna Vander Boon

From: heartbeatpsychotherapy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nancy McGiown (b)(6)

From: melisabianca@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mel C

(b)(6)

From: nuteacher@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I have granddaughters who participate in sports. They have trained faithfully and deserve to compete only against other biological females, not males. At this point, I am more interested in protecting my granddaughters rights than giving in to a minority who will never biologically be female. My girls enjoy sports and I would hate to see them withdraw because the competition is not fair. Thank you! Lou Ann Saighman

(b)(6)

From: txrob89@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Cooper (b)(6)

From: judymcpete@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I hear over and over that we must "follow the science!" So try to remember that as you work to force your ill-conceived ideas on the rest of the nation. Thank you! Mrs. Judith S Peterson (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: suzieq615@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Suzie Peterson (b)(6)

From: carol.m.wright@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Wright (b)(6)

From: litty.wj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William Litty (b)(6)

From: amteje@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Annie Ellex [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: mgmt1999-home@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sharon Tochilin (b)(6)

From: judylb1024@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judy Broomas (b)(6)

From: Forest4word@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ginger Pasley (b)(6)

From: ivylleanderson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I strongly support President Trump's Administration Letter; I thank God everyday that my child is no longer in Public Schools since there is no longer parental rights and our children are completely unprotected and do not receive a true education, and instead are indoctrinated in Socialistic Beliefs and untruths. Thank you! Ivyllle F Anderson

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: graphix@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Laura Pientka (b)(6)

From: Fruikl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lois Fruik [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: becanvas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beth Cendejas (b)(6)

From: Greg.watts67@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Greg Watts (b)(6)

From: arprovence@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Title IX was instituted to provide opportunities for girls and young women to participate in sports, earn scholarships and build self esteem. The science is that there are biological differences in male and female. No amount of cross gender hormones and surgery is going to turn a biological male into a female. Biological males have more muscle mass and larger lung capacity than females. The fact that the competition is not fair is why Title IX exists. There is also the matter of privacy. Girls and young women should not be expected to share restroom facilities, showers and locker rooms with biological males, just as men and boys should not be expected to share such facilities with women and girls. Besides this, it is a simple matter for a biological male to say he is transgender just to have access to the female facilities. We have already discovered from department store changing rooms that some men will take advantage. Such a policy opens the door to sexual violence against women and girls. You should evaluate what legal ability you have to even undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Thank you. Ms. Annie Provence (b)(6)

From: drigdon46@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Darlene Rigdon (b)(6)

From: ethertonbsl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William Etherton (b)(6)

From: mermaidmagic@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. GOD BLESS AMERICA! Thank you! Mrs. Pamela Avellino

(b)(6)

From: Ktandmikey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kate Iversen (b)(6)

From: glsaspeck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gayle L Speck (b)(6)

From: fdusa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Frances Hall (b)(6)

From: carolynreece@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carolyn Reece (b)(6)

From: greatschoolmom@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Susan Moreshead (b)(6)

From: jimmyjay@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jimmy Coley (b)(6)

From: budke7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Patrick Budke (b)(6)

From: drussell1121@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lynn Russell (b)(6)

From: mereexposure@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Tara Andrews-Russo (b)(6)

From: pnbpapick@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so is not education and without parents consent it is a violation of public trust and parental rights. When children have questions about identity or any other personal reason should always be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I demand you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX and do what is righteous for all children and common sense. Thank you! Mr. Phil Papick

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: pastor.matthew@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Matthew Gross (b)(6)

From: Lbrinson17@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Laurie Brinson (b)(6)

From: jacksonanna2010@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Jackson (b)(6)

From: ronnie.wise@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ronnie wise (b)(6)

From: tabbyfriend@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Janice Reardon (b)(6)

From: repholden@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Holden (b)(6)

From: forhisgloryjn114@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mikki Garza (b)(6)

From: dbmccardle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Doreen Mccardle (b)(6)

From: sdcclouser@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Scott Clouser (b)(6)

From: truhall2co@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Gertrude Ravesloot (b)(6)

From: nickemilyb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nick Bridges [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: borninthenorth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Allowing biological males to compete against our girls gives an unfair advantage to these transgender competitors even if they have had hormone therapy. I can't believe that I even have to inform you of this, but here we are. In addition, the Federal Government should not be giving this policy a blanket law taking away the rights of the local schools in this matter and pushing an agenda on us that is highly controversial. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Valerie Licausi

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: roserod1960@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rose Rodriguez (b)(6)

From: buglewicz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeanne Buglewicz (b)(6)

From: kdalquist@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kathy Dalquist (b)(6)

From: mrknoper@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Thank you for this virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). The Title IX protections for women and girls are essential for their personal development, interactions with others and sporting competitions in schools and other public venues. Extensive consideration should be given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn the disciplines of reading, math, sciences, and arts. Most importantly they want their children to learn how to think. Core curriculums and packaged exposure to fad social phenomena like Critical Race Theory or controversial topics like Queer Theory do not an education make. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Many legal scholars question what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Please refer to Trump administration's helpful January 8 memo – based on biology and fairness – regarding the Supreme Court's Bostock decision and its effect on Title IX. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I trust these thoughts and suggestions will be helpful in your review of Title IX and guide your recommendations and actions. Thank you! Dr. Marquis Knoper (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dsmccoyd7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. My daughter is a high school athlete and she should not have to compete unfairly against biological males. She should have privacy in the locker room without having to be afraid that any man who identifies as a woman can walk in. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Daniel McCoy (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: wlulre@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Thank you for your attention to the following comments. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. This is overstepping the authority of the DOE. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wanda Ulrey (b)(6)

From: markgin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Scharfe (b)(6)

From: brsawvel2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William Sawvel (b)(6)

From: kimsteinert58@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kim Steinert (b)(6)

From: robhart44@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert S Hartman (b)(6)

From: bleone@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Brian Leone (b)(6)

From: ynejedly@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Yvette Nejedly (b)(6)

From: aegoodgame2013@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Anne Elizabeth Goodgame (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dnhawk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Douglas Hawk [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jimfad57@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James A Fadley (b)(6)

From: Ksueconnors@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there needs to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education and wellbeing; they send their children to school to learn and not only do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children, but many are vehemently opposed to such indoctrination. Doing so without their consent and often in intentional secrecy is a violation of public trust, parental rights, and the nature of a free society. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents only for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Women's sports was a hard-won victory meant for biological females to have a place in the sports world. Forcing them to compete with biological males utterly removes them from the ability to compete in an equal arena and will, for all intents and purposes, do away with women's and girls' ability to ever again win and set records in their sport. This is patently unfair and wrong. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Kathleen Connors (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: nes.bus.1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Charise Nesbit (b)(6)

From: dnulik@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy, also in nearly every major competition where contestants who were born male competed against females, the females were dominated by the trans. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Douglas Nulik

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: castro.diana125@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diana Castro (b)(6)

From: brileyh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am affirming my concurrence with Family Research Council, not because I cannot think for myself, but because the issue is near and dear to me already with three young grandchildren in public school in Washington State. This memo merely gave me the opportunity to add my voice to a larger collection of parents and grandparents. I write regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are three important considerations I value for this review of the Title IX regulations. First, evaluate the legal ability to enforce new Title IX implications and/or adjustments. Rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power, both governmentally and socially with children. We have enough such oppressive activity by California (my State) and Washington State (grandkids home). Yet, education is still a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics, especially a sexual-social agenda, has no place in K-12 education. It smacks of a forced ideology from the federal level to spread our same force-fed California model nationwide. Second, give extensive consideration to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education. They send their children to school to learn and should explicitly give opt-in consent for controversial topics like Queer Theory taught to or practiced upon their children. Doing so without parental consent is a violation of public trust and rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents to address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Third, as my granddaughter is starting out with Volleyball teams, Title IX protections for girls' sports must be honored based on original biological sex. Males and females need to compete separately due to physical strength differences and more telling, sexual privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports that align with their original biological sex. I personally want these three aspects honored and not condescendingly waved off during the review of Title IX. Thinking for myself and my grandchildren, Mr. Harry Briley (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: ficedenise@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Denise Williams (b)(6)

From: moyer6jg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. A decision on this from the Dept. of Education removes it from the parent and local school board. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, I have 5 granddaughters that have expressed an interest in playing soccer and swimming for their school teams. It would be so unfair to require them to compete against biological males that identify as female. Even more important, and one issue that will necessitate removal of my granddaughters from public education is the absolutely morally repugnant forced loss of privacy in locker rooms. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. William Moyer (b)(6)

From: patriana83@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Patricia Morrison (b)(6)

From: kbrush@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. As an attorney myself, and as the father of three daughters, I cannot imagine any scenario where the federal government should force on parents, schools, or children the views in question before you here. You would drive parents away from public education, and destroy all of the progress made under Title IX. You would turn parents and teachers into enemies, rather than allies working together to provide quality education for children. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Kirk Brush (b)(6)

From: mkc97119@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael K Chamberlain (b)(6)

From: badgettrs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Badgett (b)(6)

From: chapelfolks@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Charles Morgan (b)(6)

From: dhhiggin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dona Higginbotham (b)(6)

From: teflon714@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Frank Gadola (b)(6)

From: mkp851@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Thomas Peppers (b)(6)

From: janetrn07@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janet Ashley (b)(6)

From: daughter2bolivia@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ann Marie Hollis (b)(6)

From: jjkatpops@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Frank Kowalski (b)(6)

From: cscsbrabec@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Steven Brabec (b)(6)

From: stenic1998@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Steven Beach (b)(6)

From: michaelandfamily@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. The current administration claims that that biological men can compete against women and that it would be fair. How can they ignore historical common sense science? Men have much stronger bodies, more oxygen capacity, bigger muscles, and are generally a bigger human being. Serious injury to women will result in contact sports and complete unfairness in all sports. Transgendered men cannot menstruate, cannot have children, and cannot nurse children. They can force change physically but adding and removing body parts but in every cell in their body they still carry an XY chromosome and are still not a biological woman and therefore have absolutely no right competing against biological females. Destroying biological female sports in the quest of a political statement is a slap in the face, an absolute injustice, and shows a diabolical hatred towards biological females. If you have any females in your families, ask yourself would I want my loved one to lose college college scholarships, face unfair competition after training their hardest, and face bodily and emotional harm, possible death in contact sports. Where is your morality and humanity? I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Michael Green

(b)(6)

From: morryb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Morry Bierman (b)(6)

From: DavidF@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. David E FREDERICK (b)(6)

From: wsmclin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan McCasland (b)(6)

From: robertjodoin63@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Jodoin (b)(6)

From: rhigginsok@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robin Higgins (b)(6)

From: rachlerma@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rachel Lerma (b)(6)

From: pds5888@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pam Swearingen (b)(6)

From: jeannie_43us@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Regina Weed (b)(6)

From: Jen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jennifer Delacruz (b)(6)

From: larryd51@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Larry Davis (b)(6)

From: brendahcopeland@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Howell Copeland III (b)(6)

From: sedojen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jenny Sedo [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: cbrig15@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cristine Briguglio (b)(6)

From: vw22022@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marie Sibenik (b)(6)

From: cybored@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pete Baird (b)(6)

From: rickey_thomas23@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Six granddaughters in athletics in public school, some with future possibilities for scholarship in their sport, competing with biological males is likely to eliminate their chances and possibly eliminate the possibility of college. If they were your granddaughters? Thank you! Rebecca Thomas

(b)(6)

From: dmroland3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I will spread this to every parent, business person, neighbor, family member I can reach! The Department of Education doesn't decide gender identity! That was done at birth. Someone needs to go back to human anatomy class 101. No ruling, medical alterations, or vivid imaginations can change what sexual organs a child is born with. So....I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Denise Roland (b)(6)

From: kimberlyk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kimberly Key (b)(6)

From: Jamessevers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Severs (b)(6)

From: sisterphilip@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sister Philip Ellenberger (b)(6)

From: deborah.mccoy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deborah McCoy (b)(6)

From: dsdbc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:56:18 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sheri Collins (b)(6)

From: ssmax124@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I'm standing up for what I believe is right for my children, for society and for what we teach them about gender, sex and normal relationships and the boundaries of these. I don't want my children forced to go against our teachings, just for the pleasure of the LGBT+, by trying to make their opinions the norm. Just by saying it's "good, right and normal" doesn't make it so. Hint, the biological parts do NOT fit; ask the plumbers if they put male fittings together, versus male and female fittings, and the system work? LGBT+ can teach their children this, but I object to my children being taught that!! They continue to stoop to make us believe that their feelings for the same sex, and any sex, is normal; it's not! They're trying to justify their choices, so it makes them feel better, and rip apart the traditional nuclear family. What I believe is at stake here is: 1. A student's right to privacy for their biological sex; not to have to share facilities with someone who isn't their same biological sex. This just invites abuse, intimidation and sexual predatory actions. As if bullying it's enough (yeah, how's that zero tolerance policy really working out? Answer, not very well, and it hasn't reduced bullying significantly!), now this opens the door to a whole range of events on top of that! Events that can scar a student for the rest of their lives! 2. Fairness in competition. Girls and boys have different body builds which allow them to compete on a level playing field when they are competing against those of the same biological sex! To have a biological boy(s) competing with biological girls give them an unfair advantage. Fairness is a concept that children get, and at young ages, demand and call out when things aren't "fair." In other words, they know this why contradict this meaningful and appropriate concept? There is none!! 3. I totally disagree with the condoning of the ideas that contradict heterosexual relationships. And this is just another ploy for LGBT+ community to "normalize" the abnormal. They're trying to get the rest of us convinced that their "ways" are normal, despite the internal conflict they are going through. I believe that Childhood should be innocent, not bombarded with messages that some parents, like myself, abhor! On his first day in office, President Biden issued an executive order aimed at obliterating the Title IX protections for women and girls' sports. Not long afterwards, he issued another order, this time with the goal of entrenching the LGBT agenda into schools more generally. The Department of Education has acted on these mandates by rapidly rolling back protections for children (particularly girls) in schools. So far, the Department has: 1. Withdrawn a Trump administration letter of findings against the Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference for violating Title IX by allowing biological males to play sports designated for females. 2. Archived the Trump administration's helpful January 8 memo – based on biology and fairness – regarding the Supreme Court's Bostock decision and its effect on Title IX. Archiving it made it no longer effective. Does the Dept. of Ed. have the legal authority to do this? It's their job to implement concepts, not make them. 3. Announced a comprehensive review of the Department's regulations implementing Title IX. And since the Department has announced a public hearing on Title IX and I'm letting you know how you think of these actions. Abhorrent. These ideas do not reflect my beliefs!! NOW is the time to let them know they should respect parental rights and protect schoolchildren, particularly young girls! There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal right you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power, by you and by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Remember, public education was founded with the Bible as a center piece! If a person can't read, they can't understand the Bible for themselves. (Just a little history lesson.) Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and many do not consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. I certainly don't!! Oh, and the platform this is all built on is the forcing of the lies of evolution on generations of children and students of all ages. Doing so without their consent (I do Not consent, by choosing to send my children to public school), is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Shawn Summers

(b)(6)

From: Catloverbrooks@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Terri Brooks (b)(6)

From: Brownj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jim C Brown (b)(6)

From: dlsiebert@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I wanted to address the situation regarding the office for Education Civil Rights (OCR) Please understand I value protecting the rights of females to compete against biological females and not have biological males become part of their athletic events and activities. I have always believed as well that parents should have the final word in how these activities should be handled and not government oversight. Parents are far better equipped to discern what is right for their children. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Thank you! Pastor Dennis Siebert (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: akirk71609@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Angel Kirk (b)(6)

From: wilmore601@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wilbur Moreland (b)(6)

From: kappytarr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kathleen Parr (b)(6)

From: mj041984@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please consider the following: By what authority can you actually act. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I am asking you to please do the right thing and not use what authority you do have to usurp parents' authority over their children. May you make the right decision, as the consequences will be far reaching...you know that sowing and reaping thing. Thank you! Mary Joseph (b)(6)

From: pastordrollins@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Donald Rollins

(b)(6)

From: Fionashelly70@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sunny Cho (b)(6)

From: chuck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Charles Donneberg (b)(6)

From: jeyoung707@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jean Young (b)(6)

From: jddnhavas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Denise Walker (b)(6)

From: Lane0603@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alana Hutchins [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jzarate1232@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jenny Zarate (b)(6)

From: knappak1994@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jonathan A Knapp None

From: kcarere33@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Kim Carere (b)(6)

From: dd1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christina Scheuermann (b)(6)

From: scott6640@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. S. Beeny (b)(6)

From: jim.amrod@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jim Amrod (b)(6)

From: carolinemaendel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Caroline Maendel (b)(6)

From: robertfreitas2007@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Freitas (b)(6)

From: ksweetheimer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Karen H Sweetheimer (b)(6)

From: rv2012a@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Roger Stanko (b)(6)

From: prairieroseinco@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sheri Scheer (b)(6)

From: dbsax154@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Saxton (b)(6)

From: maxsmart52003@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Smart (b)(6)

From: jan_a@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Martha Aycock (b)(6)

From: rms59@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ruth Smith (b)(6)

From: gardenofthebeloved@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Don Frank (b)(6)

From: csgexcpa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Chuck Gromowsky (b)(6)

From: jjtreedemed9193@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Trudy Prostejovsky (b)(6)

From: emilytiedeman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Emily Tiedeman (b)(6)

From: ladyvstar1100@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Melissa Johnson (b)(6)

From: jan_a@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Aycock (b)(6)

From: mjr7774@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Margie Reed (b)(6)

From: apostles4jc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Beth Galvez (b)(6)

From: blashk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kevin Blash (b)(6)

From: dorisjmikolajczyk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Doris Mikolajczyk (b)(6)

From: Anna.Tawfik@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anna Tawfik (b)(6)

From: judyward_14@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. There are only two sexes- male and female. God did it on purpose and anything else goes directly against His will. Vengeance is mine said the Lord- I will repay. Please believe it and obey Him. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alice Judith Ward (b)(6)

From: klein.michelle0@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Michelle Marie Wert (b)(6)

From: georgi.brown@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

GeorgiAnn Brown (b)(6)

From: Coupons444@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please protect our kids!!! We need you to stand in the gap for the kids of our country!!! I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Caroline Travis (b)(6)

From: sweetmomster11@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael Belote (b)(6)

From: frankfrazier@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Frank Frazier (b)(6)

From: mark.robb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Males are competing as females and winning which is not fair to biological females. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Mark Robb (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: serowekamp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sara Rowekamp (b)(6)

From: james.moore@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Respectfully, I wish to express my deep concern regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you for listening to my genuine concerns about these most important matters. Please respect our children, parents, families, girls and athletics. Thank you! Dr. James Moore

From: jef.mc3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jeff McClarty (b)(6)

From: terryhayes555@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Terry Hayes (b)(6)

From: woodwavl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vicki Woodward (b)(6)

From: smithpamela888@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Pamela Smith (b)(6)

From: bncuster@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Barbara Custer (b)(6)

From: soara5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Linda Westerinen (b)(6)

From: donccox700@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Don Cox (b)(6)

From: cdavenport@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Charlotte Davenport (b)(6)

From: julie.sigmund@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Julie Sigmund (b)(6)

From: jan_a@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janet Aycock (b)(6)

From: johnmcclendonjr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John McClendon (b)(6)

From: ojentony@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anthony Ockenfels [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: farve_42@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dorrethia Harris (b)(6)

From: vleeathome@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Virginia McManus (b)(6)

From: jaywilly26@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janet Zinsmeister (b)(6)

From: billy.hembree@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bill Hembree (b)(6)

From: atallen2003@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Travis Allen (b)(6)

From: nailsbyandrea@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Andrea Litke (b)(6)

From: liebenhaus@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Fred Wilhoft (b)(6)

From: sandygirl629@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandy Mcallister (b)(6)

From: Geonuckolls@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

George Nuckolls (b)(6)

From: marvin3gardens@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I'm writing about the U.S. Dep't. of Education's OCR announcement regarding enforcing Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Any rulemaking by DOE regarding gender identity and sexual orientation by the Biden administration will be rejected. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students. Should you proceed, extensive consideration must be given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn basic skills, not controversial topics like Queer Theory. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents so that parents can address identity questions according to their moral beliefs. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately to achieve fairness, prevent risk of physical injury, and to respect privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing on teams that align with their biological sex. Please allow my comments to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Margaret Figert (b)(6)

From: erhosler@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Roberta Hosler (b)(6)

From: buymine2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Copeland (b)(6)

From: sueinsalem@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Susan E Lake (b)(6)

From: jsharpe761@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Sharpe (b)(6)

From: tom.vanhooser@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Thomas Vanhooser (b)(6)

From: dougcarter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Douglas Carter (b)(6)

From: jlhemphillii@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Hemphill (b)(6)

From: mohawk1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Rob Fuller (b)(6)

From: brdenton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Barbara Denton [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: ra.rasmussen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Rachel Rasmussen (b)(6)

From: momtosix@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lynnette LaForge (b)(6)

From: maguire14@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you, as a parent of four children in the public school system and as an educator in the public school system, regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I am deeply concerned about the issues at hand and urge you to keep these considerations in mind as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Charissa Maguire

(b)(6)

From: stevehollylandon@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Steve Byrd (b)(6)

From: wittenbrook5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Michelle Wittenbrook (b)(6)

From: coupondumpster@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Outrageous. Men are men, women are women, and no amount of pretending will ever change biology. What you ought to fund is mental health hospitals for the people crazy enough to think boys and men should compete against women and girls. I don't support any of this BS, and in ,1972 this law was not written for mentally ill people. Let the girls alone Thank you! Davina Dempster (b)(6)

From: johalle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Allen (b)(6)

From: elaine.mccleary41@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As the father of three daughters, I am offended that you would even consider allowing males to share the same restrooms, lockerrooms and showers with young girls. The male anatomy does not belong in places that have been reserved for the safety and privacy of females. I ran track in high school and have watched track at all levels both male and female. It is clear that the male anatomy has distinct advantages over the female anatomy in sports like track and field. I would not want my daughters or any other girls denied awards just because some boy is allowed to enter the same event and win by virtue of his anatomical advantage. Girls sports should be for girls as they were intended by Title IX. I hope you keep these thoughts in your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Arthur McCleary

(b)(6)

From: marynote@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maryellen Bashioum (b)(6)

From: chip64@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

To Director Goldberg, Concerning the public hearing regarding Title IX, PLEASE make certain that parental rights are honored & protected. There is no place for any rule making on gender identities based on divisive politics in the classroom! The education of our children is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education. No "Queer Theory" libelous lies about our nation's history like the 1619 project, or forcing our daughters to compete with biological males in sports do anything to advance education. They only harm our children , our families & our communities. I hope you honor the rights of children, parents & our nation by not allowing an overreaching federal government take away our rights & freedoms. Thank you! Deborah Steinmetz (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: jzelnick@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Zelnick (b)(6)

From: susiemarks47@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Marks (b)(6)

From: cummhp61@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Harry Cummins [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: rwamber@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I am in full agreement with the above letter. No biological girl or woman should have to compete against a born as a biological male. Hopefully, people and educator come to their senses and not make this a political issue. These should be a parents, local and state school system issue to decide. Hopefully, they will realize both genders were not built the same, totally different muscular and bone structure. Don't discourage our females from playing sports. Women have come so far to be seen as important in the work place and it should also be the same at their schools. Thank you! Ruth Amber

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: rajcs8005@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patti Hollohan (b)(6)

From: chageman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. The federal government needs to stay out of public education completely and leave it to the states and local communities on how K-12th grade children are taught. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Chris Hageman (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: ryskampcindy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cynthia Ryskamp (b)(6)

From: euladickson51@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eula Dickson (b)(6)

From: jguerard@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Guerard (b)(6)

From: patbarnamez@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. WATCH OUT! watch your backs. All of you are being closely watched because we do not like your dictatorship of and in education you are forcing on the public and our innocent children. You may soon regret what evil you are projecting. So the shoe will be on the other foot! Thank you!

Patricia Barnes (b)(6)

From: parrinop31@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I ask that you DO NOTHING that would permit biological males to participate in any girls' sports. That would be a direct affront on girls & women, not to mention to their parents & families who have watched their daughters & supported their striving to excel over many years pursuing their sport. Then to lose to biological males with bodies created differently, typically stronger & faster by nature, is a terrible injustice. Please keep the fairness to these girls & women in mind as if they were your own daughters when deciding where you will take your stand on this matter. Thank you! Peggy Parrino

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: tnp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Tom Proffitt (b)(6)

From: jpkooob@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Koob (b)(6)

From: theoffutts@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carla Offutt (b)(6)

From: betty.welsh1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Betty Welsh (b)(6)

From: mccabejon70@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jon McCabe (b)(6)

From: welend@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Linda Smithson (b)(6)

From: jadz1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

JoAnn Daniel (b)(6)

From: joshtcarlson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Josh Carlson

From: mamakalama1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Kalama (b)(6)

From: jis2blessed@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. In a time when so many students are not on track with their reading, writing and arithmetic skills, it makes no sense to waste time on issues that should be taught by parents. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. The percentage of transgender people in this country is miniscule. There is no reason why their wishes should override the majority particularly when giving them special status is literally physically and emotionally detrimental to others. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Jennifer Weatherwax (b)(6)

From: mike.leger13@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Michael Leger (b)(6)

From: dm1schott@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Donna Schott (b)(6)

From: Mritchart4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marsha Ritchart (b)(6)

From: smccall5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As an educator of 40 plus years, I have personally observed how important these protections are for our children. Parental rights and responsibilities should be of paramount importance in any decisions made where children are concerned - not the political agenda of a group of activists and those who happen to be in leadership positions. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Susan Mccall (b)(6)

From: rperni1225@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ryan Pernicano (b)(6)

From: jrarriens@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Julie Arriens (b)(6)

From: haef.baker@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lee Baker (b)(6)

From: doug.coy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Douglas Coy (b)(6)

From: jpeachey7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Joan Peachey (b)(6)

From: cherylhale950@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cheryl Hale (b)(6)

From: jerrymeek@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jerry Meek (b)(6)

From: dkrodocker@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Diane Rodocker (b)(6)

From: macglennheights@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Ann Chancellor (b)(6)

From: sbgmamabear@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandra Van Vliet (b)(6)

From: kellynjulie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Julie Knowlden (b)(6)

From: atruczi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marie Langer (b)(6)

From: pvfieceke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Veronica Fieceke (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: vliving222@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vanessa Powers (b)(6)

From: rjfmrf2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Madelyn Fair (b)(6)

From: lmsattler@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Lane Sattler (b)(6)

From: locjag@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Laura M Hawie (b)(6)

From: glynrob@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Glyn Roberts (b)(6)

From: blackforkgarage@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Elaine Staines (b)(6)

From: Diane.haley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Haley (b)(6)

From: margieklm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:45:04 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marjorie Klimachefsky (b)(6)

From: cstrapac@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cindy Strapac (b)(6)

From: danpattersonjr1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dan Patterson (b)(6)

From: markpsavage@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Savage (b)(6)

From: jmonoski5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janelle Monoski (b)(6)

From: patgubala@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Gubala (b)(6)

From: robinbullis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Robin Bullis (b)(6)

From: cougar4247@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael DiMartino (b)(6)

From: wj.rodny@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Wade Roddy (b)(6)

From: jeannerourke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeanne Rourke Jeanne Marie Rourke (b)(6)

From: mooneyjs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Mooney (b)(6)

From: jimmueller1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Mueller (b)(6)

From: ryskampcindy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cynthia Ryskamp (b)(6)

From: strtocu2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Curtis Morton (b)(6)

From: Crissieswift@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Crissie J Swift (b)(6)

From: cwc812@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Chris Cuzzucoli (b)(6)

From: syckes@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Susan Caldwell (b)(6)

From: vgray1950@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Van H Gray (b)(6)

From: ramsears@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Debra McClain (b)(6)

From: bobn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Norton (b)(6)

From: dan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daniel Severson (b)(6)

From: ross_holbrook@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Holbrook (b)(6)

From: mfarford@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Melinda Farford (b)(6)

From: dkwiedenheft@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. It is ultimately parents' responsibility who are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you for your attention to this matter! Darlene Wiedenheft (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: plmorris1949@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Morris (b)(6)

From: shaffnerdorene@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dorene Shaffner (b)(6)

From: rmott83@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Rick Mott (b)(6)

From: cassiescamp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dean Cassiday (b)(6)

From: delphidoc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Larry Adams (b)(6)

From: rld_62@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reyne Polk (b)(6)

From: jjduckworld@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dennis Zimmerman (b)(6)

From: pammyjean66@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pamela Paschal (b)(6)

From: jan.bennett@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jan Bennett (b)(6)

From: scnoriega@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Steven Noriega (b)(6)

From: skye@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Chaplain Skye Alison (b)(6)

From: jani.gallagher@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Janibeth B Gallagher (b)(6)

From: tombarbleonard@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Leonard [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: dsklockenga@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Darren Klockenga (b)(6)

From: wendymorey1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wendy Morey (b)(6)

From: dennis.powell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Dennis Powell (b)(6)

From: cook@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judith Cook (b)(6)

From: frankbyron2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cindy Frank (b)(6)

From: umbrlafoto@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Francesca Popp-Wright (b)(6)

From: arby93@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Russell Beisel Jr. (b)(6)

From: jonmaj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Majda (b)(6)

From: ferrari@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Don Duc [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: seboyer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations YOU ARE AWARE OF as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an ABUSE OF POWER by the Biden administration. EDUCATION IS A STATE AND LOCAL MEASURE, protected by law from federal incursion. POLITICS HAS NO PLACE in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to PARENTAL RIGHTS. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports DOES NOT STOP TRANSGENDER ATHLETES from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Steve Boyer

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: jtob@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joyce Tobin (b)(6)

From: lisagarnett@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lisa Garnett Garnett (b)(6)

From: leesmith8075@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Almalee M Smith (b)(6)

From: blakely_bern@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Bernadette Blakely (b)(6)

From: philthreet@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Phil Threet (b)(6)

From: carlakeller15@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, The Federal government has no business interfering with state affairs. Biological males should not be competing against biological females. It simply is not fair. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Carla Keller (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: annejory@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Anne Ryland (b)(6)

From: cak97@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Panos Kokoropoulos (b)(6)

From: bujo2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Lawrence Bujnowski (b)(6)

From: hokeydinah@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Melissa Kujala (b)(6)

From: Jazzbearry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Katherine Aker (b)(6)

From: sunnecp21@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Sunne Cope (b)(6)

From: robinsnest1116@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you for considering my thoughts on this extremely important issue. Parents & girls will be greatly impacted in a negative way if this proceeds as currently stated. Sincerely, Ms Robin Downing

(b)(6)

From: rosshlubbers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ross Lubbers (b)(6)

From: sharon.calles@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sharon Calles (b)(6)

From: beckymarcum.tg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Becky Marcum (b)(6)

From: jdwoni@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jerry Williams (b)(6)

From: jackeu100354@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jack Harbaugh (b)(6)

From: Nanswrld1456@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nancy Andreotti (b)(6)

From: dcavnj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dale Cavanaugh (b)(6)

From: j1899svg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

To Acting Director Goldberg, This message is in regards to the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are very important considerations of which you need to be aware as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. You must first evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is a clear abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, you must give proper consideration to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! John Dunlap (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: th15347@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, My first thoughts are; what gives you; an unelected official, the authority to make rules pertaining to every person in our country??? My second thought is; why not have these transgender persons compete with each other ONLY??? NOT biologicals!! Let those persons enjoy their own league. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. My personal opinion is, this is a totally ASSININE situation. Thank you! Terry Hunt (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: joannsal63@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joann Salazar (b)(6)

From: brandtaces@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kathleen Brandt (b)(6)

From: timothy_bolinger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Timothy Bolinger (b)(6)

From: hdeeh5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs Holly Hart (b)(6)

From: mdsleepys@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Yolanda Wilson (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: edhrdh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Elizabeth C Hutches (b)(6)

From: fredrotermund@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Fred Rotermond (b)(6)

From: darrfarm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Cathy Darr (b)(6)

From: patgubala@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Gubala (b)(6)

From: bill.raymond@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bill Raymond (b)(6)

From: theseasix@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carmen Worrell (b)(6)

From: mnac77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mike Dortignac (b)(6)

From: marylouisejohnson54@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Mary Johnson (b)(6)

From: bmt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Brenda Teachey (b)(6)

From: fbuchanan9842@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. I believe parents not legislators nor Presidents should be allowed to teach their children especially when it comes to gender identity and sexual orientation. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Most of my friends in South Carolina share this view. Thank you! Fred Buchanan (b)(6)

From: n9gtxjanet@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has absolutely no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Janet Kent (b)(6)

From: marilyn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please consider the following when gathering the information for review. 1. Is it legal what you are considering? 2. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. 3. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Marilyn Jane Hancock

(b)(6)

From: starby@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Scott Starick (b)(6)

From: csz_stl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are and should be the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not delusions of gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop gender-confused athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex, but the reality of the physiological differences between males and females must be respected. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Carl Zimmerman (b)(6)

From: rcpruitt76@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Re: Enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). If you have a daughter who is involved in sports, I will guess that she, in private, would express a desire to compete only with and against other biological females. It is totally absurd to think that a girl should have to compete against a male, whether a true male or one who claims to be a girl. Please don't disregard the desires of millions of females in America who want Title IX protected as it stands. This is only fair and right to the true females of our country. Thank you! Mr. Ronald Pruitt (b)(6)

From: dwightmv700@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dwight Speir (b)(6)

From: Emyembrey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Emalynn Embrey (b)(6)

From: gregory.faw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gregory Faw (b)(6)

From: suroller@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Su Roller (b)(6)

From: bethdovey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Beth Dovey (b)(6)

From: sbcpastor@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Neil Wood

(b)(6)

From: miaconis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael Iaconis (b)(6)

From: mpsbc7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please be careful and do what is best for the children. Thank You for your consideration. Michael & Kristen Slaughter (b)(6)

From: prodmanwoof@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mike Newbury (b)(6)

From: weemsa26@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. To sum up: sexual identity and Queer Theory should not even enter public education. It should be solely up to the parents about how to proceed with their children. Pushing political agendas on children is absolutely wrong and should never happen. Allowing biological males to compete on teams for biological females is morally reprehensible, not to mention physically dangerous. Girls are losing to boys in sports and they will stop playing. Then we will just have all male sports again. It is like we are moving backwards in history and undoing all that has been done to create equality for women. This will take all of the equality away and tell women that they are not valuable and that they do not matter. Being a strong, confident, educated woman, I have serious problems with these agendas and do not support any of them in any way whatsoever! Thank you! Mrs. April Weems (b)(6)

From: beverlymorg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Gender vs biology. Why can I not identify as a 99 year old? Surely age is as important as gender. This foolishness has to stop. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Beverly Morgan

(b)(6)

From: drgtsoo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. As a physician I have been involved with transgender co-workers and patients, and they should have proper respect, but the denial of physiological and psychological issues that ensue denies reality. Thank you! Dr. George T Stafford

(b)(6)

From: craigeggws@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Peggy Stoll [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: mheroes4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Marie M Hogan (b)(6)

From: roseoffreedom12@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and almost unanimously do not consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I was an athlete in high school who played soccer on a girls team. We had our foul play and injuries like any team. But if I would have had to compete on a team with biological men? That would have been horrific. The trauma, life altering injuries, and brutality of just having to play a high contact sport would have taken all the fairness, competition and fun out of playing altogether. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I hope you stand up for women like me. Thank you! Miss Melanie Weaver (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: libby8013@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Libby DeMattia (b)(6)

From: cwwilmot1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Craig Wilmot (b)(6)

From: croneleetun@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Leetun (b)(6)

From: christiancounselingofathens@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Fletcher McClelland (b)(6)

From: roseandjohn126@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rosalee Richer (b)(6)

From: loorem@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lacey Loorem (b)(6)

From: scmbrogdon@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Claire Brogdon [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: oglejd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Ogle (b)(6)

From: yate7005@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Wanda Yates (b)(6)

From: rnethery51@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rose Nethery (b)(6)

From: mgmlynch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Grace Lynch (b)(6)

From: janmikbc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janine Cameron (b)(6)

From: md.huddle13@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Huddle (b)(6)

From: rscott@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. It is nothing short of moronic to think that boys/men should be able to compete against girls/women! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Randall Scott

(b)(6)

From: dlmertz619@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dale Mertz (b)(6)

From: debrafuller@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbie Fuller (b)(6)

From: Vljcca@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vickie Jenewein (b)(6)

From: briangpowell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Brian Powell (b)(6)

From: ggerber@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gene Gerber (b)(6)

From: jaluscornerious@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jesse Cawthon (b)(6)

From: kdemay723@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, There are some very important points you should consider as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Education is a state and local matter, and parents should have primary control of what their children are taught. LGBTQ theories certainly don't belong in any form at the elementary level. Teaching young children, who often have difficulty telling fantasy from reality and are easily propagandized, to question their gender is not education. I believe be worth including some aspects of gender dysphoria as part of sex-ed in high school, when for some gender identity is an issue, if only to prevent the persecution of those with gender dysphoria. However, too many unhappy people are persuaded the problem lies in being misgendered, and they then ignore other problems causing their pain and thus don't receive the actual treatment they need. Witness the large number of trans adults who regret their decision and de-transition. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. No matter how many hormones a trans female takes, she still has more muscle mass and strength than the strongest female. In addition, bone length ratios also give biological males an advantage. Keep in mind the women's Olympic soccer team was not just beaten by, they were humiliated by a team of 15-year old HS boys in their practice games for the last Olympics. The unfairness of the case in Connecticut where the state female champion finished third behind two trans girls. It should be clear to any fair person that this girl and those who rightfully should have gotten 2nd and 3rd place were cheated. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. If there are problems with them doing so, that is where your efforts should be focused. I hope you keep my views in mind and allow them to guide your review of Title IX. Thank you! Kathy Demay

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: bjmjam@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joyce Miller (b)(6)

From: rmason@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard Mason (b)(6)

From: rshurden62@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Randy Shurden (b)(6)

From: ostrowski.4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michelle Ostrowski (b)(6)

From: thatcherb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bill Thatcher (b)(6)

From: louannalbrechts@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Louann Albregts (b)(6)

From: vduke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Valerie Duke (b)(6)

From: rushoe7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Rushoe (b)(6)

From: ritabarnes@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rita Barnes [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jsclady@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jennifer Cagle (b)(6)

From: jdouthitt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judy Douthitt (b)(6)

From: ersperger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal overreach. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Erin Sperger None

From: bdj4011@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Jackson (b)(6)

From: steve.robinson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I'm a high school teacher and coach and I can assure you that by allowing biological males to integrate into female sports would devastate girls athletics as we know it. Any way you try to spin it, it's an unfair advantage. Stand up and do what's right for once. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Steven Robinson

(b)(6)

From: pepe_rides@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I am alarmed at the erosion of parental rights by the inclusion of controversial social engineering curriculum in public schools and at the corruption of girls' sports by allowing biological males to unfairly compete. I am using the following talking points because they articulate my position exactly. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Karen Heyer

(b)(6)

From: bobbiesuerose@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration and protection given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex, or with other transgender athletes. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ms. Barbara S Rose

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: valhentz1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Valerie Hentzschel (b)(6)

From: elizabeth.riordan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Riordan (b)(6)

From: selancour2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sybil Lancour (b)(6)

From: cashaffer28@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cindy Shaffer (b)(6)

From: somjas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Sommer (b)(6)

From: djfrisby@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jodi Frisby (b)(6)

From: alicia.thibodaux@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alicia Thibodaux (b)(6)

From: helengwhite@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Helen White (b)(6)

From: harristb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Tom Harris (b)(6)

From: prtilden1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pamela Tilden (b)(6)

From: sbernadetteott@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sharon Ott (b)(6)

From: sdbookscout@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debra Waste (b)(6)

From: cheriwaite@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cheri Waite (b)(6)

From: rrdnd2002@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Rene Diaz (b)(6)

From: JuanCorominasW@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Juan Corominas (b)(6)

From: mackay.jeffrey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jeffrey A MacKay (b)(6)

From: felice@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Felice Durazo (b)(6)

From: carolynestepp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:33:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Might I add, that God has given parents the responsibility to raise and train their children ... not the government. He also created us male and female in his image. Two of our daughters were very Athletic and it is a know and accepted fact that male and females are created with different abilities. The best times in track and field races as well as cross country races were always obtained by boys. That's why the races were gender specific. Truth is truth.... Thank you!

Carolyn Estepp (b)(6)

From: Khunnicutt4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kim Hunnicutt (b)(6)

From: robnjoan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert W Lucas (b)(6)

From: catole@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carole R Simmons (b)(6)

From: Freetfam1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I greatly benefited by participating in women's sports. It encouraged me to be disciplined, goal-oriented, and a lifelong participant in physical activity. Please don't deny girls and women the joy of competing and excelling in female only sports. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Janice Freet

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: cldml9@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Olga Loret de Mola (b)(6)

From: twoknights2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rick Ritter (b)(6)

From: Mashley4jc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Misti Ashley (b)(6)

From: mr.scott@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Scott Butzin (b)(6)

From: denniskovach1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dennis Kovach (b)(6)

From: duncanme@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Duncan (b)(6)

From: eioneill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eileen O'Neill (b)(6)

From: carltxark@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Carl Higginbotham (b)(6)

From: cbtb1012@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cynthia Barbeau (b)(6)

From: lonnie.nedderman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lonnie Nedderman (b)(6)

From: abe.laughlin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Abe Laughlin (b)(6)

From: jlpac53@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Pace (b)(6)

From: Wesdixon129@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Wes Dixon (b)(6)

From: Wendylogsdon@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wendy Logsdon (b)(6)

From: cmcpeggy.wills@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Margaret Wills (b)(6)

From: lequieucy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reginald and Carol LeQuieu (b)(6)

From: germanp49@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Pavel German (b)(6)

From: sharrawood@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sue Harrawood (b)(6)

From: moyasafin2004@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judy Colvin (b)(6)

From: Inusser@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Larry Nusser (b)(6)

From: debjfriis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deb Friis (b)(6)

From: Ccwaynebraska@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Victor Samuel [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: beldeanna19@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. DeAnna Bell (b)(6)

From: teenamonroe@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David (b)(6)

From: d3j6man21@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dominic Mancini (b)(6)

From: mngranny22@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vicky Bergman (b)(6)

From: SLJaeger12@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Teachers should educate children in a way to help them to think critically and work through processes to find answers. In the discussions during classroom education, a child should not know the political leaning of a teacher at all. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Women have worked very hard on securing women's sports for many years that allow them to compete on equal level with other women - in a short time, men are taking that away from women athletes. Please help girls/women to have these privileges' protected again. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Sandra Jaeger (b)(6)

From: ronaldlloyd2009@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Lloyd (b)(6)

From: 3sheepinapen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sharon Sheppard (b)(6)

From: gods_dancer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Ivette Chapman (b)(6)

From: faithfamilymaui@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you, Lag de Leon

(b)(6)

From: emile@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972. When my daughters were 10 and 12 years old, they played on volleyball teams at our local playground. That year, the parents of a 12 year old boy convinced the affiliated Sports Association that he should be allowed to play on the girl's volleyball team at his local playground. In the first game that he played, he spiked the ball so hard, that he broke a finger on two girls on the other team as they attempted to defended against his spiked balls. Because of his unintentional, but factual, being very much stronger than girls his own age, he was asked to stop playing on the girl's volley team. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Joseph Robichaux (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: larrydmeg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Larry Megenhardt (b)(6)

From: ranman_93@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Raymund A Novak (b)(6)

From: mschreiber@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mark Schreiber (b)(6)

From: bbconh2o@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Steve Jakowski (b)(6)

From: Kvstemwell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kevin Stemwell (b)(6)

From: mdfelts@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Melvin Felts (b)(6)

From: miamial1956@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alan Lopez (b)(6)

From: kme211@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael P Eiseman (b)(6)

From: vmorgan8676@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Virginia Morgan (b)(6)

From: caz4600@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carol A Howard (b)(6)

From: hens.er@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Rachel Hennigh (b)(6)

From: bjoost@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Betha Oostema (b)(6)

From: kburdic1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there needs to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Biological males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Women have fought for decades to achieve equal rights and now their sporting events are being undermined by an anti-science diabolical political agenda. It's wrong. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Kenn Burdick

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: rangel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Raul Angel (b)(6)

From: lpw243@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lois P Willis (b)(6)

From: dianeanddon@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Don Leshner (b)(6)

From: dhelton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dorcas Helton (b)(6)

From: d_temp1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Dana Templeton (b)(6)

From: deana.carter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Above all else, the priority of education needs to be on equipping children with the necessary education to build provisional skills for their future and to instill a love of learning that will motivate them to be a life long learner. The reforms should primarily focus on getting politics out of the classroom because it takes away from the real purpose. Cultural and political issues need to be addressed in the home and in society where people can openly discuss and determine outside of an authoritarian viewpoint that steers the outcome. Also, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Deana Carter (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: jmarshall65@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am personally writing to you about the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. As a parent of a girl athlete, I want to emphasize that gender is biology, not feelings of gender identity. This is a time to "follow the science" and not destroy women's sports for a "political feel-good". I ask you to keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! John Marshall (b)(6)

From: jimac132@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Mccarthy (b)(6)

From: keropi808@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Roxanne Toyota (b)(6)

From: melz0325@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mel Billups (b)(6)

From: ab_badger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anthony Badger (b)(6)

From: iso2020@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Samuel Porfido (b)(6)

From: lhemmeke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Hemmeke (b)(6)

From: jorwiebe@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jorlean Wiebe (b)(6)

From: slmartin2002@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sheryl Martin (b)(6)

From: Chyfchang@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Catherine Foo Chang (b)(6)

From: ceddawg77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cedric Mengelil (b)(6)

From: bailey.2535@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Frank G Bailey (b)(6)

From: Dlomakoski@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Lomakoski (b)(6)

From: vickie.b.steele@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vickie Steele (b)(6)

From: sdtrodler@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sharon Trodler (b)(6)

From: Chachacallahan2011@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. As a parent of a girl and a boy, this hits home and has an impact on both of my children. I am concerned about the safety of both of them, but especially my daughter if changes are made. Please keep girls and boys sports determined by biological sex and please keep girls bathrooms and lockers for biological girls. Thank you! Chantel Callahan

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: cjward_11@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Ward (b)(6)

From: dagreek812004@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Aman (b)(6)

From: info@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ralph Durkee (b)(6)

From: sagarmvr2003@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Sagar Mylabathula (b)(6)

From: jonesyjbu@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carolyn Zuniga (b)(6)

From: spltree@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Susan LeCoultre (b)(6)

From: emmykitis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Emmy Kitis (b)(6)

From: denniswaynebrewer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dennis Brewer (b)(6)

From: dirksefam2016@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Dirkse (b)(6)

From: Info@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

B. MacCartney

From: p.rumin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Petra Rumin (b)(6)

From: mconlin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maggie Conlin (b)(6)

From: lisascarlett@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lisa Scarlett (b)(6)

From: gplunkitt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gary Plunkitt (b)(6)

From: surferdude1984@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please do what is biologically and morally the right thing to do. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Douglas Cannon (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: bswoodman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Woodman (b)(6)

From: charleenmcbrayer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael McBrayer (b)(6)

From: gfusilier@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gilda Fusilier (b)(6)

From: ron_o@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ron Osterman (b)(6)

From: dan2002dd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dan Devane (b)(6)

From: toddbkirby@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Todd Kirby (b)(6)

From: redtornado7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mari Litz (b)(6)

From: frenchie1369@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Clinton French (b)(6)

From: barbaradota@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Dota (b)(6)

From: whisperingwood@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Rizvi (b)(6)

From: laca7070@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tom Gilmer (b)(6)

From: djb1jwb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jacqueline Brown (b)(6)

From: ajdaneman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

A J Daneman (b)(6)

From: medcoderpat@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Patricia Sottile (b)(6)

From: tomt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not a chosen gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop those who refer to themselves as transgender from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological gender. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I appreciate your consideration of my views on this matter. Thank you! Tom Touchberry

(b)(6)

From: amybeckner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Amy Beckner (b)(6)

From: trishchristy77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Patricia Christy (b)(6)

From: sdenisac@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandra Denisac (b)(6)

From: cfogal@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Christopher Earl Fogal (b)(6)

From: hearyoume88@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. This is especially important during their teen years. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Miss Sarah Stark

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: rafikiknights@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Patti Knight (b)(6)

From: davidkitkoph.d@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. David Kitko (b)(6)

From: apachyldy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rebecca Lindsey (b)(6)

From: slatz55@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Athans (b)(6)

From: landonsgramp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard Burns (b)(6)

From: garytucker6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gary Tucker (b)(6)

From: conservtv@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bryan Terrell (b)(6)

From: hehasbeengood7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jean Johnson (b)(6)

From: moorhousej@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Moorhouse (b)(6)

From: vgolikmiami@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vladimir Golik (b)(6)

From: Danasquestion@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Dana M Keller (b)(6)

From: janineoconnor@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janine Hanrahan (b)(6)

From: Ida.adkins@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ida L Adkins (b)(6)

From: jmeyer2243@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rebecca Meyer (b)(6)

From: mknrchl2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mike Gilliam (b)(6)

From: kmcd32@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Keith McDonald (b)(6)

From: dahunter07@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Hunt (b)(6)

From: memorylane@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Newell (b)(6)

From: exteach12@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Walter Buckles (b)(6)

From: wilson.ben51@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ben Wilson (b)(6)

From: hatcherdebora@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debora Hatcher (b)(6)

From: eugeniadrye@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eugenia Drye (b)(6)

From: heidi_vanzandt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. The "progressive" education emphasis on gender identity can provoke confusion in children who are too young to understand longterm outcomes - and when their attention would be better spent learning academics and skills. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Heidi Van Zandt (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: geneandyvonne@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Betty Fulford (b)(6)

From: riborgese@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maria Borgese (b)(6)

From: saccoj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Sacco (b)(6)

From: Slg2013@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Sherri Gustine (b)(6)

From: sheryl.goossen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sheryl Goossen (b)(6)

From: olingerfour@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Pamela Olinger (b)(6)

From: gaston7460@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Gaston (b)(6)

From: mnaqua@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Aquadro (b)(6)

From: budb907@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bud Bosman (b)(6)

From: kurtz83@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael E Kurtz (b)(6)

From: rhart704@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Ruth Hart (b)(6)

From: beverlymancu0720@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Beverly Mancuso (b)(6)

From: mrb78@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Maren R Breitwieser (b)(6)

From: ronaldhall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Helen Hall (b)(6)

From: dmorley57@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Donald Morley (b)(6)

From: loverstreet@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lucy S Overstreet (b)(6)

From: pstexas1959@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Patrick Titterington (b)(6)

From: skip71049@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan McGowan (b)(6)

From: sunflowergil@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marion Gillespie (b)(6)

From: danqrz46m@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Daniel Brown (b)(6)

From: oksanam2004@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Oksana Khomich (b)(6)

From: adoshan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Adonica Howard-Browne (b)(6)

From: joe.staten@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joe Staten (b)(6)

From: gto301@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:23:28 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jan Wallaesa (b)(6)

From: tctunget@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Catherine Tunget (b)(6)

From: dave@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Ruszkowski (b)(6)

From: dpl677@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Littlefield (b)(6)

From: baysoutherntpa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Terry Rodriguez Sr. (b)(6)

From: mdmcguire@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Maureen McGuire (b)(6)

From: laca7070@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tom Gilmer (b)(6)

From: maryruga@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Ruga (b)(6)

From: markds9_read@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Regarding your review of the Title IX regulations. 1. Biological males must not be permitted to compete in any sports designated for biological females. 2. Biological males must not have access to locker rooms, bathrooms, or shower facilities designated for biological females. 3. You should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs guide them. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Mark Miller (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: pam.turrill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Pamela Turrill (b)(6)

From: purplebooks@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jill Berends [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: bailey.2535@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Frank G Bailey (b)(6)

From: sdhelzerman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. It is absurd to think that they don't have an unfair advantage. To allow biological males to compete with females destroys female athletics for good. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Sandra Helzerman (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: plduff121@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Paula Duff (b)(6)

From: cherumb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cheryl Rumbaugh (b)(6)

From: pastorbilly@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor William Shively (b)(6)

From: poff79@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sheila Poff (b)(6)

From: jcrabtree7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Crabtree (b)(6)

From: lynnmac1550@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Robert Macadangdang (b)(6)

From: cherricaudill2019@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cherri Caudill (b)(6)

From: Maryealink@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Alink (b)(6)

From: f4starsr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jim Jennings (b)(6)

From: pattitessen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Patti H Tessen (b)(6)

From: twburns51@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Tom Burns (b)(6)

From: cc1158@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Teresa roberts (b)(6)

From: lcason012175@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lori Cason (b)(6)

From: teknovation@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Lackey (b)(6)

From: martin.debbie54@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbie Martin (b)(6)

From: capedd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Michael Moynihan (b)(6)

From: mstockwell7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Margaret Stockwell (b)(6)

From: emgsgradt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael Grady (b)(6)

From: danielmquinn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daniel Quinn (b)(6)

From: rlt_slt90@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Ray Tanyer (b)(6)

From: jim_anderson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jimmy Anderson (b)(6)

From: Mmmargiotta@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michele Margiotts (b)(6)

From: TheoP2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ted Pyle (b)(6)

From: brynngross@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Brynn Gross (b)(6)

From: alisaann90@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alisa Mazur (b)(6)

From: lawrenceedwardson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lawrp Edwardson (b)(6)

From: aquamarine755@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Neil Trunkenbolz (b)(6)

From: tremy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Our schools MUST be sources of education, not indoctrination to a particular ideology. Consistency with the constitution is essential. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Tracy Remy

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Rosalindrcarter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rosalind Carter (b)(6)

From: rvincero@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ryan Workman (b)(6)

From: EarsToHear.net@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gary W Kelly Sr. (b)(6) P.S. These United States is a country that based its Constitution of laws, and for how "Rights" were to be "entitled," upon "the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God" within the first two paragraphs of its founding document, which due to "progressive" secular "reprobate minds," disturbingly undermines that very premise, leaving our children to deal with vile deviancy and dire mental anguish and health risks.

From: zvillecathie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cathie Lewis (b)(6)

From: lilOray@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lilliana Rodriguez (b)(6)

From: Moestouch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Marianne Berlinger (b)(6)

From: naomi.draves@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Naomi May (b)(6)

From: murray.bryan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bryan Murray (b)(6)

From: msraudy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sharlotte Rau (b)(6)

From: comps@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda M Beauchamp (b)(6)

From: comp2u2000@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Tom Van Wart (b)(6)

From: jmk55427@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jeanne Kirsch (b)(6)

From: cherricaudill2019@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cherri Caudill (b)(6)

From: Mailboxforus88@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Brandow (b)(6)

From: gbdteacher13@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gina Davis (b)(6)

From: boonelogan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I don't have a PhD. Fortunately I don't need one to see very clearly what you people are doing or not doing. What you are not doing is protecting children. This is sick and you know it. Stop acting like fools and start acting like adults who care about children. Thank you! Mr. Daniel B Logan (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: stds9@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Why are female athletes being treated as 2nd class citizens in their sports events. Transgender athletes (boys who think they're girls) are still physically masculine and have unfair advantage by their male attributes that women do not naturally have. Take golf for instance, male golfers have a further distance from the hole than women do because males have much more physical strength to hit a golf ball further. Title IX is the way women are allowed in their sports. The vast majority of parents want their daughters to participate in their sporting events against women only and not against men, transgendered or not, who have the physical ability to unfairly hold females back. The Biden administration is very anti-women in their approach to women in sports. It's just another attempt to punish women. Also, education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. The federal government has no right to interfere with this natural duty of parents. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I know of female athletes who have lost opportunities for college athletic scholarships as a result of lower places competing against biological males. Title IX was passed for the benefit of our young women but what the Biden administration wants is a complete mockery of Title IX. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Paul Beiter (b)(6)

From: lorinesp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lori Nespor (b)(6)

From: gd2cook@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert E Hodge None

From: rwychu@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ronald Chu (b)(6)

From: aherrick31@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Ann B Herrick (b)(6)

From: jbenenson100@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Judith Benson (b)(6)

From: largentdc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I understand that you are conducting a review of the Title IX regulations. I want to remind you that education is a state and local matter that doesn't need federal interference. The federal government should not be able to force ideologies on parents and students at any grade level! Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! The Honorable Stephen Largent (b)(6)

From: acts4him@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Randy Kelley (b)(6)

From: cappold@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Chris Appold (b)(6)

From: cortezk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cortez Louise (b)(6)

From: randy.miller.b@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Randall Miller (b)(6)

From: jerrydarfus@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jerry Darfus (b)(6)

From: phoeing@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paul Hoeing (b)(6)

From: carol.portis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Carol Portis (b)(6)

From: ags76@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Colonel (USAF, Ret) & Mrs. Jon Hall (b)(6)

From: rpeterson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Peterson (b)(6)

From: erika.vanhaitsma@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am a concerned parent of five, ages 3-12, writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As your decision will affect my children I have a strong opinion on this matter. I also believe there are some important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have under the constitution to undertake whatever measures you decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power, constitutionally speaking. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. What you believe about gender identity is your concern. It is not your place to make sure my children know or understand your opinion. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. You would not force a Muslim child to participate in a Christmas gathering, because it is against the family's specific beliefs. Please respect my family's specific beliefs, even if they are different than your's, and do not force my children to learn about your political leanings regarding gender identity. Your political leanings have no place in the school system. There are subjects that are too important to be taught in such a public setting as a classroom. Children's privacy need to be respected and their concerns heard by those who love them and know them best... their parents. As much as a teacher may love my child, no teacher can replace a parent. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs.

VanHaitsma (b)(6)

From: fredmynatt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marcella Mynatt (b)(6)

From: rickbeau@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Beaucage (b)(6)

From: s_sinnhuber@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susanne Sinnhuber (b)(6)

From: hoogs4jc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Hoogland (b)(6)

From: susan.keon@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Marie Keon (b)(6)

From: debbiesmith721@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Debbie Smith (b)(6)

From: allenbjb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Allen Baldwin (b)(6)

From: bellaward@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Ward (b)(6)

From: whileilinger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jolena Rich [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: mthomp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Marilyn Thompson (b)(6)

From: broek5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Brian Broekhuizen (b)(6)

From: bm_neeley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Barbara Neeley (b)(6)

From: diannehentzen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Dianne Hentzen (b)(6)

From: TheoP2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ted Pyle (b)(6)

From: cpalgrissom4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Charlene Grissom (b)(6)

From: richard_marlene@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you specifically regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental Constitutional rights to define morality in their homes. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs, faith and prayers dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on genetic sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of unique biological growth and development differences, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I am praying that you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and utilize them to guide your actions plans as you review Title IX. Thank you! Richard Stotts

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: uafan1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robin Brown (b)(6)

From: adriannaboutros@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Jennifer Boutros (b)(6)

From: winston@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

