Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Winston Peterson (b)(6)

From: isaiah6110zskaar@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Zachary Skaar (b)(6)

From: ruth_cole2002@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Please understand that I am deeply concerned about area of our children's and grandchildren's lives and all the complicated changes in their lives. Thank you! Ms. Ruth Cole

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: gnks905@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. & Mrs Gerry Stoneburner (b)(6)

From: long4him@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Samuel Long (b)(6)

From: danbogard71@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daniel Bogard (b)(6)

From: marilyn.betsch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marilyn Betsch (b)(6)

From: eamahn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Eileen Mahn (b)(6)

From: richardsonsr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Richardson (b)(6)

From: kimb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kim Briggs (b)(6)

From: go4jc2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lori Daub (b)(6)

From: Robrseidel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rob Seidel (b)(6)

From: margotbmoore@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Margot Moore (b)(6)

From: donovanseay@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Donovan Seay (b)(6)

From: vickie.cave@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vickie Cave (b)(6)

From: daniel.gans@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daniel Gans (b)(6)

From: jayfoto@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jay Foust None

From: boblwarner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bob Warner (b)(6)

From: golofire@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Emmanuel Newborn (b)(6)

From: Quiverfull@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office request for citizens thoughts on the enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Biden abused his power by signing EO's on this important issue. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents should be the primary arbiters of their children's education; I homeschooled my children because I did not give my consent to my children being taught controversial theories at school where I had no authority to defend my beliefs to my children. I was not allowed to be part of their education in this area. Teaching these theories without my consent was a violation of the public trust and my personal parental rights. I was one of the children involved in the Brown vs the Board of Education initiatives in Livonia Michigan when I was a child. The "information gathering testing" that was all done behind the parents backs came out publicly, after the parents had their rights violated. The trauma caused by this testing has affected me my entire life and it has caused me to distrust the intentions of the government. Children with questions about controversial subjects should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. In the end the children will need to decide if their parents beliefs are truth or falsehoods. Males and females need to compete separately . We are being told to follow the science but when it comes to this issue we are being told to ignore the science. Issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy are all supported by the science. Transgender athletes should compete in sports on teams that align with their scientifically proven biological sex. As you review Title IX I respectfully ask that you take these thoughts into consideration . Thank you! Mrs Susann Weaver

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: richardsonsr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Richardson (b)(6)

From: andy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Andy Jatnieks (b)(6)

From: nprender@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Natalie Tabler (b)(6)

From: joandmichael1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Hall [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: sangorsuch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandra Gorsuch (b)(6)

From: jferron1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Ferroni [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Nanarenea14@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bruce Hawkins (b)(6)

From: seschlegel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stanley Schlegel (b)(6)

From: womenofabundance@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deborah Cannon (b)(6)

From: momperrin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Maryellen Perrin (b)(6)

From: mark.perry44@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Perry (b)(6)

From: lmnceans@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Maria M Mann (b)(6)

From: mdarney@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Biological males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Pastor Matthew Arney

(b)(6)

From: Pjbackforty@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jerry Smith [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: kcheeks123@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kate Cheeks (b)(6)

From: mscpamom@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lynda Troyer (b)(6)

From: jkaelberer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jay Kaelberer (b)(6)

From: jimtater4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jimmy Carter (b)(6)

From: adyuriar@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dave Yuriar (b)(6)

From: gdonner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gregory S Donner (b)(6)

From: mbaker50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Larry Baker (b)(6)

From: tfereshe@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Tammy Ferehsetian (b)(6)

From: wjppcatholicradio@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ed Daccarett (b)(6)

From: debfas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Deborah Fassbender (b)(6)

From: valoriesauls@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Timothy Rex Sauls (b)(6)

From: vrossi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Vincent Rossi [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: bp_johnston@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Bethany Johnston [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jwsaler@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeffrey Saler (b)(6)

From: sawidmark@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sherrill Widmark (b)(6)

From: marilynelldridge@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marilyn Eldridge (b)(6)

From: pa44@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Craig Peck [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: dzmommax2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sally Johnston (b)(6)

From: jahodges03@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Joyce A Hodges (b)(6)

From: cabbagerosetea@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deana Jordan (b)(6)

From: rdba123@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard Bartrem (b)(6)

From: Jtcarlyle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Carlyle (b)(6)

From: pollyspaz04@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ricci Henry (b)(6)

From: hwstaats@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

H.W. Staats (b)(6)

From: stephanie_rieder@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stephanie Rieder (b)(6)

From: dddkennard@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deborah Kennard (b)(6)

From: dianebuller@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I have taught 11 years at a public high school with another 20 at the college level, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Diane Buller (b)(6)

From: golofire@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Emmanuel Newborn (b)(6)

From: dougstonerock@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Douglas Stonerock (b)(6)

From: donnar46@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Donna Russo (b)(6)

From: Rhpinkyandthebrainmh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Renae Holland (b)(6)

From: wayne@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on so-called gender identity and so-called sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like so-called Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about anything regarding sexual matters or identity confusion should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not so-called gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop confused athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Remember one's God-given sex is not based on mental confusion or anything other than physiology. It is determined by God and ingrained in one's most basic biological makeup being defined by the chromosomal makeup at conception and never changes. And it is readily evident to the most casual of observers at one's birth. And this was the natural and obvious intent of Title IX regarding statements on sex. Title IX references to sex cannot be honestly or lawfully regarded to mean anything other than one's natural sex determined at conception. Thank you! Mr. Wayne White (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: margi.ehrke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Margaret Ehrke (b)(6)

From: debbie.balbo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Debbie Balbo (b)(6)

From: mike@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

MICHAEL Reekie (b)(6)

From: jrmorrison54@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Any action on these regulations is a state matter. You can report your opinion and even set recommendations. But, legal action should be the purview of the individual state legislatures. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joseph Morrison (b)(6)

From: mgbernardy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maureen Bernardy (b)(6)

From: staceylewis2020@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stacey Lewis (b)(6)

From: polly.rowcliffe@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Polly Rowcliffe (b)(6)

From: Lauriekiley17@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you allow these thoughts to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Laurie Kiley (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: smiley_face_johnson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Devra Johnson (b)(6)

From: abbycutright1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. As the mother of 2 daughters and 3 granddaughters, I am appalled that anyone would think it fair or scientifically valid for biological men to compete against biological women. I would think a man would be embarrassed to be declared the winner in such a clearly, unevenly matched contest. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Abby Cutright (b)(6)

From: Jdomsch30@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jill Domsch [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: janelmwallace@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janel Wallace (b)(6)

From: Garyrose@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rose Gerringer (b)(6)

From: rdmllovely@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 02:17:33 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marsha Lovely (b)(6)

From: mhampton71@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Hampton (b)(6)

From: jonnahigh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jonna High (b)(6)

From: lcollins08@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Edmond Collins (b)(6)

From: cru3rds@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Bob Cruthirds (b)(6)

From: jbwade06@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Judy Wade (b)(6)

From: caleb.faulkner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Caleb Faulkner (b)(6)

From: walkerbobo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sherree Walker (b)(6)

From: aherzog1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Andrea Herzog (b)(6)

From: claudecox@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Claude Cox (b)(6)

From: grfarms@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity! Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Greene (b)(6)

From: ottwrs1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Wayne Ott (b)(6)

From: Tpdoucette66@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anthony Doucette (b)(6)

From: tduncan23@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Thank you for holding public hearings to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please consider that Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education. Ideologies should not be forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you still proceed with this overreach please consider parental rights and they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics. Parents are the primary overseers of their children's education and as such their freedom of conscience should be considered and heard and represented at the local level. Gender identity should be discussed with children with their parents and not questioned regularly by teachers who change yearly. Title IX protections for girls' sports are critically important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Finally, children need protection from those perpetrators who would seek to sway the child's sexual identity for purposes of sexually abusing and taking advantage of them. I hope you consider these items as you review Title IX. Thank you! Cheryl Duncan

From: D_hollifield@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deborah Hollifield (b)(6)

From: jjjjseclaw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. The Department of Education should not be setting requirements regarding gender identity and sexual orientation in education. It is an abuse of power by the Biden administration to do so. Education is a state and local matter and the Feds need to not get involved. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents should be the primary determiners of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Girls should compete only with biological girls. We've made so much progress in my lifetime so that girls have a fair chance to compete, just like boys. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. This is only fair. Please consider common sense approaches in education. As a secondary teacher, I believe my thoughts are common sense responses. Ms. Julia Ubbenga

(b)(6)

From: shiva828@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Shivanand Bajantri Shikarkhane, (b)(6)

From: mrk6587@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Miriam Root (b)(6)

From: myyoung962003@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mindy Branning [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: rogerploeger2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Roger Ploeger (b)(6)

From: aaronrugh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Aaron Rugh (b)(6)

From: david@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Jackson (b)(6)

From: figfarm98@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Marilyn Newton (b)(6)

From: thurston22144@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Billy Utz (b)(6)

From: marthajhauck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Martha Hauck (b)(6)

From: Maxine_burton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. God made male and female and that is the way he wanted it and the way it should be! We have no authority to change that! It is totally unfair to let men conquer women's sports. For men to even consider play as a woman is totally insane! They cannot decide what gender they want to be. They were born male and they need to live with it. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Maxine Burton

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: wilsonkb333@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Stop Discrimination of Female Sports!!! I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Kathleen Wilson (b)(6)

From: rthaine7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ron Thaine (b)(6)

From: wgge@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. As a woman with seven brothers and growing up in the late 60's and early 70's, I have first hand knowledge and experience in how women couldn't participate in certain sports or had restrictions when allowed to participate. I support these thoughts and am hoping that you support them. Thank you! Jeri Ross

(b)(6)

From: ericunks@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Eric T. Unks (b)(6)

From: suebee247@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Sanders (b)(6)

From: meen34him@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). This country was founded on rights for all people written by the people. All of the presidential actions/executive orders have been a move toward dictatorship. We're tired of being told that we are ignorant or intolerant. A book that's even older than our constitution tells us to love all people. Loving people is very different than accepting a lifestyle. With all the acceptance and inclusion that we've been ordered to enact, we've given up our rights and our common sense of safety. We need to protect our next generation, our innocent children. We tell them that they have to accept lifestyle choices that are so confusing to them. We have to teach them about things that their little minds are too young to fathom. Now we tell them that they have to stand in a locker room or bathroom with someone that is genetically, by birth, different and be tolerant of that. Confusion is already there and now it's expanded by what the world is telling them to believe. Christian schools and colleges are being forced to allow these ideas as well. The constitution states that we have the freedom of religion. Yet, some governing leaders over-rule these rights by forcing an agenda. This is not right. I would hate to be held accountable to either instigating or remaining silent to these infringements. This brings me to the horrific actions of sex slavery. This is happening right under our noses, not only to adults, but to the children we're called to protect as well. If a regular citizen like me knows about the selling, buying, and trading of children, surely you know as well. It's probably happening in an office very close to yours. Don't stick your head in the sand when you see the codes of what preferences a person would like. That is beyond sick and wrong. Woe to the person who partakes in this atrocity against our unprotected ones. Why are we sacrificing our children to the wickedness? You need to act, If anything other than compassion, then out of the selfishness of your future safety. When you refuse to protect the children, the children grow to be the next generation who lives out the sins of our generation. The cycle continues and becomes a beast. Do you want the children, who you failed to protect, to be in charge of your old age? Do you think that they will have miraculously learned compassion and love somewhere? Pretty scary to think about that, isn't it? One person can make a difference. One person can start the ball rolling or change the trajectory of the movement. Please be that change! Thank you! Mrs. Lisa Meendering

(b)(6)

From: barbaraboschee@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Barbara Boschee (b)(6)

From: kimberly@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kimberly Hoy (b)(6)

From: hjlbal87@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jeff Lawson (b)(6)

From: anthony914@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anthony Ford (b)(6)

From: htvkhanh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Khanh Ha (b)(6)

From: pilgrim0028@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Don Stubblefield (b)(6)

From: rs4855@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bob Smith (b)(6)

From: kjd1944@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Keith Davidson (b)(6)

From: jjonesrine@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jacquelyn Rinehart (b)(6)

From: bbolt406@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beth Bolt (b)(6)

From: mhale47@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Matt Hale (b)(6)

From: partrijl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Partridge (b)(6)

From: tjdeboat@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Melanie Brandt (b)(6)

From: Tessa17_70812@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tessa Stone (b)(6)

From: Jfaulkner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration and anyone else who tries to make such rules. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level that we completely and wholeheartedly disagree with. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; most send their children to public school to learn and do not consent at all to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Many are now choosing to pull their kids out of the public education system because it has become such an environment of indoctrination rather than education. Doing these things without consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. This is not the purview of the education system. Reading, writing and arithmetic are. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity and emotional/psychological issues. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Jeff Faulkner (b)(6)

From: tupfamily9@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). PLEASE PROTECT OUR CHILDREN!!! There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Terri Frantz

(b)(6)

From: troiap01@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Provvidenza Troia (b)(6)

From: saholden8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stephen Holden (b)(6)

From: Sleagle51@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Megan Young (b)(6)

From: jfrider2005@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). At stake in this decision making are parental rights and local control of our school districts. Children belong first and foremost to their parents, not the state. Please do not undertake to make decisions that are not yours to make. We are at a crossroads in regards to the gains women have made in the athletic arena. To force them to compete against biologic makes is to erase those gains. Even the Olympic games only recognize horsemanship and shooting sports as level playing fields for both sexes. Biology isn't bigotry. It is my hope that you will give very serious consideration to these pivotal points as you consider the Title IX legislation. Thank you! Mrs. Diane Rider (b)(6)

From: pkey2010@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paula Key (b)(6)

From: Oceansofgrace7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Toni Jackson (b)(6)

From: blushartz48@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Susan Hartzell (b)(6)

From: stevewhittin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Steve Whittington (b)(6)

From: Janewtonmclean@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jo Ann McLean (b)(6)

From: squeeekz33@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Shawn Meeker (b)(6)

From: mprafter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Regarding the U.S. Department of Education's announcement of a public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX), I have some comments. Education is a state and local matter. The federal government has no right to intervene. Parental rights are of utmost importance. Parents should make the decisions regarding their children's education. They send their children to school to learn grammar, math and geography. Sexuality is not one of the subjects that is expected to be taught. Doing so without the consent of the parents is a violation of their rights. Children with questions about sexual identity should be told to go to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation based on their family beliefs. Title IX protections for girls' sports are very important and must be based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Thank you! Ms. Mary Rafter (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Delisenbee@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Lisenbee (b)(6)

From: luke.ru4u@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Luke Szklarz (b)(6)

From: abfh1005@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Pamela Stepp (b)(6)

From: kruzinkyle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kyle Mayfield (b)(6)

From: georgepalmiter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

George Palmiter (b)(6)

From: dave.tuck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. David Tuck (b)(6)

From: Mmlanz333@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maura Lanz (b)(6)

From: guyrbeauregard57@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Guy Beauregard (b)(6)

From: tkbpt711@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tina Kelly (b)(6)

From: buzzbonn871@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Otis Monceaux (b)(6)

From: brucenel9@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bruce Nelson (b)(6)

From: c.zielinsky@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Charise Zielinsky (b)(6)

From: 785kenw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ken Weger (b)(6)

From: ccc495457@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Carol Akright (b)(6)

From: pastorbobbyking@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Bobby King (b)(6)

From: kj2r@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to gain academic knowledge and skills and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is absolutely a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Kim Bartok

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: mom2ap@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amanda Pridmore (b)(6)

From: jettnm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nancy Jett (b)(6)

From: mariettafahl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marietta Fahl (b)(6)

From: denise.russell628@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Denise Russell (b)(6)

From: zade.shaw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Zade Shaw (b)(6)

From: divielt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Donny Ivie (b)(6)

From: tandvfinn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Virgie L Finn (b)(6)

From: V_Kapoor09@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Vishal Kapoor (b)(6)

From: jshy46@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Judy Shy (b)(6)

From: yeshua1920@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miriam Lopez (b)(6)

From: brocks89@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Louis Brock (b)(6)

From: charlyne@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Charlyne Steinkamp (b)(6)

From: rtpopp2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). A few important points for you to note are: - Education is a state and local matter. It's not the business of the federal government, as per the law. - Parents need to have the ultimate decision on what is taught, and they can best manage that through state and local school boards. For many parents, it is extremely important that what is taught their children is not in conflict with their religious beliefs, and these religious rights need to be respected. Topics like Queer Theory are at odds with the religious beliefs of many families. - Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. It is absolutely unfair for someone born a biological male to compete in women's sports. Please consider that these issues are priorities to families and should not be arbitrarily changed to reflect the current political beliefs of the party currently in power at the expense of the families and children involved. Thank you! Mr. Timothy R Popp (b)(6)

From: preacher407@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ruth Griffith (b)(6)

From: joshuaswan1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joshua Swan (b)(6)

From: laurietamez@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. You would effectively end all sports for women and girls by allowing men and boys to compete against them. Title IX was put in to place partly to enable women to participate in sports. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Margaret Tamez Sr. (b)(6)

From: burly2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there MUST be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education! They send their children to school to learn and do not consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Eugene B. Mechling, Jr. (b)(6)

From: mkrihar@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marianne Harrington (b)(6)

From: nussbarb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. When we're talking about CR, please understand that I feel stripped of my CR when you enforce what you coin nowadays as CR for special groups forced on EVERYONE. Just giving something a well sounding name doesn't make it in reality what it is NOT. Thank you! Barbara Nussbickel (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Dirkse8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Malinda Dirkse (b)(6)

From: hansenc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As an Illinois registered nurse, parent, and grandparent, protection of children, especially girls, what they learn in schools and how they participate in sports is important to me. I do not want my tax dollars used to teach progressive and left leaning beliefs concerning gender ideologies. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Catherine Hansen (b)(6)

From: jcfdal1952@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Fleming (b)(6)

From: tkmagill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Terry Magill (b)(6)

From: markandjeaniesteele@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jean Steele (b)(6)

From: aaronsmckinney@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Aaron McKinney (b)(6)

From: Marboogs63@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially I when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marleen Townsend (b)(6)

From: mary.j.parkhouse@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Parkhouse (b)(6)

From: dennisapplegarth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dennis Applegarth (b)(6)

From: pastorg60@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Garry Edwards (b)(6)

From: oordinator@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Oard (b)(6)

From: Ifurlong85@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Furlong (b)(6)

From: wingman.fritz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Chris Fritz (b)(6)

From: kschad04@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kristen Schad (b)(6)

From: PDKates05@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Philip Kates (b)(6)

From: southernteffeteller@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kristin Teffeteller (b)(6)

From: BethLReed@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beth Reed [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: reneetravels@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. D. Renee Storms (b)(6)

From: bift47@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Pauline Winters (b)(6)

From: jfchitwood@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jerry Chitwood (b)(6)

From: khadsall752@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kevin Hadsall (b)(6)

From: david@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Hays (b)(6)

From: hharbes@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Howard Harbes [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: dirkhmous@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. It's embarrassing that we should backtrack on women's rights at this time in our history! Thank you!

Dirk Mous (b)(6)

From: laellermann@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lee Ellermann (b)(6)

From: larrypotter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Larry Potter (b)(6)

From: grandmamary15@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Wright (b)(6)

From: PDKates05@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Philip Kates (b)(6)

From: rondaobryant@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ronda O'Bryant (b)(6)

From: psrhoda@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Paul Rhoda (b)(6)

From: rickbarnard777@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Rick Barnard (b)(6)

From: stitchtimeint@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tony Bonacci [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: bishop@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jayson Quinones (b)(6)

From: christianacheshire@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christiana Cheshire (b)(6)

From: Elliem9550@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joy Marcum (b)(6)

From: jawolfe1122@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Jim Wolfe (b)(6)

From: dgthompson212@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Darryl Thompson (b)(6)

From: aramirezdec@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Antonia Ramirez Colunga (b)(6)

From: jerisu@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As Grandparents of four Granddaughters and so far one Great-granddaughter my wife and I are totally against the ignoring of Title IX intent!!! We are quickly concluding through this and other issues such as CRT that the DOE has abandoned its founding concepts and no longer offers value to American citizens and taxpayers. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Jerry Layne

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: vsbarts@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Vickie Barts (b)(6)

From: jlarnold4868@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jerry Arnold (b)(6)

From: NancyLewis403@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. This is just common sense. Please make sure you provide this protect for girls and young women. It's the only really fair thing to do. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Nancy Lewis

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dennis.edwards@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dennis Edwards (b)(6)

From: cmferraro377@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carolyn Ferraro (b)(6)

From: bsiskinc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Billy Sisk (b)(6)

From: toarms1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daniel Childs (b)(6)

From: 1980royandkaren@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Roy Andrews (b)(6)

From: Kris@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kris Woodward (b)(6)

From: tbiondo1966@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Teachers are not to fill the roll of parent in these situations. Schools are to teach children, reading, writing and math, not about a controversial agenda. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I am very concerned about scholarships being taken away from biological female athletes, who have worked so hard for this achievement, by biological males who compete as females. It is not possible for there to be a level playing field in this situation. Title IX was created for biological women to compete against other biological women. Trying to have transgender women compete against biological women is taking away the original purpose of Title IX and is taking away women's rights. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Terese Biondo (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: glendawamsley58@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Glenda Wamsley (b)(6)

From: ssf123@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Stephanie Francois (b)(6)

From: donrettke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Donald Rettke (b)(6)

From: swvaconservative@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jonathan Chapman (b)(6)

From: cherylmartin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cheryl Marvin [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: jerryparker711@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Veronica Parker (b)(6)

From: kathy.kronk1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kathy Kronk (b)(6)

From: ron.hill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ron Hill (b)(6)

From: mchristian77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am contributing this letter regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) virtual public hearing for the purpose of gathering public input regarding Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). First, let's face the facts. Biological males have male DNA indelibly imprinted into every cell of their bodies, and how they choose to identify does not change that reality. Biological females have female DNA indelibly imprinted into every cell of their bodies, and how they choose to identify does not change that reality. Males in general are larger and stronger than their female counterparts. For the fairness of sports and for the safety of those involved, biological males should not be competing against biological females. Second, parents have the ultimate right and responsibility to teach and train their children in matters of gender identity and sexual orientation. It is not the jurisdiction or responsibility of governmental agencies to interfere with the local control of education. The politics of gender have no place in educational policy. Thank you! Mr. Michael Christian (b)(6)

From: calebpollitt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Caleb Pollitt (b)(6)

From: marynanashburn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nan Ashburn (b)(6)

From: lbrit54_1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX. Educators should realise we send our children to school to have a basic education. It is not your responsibility To teach our children about theirsexual choices, That is our right has parents. To allow transgender boys to participate in girls school sports is crazy. For educators to even consider this makes me question your education. Boys are created biologically different then girls. They have more muscles and strength so how can a girl ever win competing against them. If you allow this then sports will never be the same. Get back to teaching the ABC 's and leave the rest to the parents. Thank you for your time. Thank you! irene Hall

(b)(6)

From: Itbarr2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lajuan Barrett (b)(6)

From: adt66@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Anthony Ticknor (b)(6)

From: joecolannino@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education and it is unconscionable to force it on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; not the U.S. Government. We send our children to school to learn the 3 Rs, not Queer Theory. Doing so without parental consent is a violation of parental rights. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. As always, God is watching. Thank you! Dr. Joseph Colannino

(b)(6)

From: werner_lind@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Werner A Lind (b)(6)

From: dmconst1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mary Ann Medori (b)(6)

From: Ctbindert@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Claire Bindert (b)(6)

From: zimbo573@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Smith (b)(6)

From: ccatrunhi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Females need to compete fairly in competitive sports. Females do not need to compete against biological males for athletic scholarships. That is unfair!! All locker rooms / bathrooms are to be kept separate as biological males and females. Children are under their parents protection and guidance. We need to respect each individual family unit; and how each child is raised by their own parents. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Cathy Arcalas (b)(6)

From: bosshardt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeff Bosshardt (b)(6)

From: semoss217@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg: I'm writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal intrusion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there should be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents should have control of their children's education. They send their children to school to learn--to have controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without parental consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance, to allow parents to address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. In addition, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females should compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to participate in sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind, and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Susan E. Moss (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dalejudkins2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dale Judkins (b)(6)

From: cwmidwest41@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carolyn Wilkinson (b)(6)

From: rowenaja@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rowena Jackson (b)(6)

From: jeffrey.kanada@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jeffrey Kanada (b)(6)

From: hollyradio@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Holly Featherston (b)(6)

From: Reyhons1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Reyhons (b)(6)

From: thelynches8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael Lynch (b)(6)

From: robdanner43oldiron@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I fully agree with the above statements,& I pray For God To Guide You Thank you! Mr. Robert Leo Danner

(b)(6)

From: hoffmanu@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Uwe Hoffmann (b)(6)

From: areli8800@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carmen Zelaya (b)(6)

From: gpdcane@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Greg Duplessis (b)(6)

From: dsc731@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Roy Wagers (b)(6)

From: sosmjs77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mary Scharnweber (b)(6)

From: monty.muennink@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Monty Muennink (b)(6)

From: ryan.caffrey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ryan Caffrey (b)(6)

From: Valeria999v@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Leslie Williams (b)(6)

From: 4phipples@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ryan Phipps (b)(6)

From: debcoo7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Debra Cooke (b)(6)

From: servingmyfamilyinak@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Szklarz (b)(6)

From: gkarkema@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Glen Arkema [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: asbrotondo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Silvana Rotondo (b)(6)

From: raglew4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. LuAnn F Ragle (b)(6)

From: mom2ap@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amanda Pridmore (b)(6)

From: sandykoz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sandy Kozol (b)(6)

From: Tracybreisch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tracy Garrett (b)(6)

From: tptuck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Timothy Tucker (b)(6)

From: mebgstewart@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ginger Stewart Diebel (b)(6)

From: girl_2891@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rita Gabrielson (b)(6)

From: a.p.murphy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Annie Murphy (b)(6)

From: Dag2941@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Gibbs (b)(6)

From: robinson5099@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ron T Robinson (b)(6)

From: billking44012@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bill King (b)(6)

From: msteryous@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mike Steryous (b)(6)

From: meghan.connor@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). To begin with, a child is born a boy or a girl. That is science, reality, and the truth. Boys are different from girls, both physically and mentally. Both are equal in dignity, but they are interchangeable, and a child cannot choose his or her gender. Nor does the child have the mental capacity or maturity to even fully understand what trying to switch genders means - a child's brain isn't finished developing until well passed the age of 18. Politics and ideologies, especially of a sexual nature, must not be forced on students. Parents are the guardians and first educators of children, and they send their children to school to learn, not to be brainwashed with inappropriate sexual and political ideologies. Forcing this kind of "teaching" on children is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, privacy, and safety. Protecting the right of women and girls to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please do what is best for our children and honor the obvious fact that boys and girls are different. Respectfully, Meghan Arnett

From: cc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Benjamin Shafer (b)(6)

From: wardschraeder@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ward Charles Schraeder (b)(6)

From: ectumminello@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Tumminello (b)(6)

From: mbuel1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Buel (b)(6)

From: mrneyers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

melvin Neyers (b)(6)

From: jchlney@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jeffrey M Ney (b)(6)

From: hoemjosie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Josephine Hoem [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: ronnie.woolard@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Ronnie J Woolard (b)(6)

From: Moniquenelsen971@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Here are some very important considerations: 1. You should evaluate what legal ability you have. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power. 2. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. 3. Do not force ideologies on parents and students. 4. Parents are the ones who have the ultimate authority of their children's education. Children are sent to school to learn NOT to be indoctrinated about Queer Theory or whatever the chic topic of the moment is. Teaching immoral ideas like this without parental consent or even knowledge is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Monique Nelsen (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: f.r.williams1948@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Fred Williams (b)(6)

From: neilgl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Use your common sense. These "girls" will remember your actions. Thank you! Mrs. Margaret Gloudemans

(b)(6)

From: michele349@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Under what legal authority are you allowed to take any measures regarding changes to public education? Decisions regarding public education are to be handled at the state and local level. The federal government should not be intruding in a state and local matter. Parents are the rightful decision-makers when it comes to a child's education. Politics have no place in determining the best educational experiences for our children. Neither the government nor the school should usurp a parent's authority in a child's life in determining what values or moral principles that child should be taught. If a child is struggling with mental health challenges that child should be directed to go to his or her parent first for guidance. Schools can certainly offer families resources and tools; however, parents have all rights and authority to address the needs of their children in the manner they deem best. I do not support the Biden administration's attempt to dismantle the Title IX protections for our children's sports teams. Title IX is still vital to girl's and women's sports. Allowing biological males to compete as females completely obliterates female sports. The science is clear - males and females are DIFFERENT - they are different anatomically, physiologically, biologically, emotionally, chemically, and mentally. Boys and girls, men and women should continue competing separately. Abolishing Title IX protections increases risks of physical injury to female athletes and creates an un-level playing field for all athletes. Athletes should be required to compete in sports based on their biological sex. I expect you to keep these words and those of countless other parents in mind as you review Title IX and consider any new actions. Sincerely,
Ms. Michele Thrash

(b)(6)

From: pastorg60@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Garry Edwards (b)(6)

From: dbq039@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. It is important for us/you to protect children in our schools and the rights of parents concerning their children. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Reverend Jerry Blake

(b)(6)

From: fourthcookie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Thomas Cook (b)(6)

From: everett2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ronald Everett (b)(6)

From: Jeske.beth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beth Brensinger (b)(6)

From: zeromarc29@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

D Marcys (b)(6)

From: loisteach1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am a retired elementary teacher. I taught in the public schools in Conn. and New York for 35 and a half years. I am alarmed at what I see happening in the name of education. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Lois Pedersen (b)(6)

From: kids7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ernest Choquette (b)(6)

From: shoe50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding your announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations in your conduct of the Title IX regulations review. What legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue? Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. There ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately out of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Keep these thoughts and suggestions in mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Thomas Shumaker (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: sebastianmazzotta49@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sebastian Mazzotta (b)(6)

From: golofire@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Emmanuel Newborn (b)(6)

From: weldonjoseph@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Lanette Weldon (b)(6)

From: wmm7787@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:00:37 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

William Mueller (b)(6)

From: Jenhjones68@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Jones (b)(6)

From: melanboy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you today regarding very important considerations you need to be aware of as you review the Title IX regulations. Rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. The state is not the parent! Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you, Mrs. Melanie Boyer (b)(6)

From: phill4v@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Phillip Harris (b)(6)

From: pattmo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patti Morales (b)(6)

From: arebholz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Angela Rebholz (b)(6)

From: sandrabottorff@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandra Bottorff (b)(6)

From: brian@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Brian Hupp (b)(6)

From: guygibbs77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dempsey Gibbs (b)(6)

From: karolea@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Karole Lynn Aldridge (b)(6)

From: vlorona@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Victoria Lorona (b)(6)

From: drcastle49@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Don Castle (b)(6)

From: kschroeder1956@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kenneth Schroeder (b)(6)

From: dondekon@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Joel R DeKoning (b)(6)

From: marycurrytutor@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Curry (b)(6)

From: maggie_dory@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. On a personal note I am one of the millions of young women who have been sexually molested. The idea of biological males in dressing rooms in ladies bathrooms as an adolescent would have made an environment of horrors for me. Please consider the what one in ten young women who have been raped or the one in four who have been sexually molested will have to attempt to tolerate. It is a horrible thing. If there must be some accommodation for the gay community that only offer single bathrooms for both the women and men. Thank you! Sue Carney (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: fredandshirley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Please allow common sense to dictate your decisions concerning this matter. Please protect our children from dangerous, confusing and unfair situations and risks and keep the Title IX protections in place. Thank you! Shirley Gardner (b)(6)

From: Batmann82@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Chris Aycock (b)(6)

From: joron06@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ron Steltenpohl (b)(6)

From: kilby5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Charles Kilby (b)(6)

From: nana609@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gene Kravitz (b)(6)

From: margkelly@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Margaret Kelly (b)(6)

From: pearcemk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kenneth Pearce (b)(6)

From: tdgentry34@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Thomas A Gentry (b)(6)

From: eliza105@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Maryann Dickman (b)(6)

From: strachm7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mark Strachan (b)(6)

From: david@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Roth (b)(6)

From: jayjohnston@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. John G Johnston (b)(6)

From: tylercampbell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Campbell (b)(6)

From: peter.schafer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Peter Schafer (b)(6)

From: cbrown5352@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Carol Brown (b)(6)

From: geraldmorrisettenew@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gerald Morrisette (b)(6)

From: dcros1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Duane Crosland (b)(6)

From: suzannehaines@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Suzanne Haines (b)(6)

From: moran.gaye@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gaye Moran (b)(6)

From: J49lpa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Luella Abernethy (b)(6)

From: robinson5099@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ron T Robinson (b)(6)

From: kim.custer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kim Custer (b)(6)

From: Kathyjsears@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathy Sears (b)(6)

From: gvhemпельman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Gloria Hempelman (b)(6)

From: btubbs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barry Tubbs (b)(6)

From: toyotaang@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Angela Hill (b)(6)

From: ginfanger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gerard Infanger (b)(6)

From: joestayton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joe Walters (b)(6)

From: beckyreid53@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. W. Reid (b)(6)

From: rkhargrave@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rose Hargrave (b)(6)

From: gemarvel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gregg Marvel (b)(6)

From: lh222221@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Laura McCluskey (b)(6)

From: kellzey768@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathy Ellzey (b)(6)

From: guyray53@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Ray (b)(6)

From: billyandchris@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Billy Howard (b)(6)

From: tbradley777@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tom Bradley (b)(6)

From: artie-dawn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Arthur Derstein (b)(6)

From: pcmmriley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pamela Riley (b)(6)

From: Jillg68@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I have great empathy for any person struggling with gender dysphoria. But, I do not agree with biological males participating in girls sports. Biological males have an inherent physical advantage over biological females & it's unfair for them to be allowed to compete with them. It flies in the face of what Title IX was designed to accomplish. Perhaps school districts can explore the feasibility of developing a transgender sports program to accommodate these students. Thank you! Ms. J. Garner (b)(6)

From: gbuford111@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Greg Buford (b)(6)

From: licorice2020@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Brian Quillia (b)(6)

From: StepOut@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cindy Cervantez (b)(6)

From: barbarahauser61@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Barbara Hauser (b)(6)

From: wwkas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there must be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

William Kacapyr (b)(6)

From: mcdanielp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kay McDaniel (b)(6)

From: allabouthim4life@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gerry Pierce (b)(6)

From: jmcjoint@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jane Mccullough (b)(6)

From: lisa.starmer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lisa Starmer (b)(6)

From: Lholder3t@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I was a public school teacher in MO for 50 years and why would you complicate a young child/middle schooler/ teens life with confusing far left ideology that does NOT solve ANY problems but instead CREATES MANY problems for students, parents, schools, communities and individuals especially transgender, or LGBTQ people. Trying to force ALL of us to EMBRACE a lifestyle that goes against NATURE and Judeo Christian principles is wrong. People who choose these alternative lifestyles are many times suicidal, unhappy, depressed, and regretful. Please respect children's rights, parent's rights and do not force or discriminate against heterosexual, male/female time honored traditions, that foster our future human race. Men have no place in women's sports, a male is a male in every cell of his body!! As is a female!! Biology does not lie!! Embrace true science not thoughts in a persons head!! Because you "think" something DOES NOT make it SO!! As a 72 year old, could I start "thinking" that I am 6 and "FORCE" people to accept what I "THINK I am??? Where is COMMON SENSE??? I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lynda Holder (b)(6)

From: hawkman1792@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Cramer (b)(6)

From: jim_herron60@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jim Herron (b)(6)

From: carolmoorman1948@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carolynn Moorman (b)(6)

From: Deannablair60@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Deanna Blair (b)(6)

From: kpbarker1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kenneth Barker (b)(6)

From: redhead9094@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cindy Mendenhall (b)(6)

From: groves01@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sherri Groves (b)(6)

From: sohorse53@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sharon Oestman (b)(6)

From: n.ilardo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Nicole Ilardo (b)(6)

From: edurkee53@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Eric Durkee [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Shannon.cris@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Shannon Kollmeyer (b)(6)

From: hurstob@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Paul Hurst (b)(6)

From: arndt.diane@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diane Arndt (b)(6)

From: stantonya79@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stan Stout (b)(6)

From: shirleycearley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Shirley Cearley (b)(6)

From: mansfieldgrams2000@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Shirley Mansfield (b)(6)

From: j.mark.brooks@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jonathan Brooks (b)(6)

From: elena.b.arevalo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Please protect our children, specially girls and stop politicizing everything. Thank you! Elena Arevalo

(b)(6)

From: jglaum3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janelle Glaum (b)(6)

From: ksberthelot@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kenny Berthelot (b)(6)

From: ajsinicropi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Angelo Sinicropi (b)(6)

From: tedxpl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ted Lindbeck (b)(6)

From: nikkisweat97@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nikki Sweat (b)(6)

From: stanleysmolinski@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Smolinski (b)(6)

From: donnajcline@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Donna Cline (b)(6)

From: noblesignature@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Linda Noble

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: dmj.4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dawn Jarvie (b)(6)

From: brightsmile1953@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Ann Robinson (b)(6)

From: malmauney@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Malvin Mauney (b)(6)

From: leonherriman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Having biological males competing on the same team as girls gives them (not the girls an unfair advantage. Also, because they are stronger, the girls are much more likely to be injured. Would you really want your daughter or granddaughter, etc, on such a team. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Leon Herriman (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: nana609@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandra Kravitz (b)(6)

From: allengwilt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Allen Gwilt (b)(6)

From: golfish2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Wesley Wilcox (b)(6)

From: amcourtot@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Armand Courtot (b)(6)

From: jrballar@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jo Ann Ballard (b)(6)

From: tboudreaux@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Theophilus Boudreaux (b)(6)

From: mark527@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mark Trunkwalter (b)(6)

From: ma.cordoves@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Martin Cordoves (b)(6)

From: bickbill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Men or Boys do not have any rights in the girls washrooms or showers. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! William Bickford

(b)(6)

From: mdial@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Dial (b)(6)

From: drjune@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I have 5 major concerns with the proposed changes to Title IX: 1) Privacy and Post-traumatic Stress syndrome, 2) potential injury to females (XX chromosomes) competing in contact sports with male (XY chromosomes), 3) fairness to XX chromosome athletes, 4) constitutionality, 5) the rights of parents to instruct their children according to their beliefs. I bring my experience as a female (XX) and my experience and expertise as a physician (Board certified pediatrician) to this discussion as well as years of caring for sexually abused children and serving on the local Board that reviews cases of child abuse. Like 25% of the women in this country, I have been sexually assaulted. And I suffered from post-traumatic stress syndrome (PTSS) for 6 months thereafter. Although it occurred over 30 years ago, being faced with a person with XY chromosomes in a bathroom or changing room, especially if that person was undressed, would bring about a recurrence of the PTSS. While this may not be true for every person who has been sexually assaulted, we are talking about a huge percentage of the population who are at risk. The Supreme Court has based rulings on the right to privacy (Ninth Amendment I presume), and being exposed to someone of the other biological sex while in a state of undress is a terrible abrogation of that right to privacy. There is also a risk to the safety of these XX girls through sexual assault, committed not particularly from those who identify with their non-biological sex (transgender), but more from miscreants who could use a false claim to transgenderism to gain access to vulnerable girls. I believe such incidents have occurred in fitting rooms in Target stores. Nor should XX and XY minors share sleeping rooms. Second, even at Birth those with XY chromosomes are larger and taller than those with XX chromosomes on the average, and this continues throughout life. They have increased muscle mass, stronger bones, and the angles of the joints of the pelvis and extremities allows for greater force to be applied. Those with XX chromosomes are more prone to ACL tears (knee ligaments) with equal training. This poses an increased injury risk to XX individuals in contact sports. Likewise, every cell in the body has either XX or XY chromosomes and hormones involved in gender identity transition do not change this basic fact. Those with XY have larger hearts and lungs, increased cardiac output, higher oxygen carrying capacity, pelvic anatomy and muscle fiber types more conducive to speed giving those with xy chromosomes an inherent advantage in most sports. Hundreds of high school XY individuals have beaten the best time of XX Olympic female record holders. To allow those with XY chromosomes to compete against those with XX chromosomes deprives biological girls and women of the opportunity to win championships, college scholarships, etc. What is a fair answer for XY individuals taking estrogen for gender transition? I can see that they would be at a disadvantage compared to non-medicated XY males, though competing on male teams is one answer. Transgender teams may be another, though especially in rural areas the lack of sufficient transgender athletes might be a hindrance. I do not know of an answer that is fair to everyone, but the least fair to the most people would be to eliminate female (XX only) sports teams. Control over education, bathrooms, intrastate sports teams or locker rooms are not among the powers given to Congress in Article I Section 8 of the US Constitution, and Amendment X reserves all powers not given by the Constitution to the Federal government to the States and the people. That raises questions regarding the constitutionality of the proposed actions. Likewise, the Congress is not given power of how parents raise their children and questions about gender identity fall both under the freedom of religion (Amendment I) and parental rights (Amendment IX) reserves all rights not specified to the people). No, I did not address the rare conditions such as Klinefelter (XXY) or Turner (XO) syndrome. The Y chromosome is determinate of sex, so anyone with a Y is male and without a Y is female biologically. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Patricia Lee June, M.D. (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: spencer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Spencer Ball (b)(6)

From: w.feath@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William M Feath [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: bruceroselle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As a former junior high school counselor, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Dr. Bruce Roselle (b)(6)

From: Debblume2001@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ronald Blume (b)(6)

From: lwarrenc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Linda Chapman (b)(6)

From: arpriano@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Andrew Priano (b)(6)

From: monty.muennink@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Monty Muennink (b)(6)

From: dana.monaghan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Dana Monaghan (b)(6)

From: Grammybetbet@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Steinbacher (b)(6)

From: cokecl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patty Harold (b)(6)

From: Mehohulin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mark Hohulin (b)(6)

From: bkdeweerd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kerri DeWeerd (b)(6)

From: iampaulkrause@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paul Krause (b)(6)

From: ayelverton@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Angie Yelverton (b)(6)

From: sbv.jlm.kzoo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Julie Lynn Moffitt (b)(6)

From: bfurbush35@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wilbur Furbush (b)(6)

From: tiateresita59@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Teresa Goerg (b)(6)

From: degolier@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert DeGolier (b)(6)

From: nkludlow@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Nathan Ludlow (b)(6)

From: annfadden@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. If you choose to ignore the pleas of parents who are actually raising kids we will create even more division in the family unit, leading to even more chaos in the homes of children and ultimately school. Also, making teachers teach something against their personal beliefs seems to disrespect their right to freedom and independence of thought...something this country was founded on. Lastly, allowing transgender children to compete against biologically opposite genders OR compete with the same biological sex but dosed with steroids/male hormones thus chemically enhancing their skill will ultimately obliterate many if not all of the goals of title IX. Biologically Female sports may essentially cease to exist. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ann Fadden (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: jewellacres@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Yvonne Henderson (b)(6)

From: jskeller36@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Keller (b)(6)

From: davidbling@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Ling (b)(6)

From: nanafairfield@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Martha Fairfield (b)(6)

From: olenickv@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please respect parental rights and protect schoolchildren, particularly young girls! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Vicki Olenick (b)(6)

From: sed4beth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

B Dellinger (b)(6)

From: allen4prayer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration! Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Allen Meigide (b)(6)

From: kusterart@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Kuster (b)(6)

From: scottie.baer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As a public high school school biology teacher, a parent, and a citizen, I have some grave concerns about the direction our current administration is leaning regarding women's sports and the protection of girls in public schools and other public settings, such as restrooms and locker rooms. Mr. Goldberg, are you aware of the pandemic of sexual abuse, date rape, and other crimes against women in this nation? Do you have any daughters? How would you feel about a biological male changing clothes in your daughter's school locker room, seeing all the girls undressing? Even a confused male who thinks he is female still has testosterone surging through his body. How can we claim to support or protect or promote females athletes when they will not even have privacy to shower and change their clothing before and after sports events? How can we claim to value women's sports, which have made immense progress over the decades, when we are now allowing biological males to defeat them in any number of athletic events? How is this remotely fair to our girls and young women? As you consider these new rulings, please remember the REAL names and faces of female athletes in our schools, students like your daughters or nieces, or your future daughter-in-law. When you were a teenage boy, would you have trusted yourself in a locker room full of undressed teenage girls? Would you want your daughter to lose to a confused male athlete when she has worked so long and so hard to succeed in sports? Think about it. Thank you! Mrs. Karen Baer (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: buckman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, The U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announced a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women's and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you, Mr. Brad Buckman (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: donnafromms@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Donna Brumfield (b)(6)

From: mthelm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Helm [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: swenstrand@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sheryl Wenstrand [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: charles.stock@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is constitutionally a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when questionable ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Dr. Charles Stock

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: sa6630743@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sandra K Anderson (b)(6)

From: Debblume2001@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Deborah Blume (b)(6)

From: gg.wade@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeannie Wade (b)(6)

From: shirlkc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Public schools are not open for experimentation or indoctrination beyond reading, writing and arithmetic. Public schools are for education. PERIOD. I was informed the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announced a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please be aware of very important considerations as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there MUST BE extensive consideration to parental rights. As parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education, they assume their children are in school to be educated and do not consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Or an additional level of competition may commence: TransSports event for TransGenders. American citizens are aware of changes that have occurred in public education and now require bureaucrats to listen to the citizens as you review Title IX. Thank you! Shirley Kufeldt (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: jfkiehl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Fred Kiehl

(b)(6)

From: kdibkey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kirt Dibkey (b)(6)

From: kmbergman2005@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Bergman (b)(6)

From: ways2hope@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Hope Peter (b)(6)

From: treericjames@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Women have fought for DECADES to have a fair and level playing field in athletics. Forcing women to compete against biological males will destroy everything women have fought so hard to achieve. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Eric James (b)(6)

From: granniesqb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sharon Bowman (b)(6)

From: bfandnj2016@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Nell Hull (b)(6)

From: rejoising@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you MUST be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. As a tax payer I am asking you to evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. I believe 'common sense' has been overtaken by insanity. If you are a parent and you have a child, especially a female, just put yourself in. my place and THINK. We need thoughtful, wise people to make common sense decisions and I hope that would be YOU. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent IS a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you weigh these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of you mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Joyce Velehradsky

(b)(6)

From: fotpexedirector@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tom Pafford (b)(6)

From: heathergdee@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Heather Dee [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Camcam2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Please do not allow our young people to be pawns in power-moves by special interests. Thank you! Cheryl Ivers

(b)(6)

From: wdjscarsdale@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Walter Terrell (b)(6)

From: Kevin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. There a lot of us parents and grandparents who strongly object to the federal government's intrusion and indoctrination. Thank you! Mr. Kevin E O'Brien

(b)(6)

From: sjaschle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Steven Aschleman (b)(6)

From: crawford@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Linda E Crawford (b)(6)

From: intheleupp@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I, too, am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Archer Leupp (b)(6)

From: southernladytam@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tammy P Marsh (b)(6)

From: ayersc63@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cheryl Ayers (b)(6)

From: gordon139@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Gordon Chambers (b)(6)

From: rwmeyerjr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Meyer (b)(6)

From: rassilon6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Minic (b)(6)

From: drtentltd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Donald Thomas (b)(6)

From: Ccolematson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cathy Cole (b)(6)

From: D@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dulce Fuller (b)(6)

From: darazon@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Roger E. Davis Jr. (b)(6)

From: katrin.kuriger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Katrin Kuriger (b)(6)

From: tsmithfamily@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Margaret Smith (b)(6)

From: janellejoh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janelle Johnson (b)(6)

From: ceeski@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elizabeth Kijowski (b)(6)

From: srm5boys@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Shelley Myers (b)(6)

From: cspenniman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Craig Penniman (b)(6)

From: afootballchick@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Carmelo Diaz (b)(6)

From: rkulik4320@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Robert Kulik (b)(6)

From: rjuvenal@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Roland Juvenal (b)(6)

From: josephsutschek@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joseph Sutschek (b)(6)

From: vablessings@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Virginia Adams (b)(6)

From: stitches1957@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James E Stadther [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: dcdill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when perverted ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Dr. Dallas Dill (b)(6)

From: kathywier@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kathy Wier [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: eightewes@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paula Udinski (b)(6)

From: afootballchick@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:49:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rachel Diaz (b)(6)

From: bvwerner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Give the girls a fair chance, give the males that are bewildered about their gender their own competition platform to compete in. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. William Werner (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: raknigge@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Deb Landolt [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: sigifred@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Sigifredo Bustos (b)(6)

From: dfowler3545@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dennis Fowler (b)(6)

From: hdfyam@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dean Ascoli (b)(6)

From: kriscev@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kristine Cevasco (b)(6)

From: pamelazuzi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ann Harris (b)(6) アーリントン バージニア州
アメリカ合衆国

From: hebrewgirl80@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Leah Stanek (b)(6)

From: Davewpatriot@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. The federal government has no business forcing their ideological biased social agenda on schools, especially vulnerable and impressionable young women and young men. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dave Wilson (b)(6)

From: tinabrogi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Tina Brogi (b)(6)

From: tjolson56@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Thomas Olson (b)(6)

From: mbcrawley55@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miriam Crawley (b)(6)

From: pastorrobin.sfm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robin Sipe (b)(6)

From: stormygs1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Georgann Koenig (b)(6)

From: dtjdcttoc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Don Callicott (b)(6)

From: tmjohnson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Johnson None

From: eavandekerkhove@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Elizabeth Van De Kerkhove (b)(6)

From: steviewibb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Dr. Stephen Wibberley (b)(6)

From: pickwags@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. If you proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. My daughter was a cross country runner and she would have been devastated if she had to compete against biological males, which would have put her at a very great disadvantage. Besides that, her father and I would have been beyond alarmed for her to have biological males in the locker room with her. This would not be appropriate in any way. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Judy Wagner (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: arthurschu@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Arthur Schultz Jr. (b)(6)

From: tbayley777@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Thomas Bayley (b)(6)

From: suzannerahn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule-making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. It is totally unconscionable to allow biological males to compete against biological females, no matter what their sexual identity is. It is a huge step backwards for women's rights, it is unfair in competition, and without any benefit, except perhaps for the physically stronger biological males who would have overwhelming unfair advantage over biological females. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Suzanne Rahn (b)(6)

From: priscillaflory@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Priscilla Flory (b)(6)

From: rkoonass@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Children with questions about their identity or that are transgender should have their own separate sport teams rather than being forced upon girl's teams. I think, after a short time they will no longer have a desire to compete, because they may actually have to compete fairly. Thank you! Roland Kershaw (b)(6)

From: jcordova@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Cordova (b)(6)

From: robertwheat8778@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Wheat (b)(6)

From: mccnumber2son@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Don't discriminate & devalue the millions of female athletes that have sacrificed so much to be their best just to have it erased by a male masquerading as a female....a biologic impossibility Thank you! Michael McCartney (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: mariswhetstone@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maris Whetstone (b)(6)

From: adoration314@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Catherine North-Erickson (b)(6)

From: dulcimergal98@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. WHY are you attacking women? Thank you! Mrs. Maureen Barnes

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: lbahney@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Lyndal Bahney (b)(6)

From: jat0tat@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Thomas (b)(6)

From: don-olson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Don Olson [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Barb.deatherage@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Deatherage (b)(6)

From: charlotte.earnest@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Charlotte Earnest (b)(6)

From: cpereira30@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Chris Pereira (b)(6)

From: cclark@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cheri Clark (b)(6)

From: kbixthus@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Karen Braun (b)(6)

From: raj99@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. I can anticipate these actions would trigger numerous costly and unnecessary lawsuits. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Would you be comfortable with your talented daughter/granddaughter losing in a competition which she trained so hard for, to a biological male, and consequently negating a potential scholarship? I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Robert Bowers (b)(6)

From: lgann4483@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lore Gann (b)(6)

From: kennethligon7591@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kenny Ligon (b)(6)

From: momgrandmalishall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Elisabeth Hall (b)(6)

From: corn101633@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As two life-long public school educators, we are writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First and foremost, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Secondly, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, NOT GENDER IDENTITY. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. We hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. & Mrs Robert Cornell

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: grzbch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Bill Grenzenbach (b)(6)

From: lmchurch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Lila Hagberg Hagberg (b)(6)

From: mac300c@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Carlton L McAlister-- (b)(6)

From: fredmiller2651@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Fred Miller (b)(6)

From: keepshining@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Thornton (b)(6)

From: donaldumperovitch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Donald Umperovitch (b)(6)

From: tdumdei@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As an educator, there are some very important considerations I feel you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Tonya Dumdei

(b)(6)

From: gary.a.currall@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Title IX regulations support female sports. The average female adult has less muscle mass, less bone mass, less lung capacity and smaller hearts than adult males. Taking female hormones does not change these biological differences in a male. Testosterone increases muscle memory which improves male performance in sports. Just look at all the world records where female athletes have performance less than males. Female athletes should not be required to compete against males. Title IX support of female sports must be continued and supported. Also, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the federal government . Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Gary Currall (b)(6)

From: Vanderwal6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Carol VanderWal (b)(6)

From: dyoung5700@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dennis Young (b)(6)

From: gibbsc4ahava@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carolyn Gibbs (b)(6)

From: henrickson_a2j@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jennifer Henrickson (b)(6)

From: ruthr99@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Ruth Annable (b)(6)

From: jahmlb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please consider the following as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, education is primarily a state responsibility. The department of education should evaluate what legal ability it has to undertake any measures ultimately decided upon to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Michele Hammond

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: deannah@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. DeAnn Hilmoe (b)(6)

From: egoodgame@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ed Goodgame (b)(6)

From: mpcorvo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Corriveau (b)(6)

From: denchapman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dennis Chapman (b)(6)

From: divinepotential1934@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Marilyn Marks (b)(6)

From: cpf489@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ed Seidel (b)(6)

From: Martin35148@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marie Martin (b)(6)

From: ewgrabau@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulation. Any rule making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Edwin Grabau (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: luvenabirdwell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Luvena Birdwell (b)(6)

From: beth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beth O'Brien (b)(6)

From: pckidder@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Consuela Kidder (b)(6)

From: alex.redding@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alexander Redding (b)(6)

From: jakethesnake757@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jacob Parker (b)(6)

From: trackersi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jean Beer (b)(6)

From: larrybarr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Sincerely,
Mr. Larry Barr (b)(6)

From: Ldogrobinson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lisa Robinson (b)(6)

From: kbabb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Kevin Babb (b)(6)

From: gracemlucas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Grace Lucas (b)(6)

From: jhart0240@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. John Hart (b)(6)

From: wellward09@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Ellen L Ward (b)(6)

From: bamagirl412@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Elizabeth Bailey (b)(6)

From: dlh.melson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dwight Melson (b)(6)

From: lj.crane@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex at time of birth, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Jeanette Crane

(b)(6)

From: histime@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. 1: Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. 2: Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. 3: Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on the biological reality of sex, not the socially constructed concept of gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Noval A Smith Jr.

(b)(6)

From: johnnyanddawn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Johnny Shelton (b)(6)

From: gracynwr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation amongst themselves, with their child, and/or with the help of a guidance counselor, pastor and those who themselves experienced similar feelings- and to learn outcomes, positive and/or negative. Separately, Title IX protections for girls' sports are critically important in honoring fair competition, and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females should compete separately due to differences in physical strength, the right to fair play, and the risk from physical injury, privacy, or harm- both on and off the field, or in the locker room. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Respectfully submitted- Gracyn Robinson

From: Treefarmer581@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bobby Johnson (b)(6)

From: delocke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Locke (b)(6)

From: mrgnellie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). We respectfully ask you to remember that there are obvious differences between males and females. This definitely puts females at a disadvantage when competing with transgenders. The other distinct disadvantage is that male trans competitors can change their "gender" without blinking an eye. It appears to me that males who identify this way in order to compete against females are actually taking advantage of their competition. Evidently they are cowards who are afraid to compete against their own gender!! It will eventually prevent any woman from winning in a sport in which a trans man can compete! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Eloise Gudeman

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: fmtanner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Floyd Tanner [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: cangelawright@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Angela Wright (b)(6)

From: dianaj.clothier@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diana J Clothier (b)(6)

From: llbloodw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Laura Harrison (b)(6)

From: abesmail@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Randy Abramson (b)(6)

From: aaron.j.quandt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Aaron Quandt [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Aquinasnk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Neil Kane (b)(6)

From: 67spiritbear67@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bear Freese (b)(6)

From: Susiedohl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Ohl [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: pastorjason@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Jason Lamer (b)(6)

From: lesliecalianno@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Or, possibly starting their own teams, where they can compete freely. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Leslie Calianno (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: robbunger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Bunger (b)(6)

From: burginbunch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Wanda Burgin (b)(6)

From: rthstphn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Stephen Roth (b)(6)

From: Liberatore.b@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bernard Liberatore (b)(6)

From: maryhpaley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Paley (b)(6)

From: luannehamilton53@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Luanne Hamilton (b)(6)

From: cjhouser@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Janet Houser (b)(6)

From: freemanelf@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Elaine Freeman (b)(6)

From: jennifercantrell91@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jennifer Cantrell (b)(6)

From: hoopsnest@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda N Hooper (b)(6)

From: bradholten@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Brad Holten (b)(6)

From: musick.linda.l@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Linda Musick (b)(6)

From: brhaynes2016@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Haynes (b)(6)

From: aaronrhoads15@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Aaron Rhoads (b)(6)

From: ms310954@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael Skelton (b)(6)

From: judychaney593@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Judy Chaney (b)(6)

From: Maury.jordan63@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maury Jordan (b)(6)

From: N2ishun75501@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ray Williams (b)(6)

From: apetpalplus@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Connie Starcher (b)(6)

From: charolettegrant@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Charolette Grant (b)(6)

From: lathurs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, It is with great concern that I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics and agendas have no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Children are very malleable and easily indoctrinated to believe something that is not true. Children do NOT need constant indoctrination through the lens of sex. I was quite a Tomboy growing up and could outrun most of the boys, but I never considered myself a boy. In today's climate, I could have had a double mastectomy and been given testosterone to "become" what I was not biologically, meant to be. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Jean Thurston

(b)(6)

From: Rollandstarr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rolland Starr [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: marvljr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marvin Lovellette Jr. (b)(6)

From: wlaursen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wallace Laursen (b)(6)

From: wdpb41@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wendell Boler (b)(6)

From: holly@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Holly Tierney (b)(6)

From: Zetziii@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William Zetzmann (b)(6)

From: johnconnell42@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Connell (b)(6)

From: lifev@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Daniel Knight (b)(6)

From: whitneyveneziani@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Whitney Veneziani (b)(6)

From: cgriswold@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please don't take parental rights away from families! I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Coleen GRISWOLD (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: ceeying@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lana Mahek (b)(6)

From: rufleet1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ruby Fleet (b)(6)

From: Dahlhaus14@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daniel Dahl [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Rayrini@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ray Rini (b)(6)

From: mandy42009@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mandy Davis (b)(6)

From: pmschorr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Schorr (b)(6)

From: Wwjdj@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jerry Chua (b)(6)

From: bittyblue@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Lindley (b)(6)

From: lawtinman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Larry and Va Weigum Sr. (b)(6)

From: bgschlagel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. George Schlagel (b)(6)

From: bthschmidt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beth O'Brien-Schmidt (b)(6)

From: Tamaslama2002@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jerry LaFerney (b)(6)

From: travisadkison@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Travis Adkison (b)(6)

From: Rollandstarr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rolland Starr (b)(6)

From: deniann62@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Denise Robertson (b)(6)

From: pavgk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Korkowski (b)(6)

From: Chh1day@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carletta H Hensley (b)(6)

From: crsellke339@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Richard Sellke (b)(6)

From: spkrupp1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Samantha Krupp (b)(6)

From: cherbobathome@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cheryl Steuerwald (b)(6)

From: pierpoint4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Peggy Pierpoint (b)(6)

From: jim85706@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jim Kunzman (b)(6)

From: karenjhaines@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Haines (b)(6)

From: bdwhipple@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Whipple (b)(6)

From: slick.cooper@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stephen Cooper (b)(6)

From: mdjames@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Darlene James (b)(6)

From: lmacsr00@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Larry McDonald Sr. (b)(6)

From: buffalocalfmother@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathleen Baker (b)(6)

From: gspoolstra@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Here are some very important considerations to be aware of as you conduct your review. First, please evaluate your legal standing to undertake any measures you ultimately pursue. Any rulemaking by the DOE on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced upon parents and students from the federal level. Should you proceed, give extensive consideration given to parental rights. Unlike socialist countries, parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not consent to perverse topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation according to their beliefs. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on biological sex, not gender "fluidity". Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and basic privacy. Protecting girls' rights to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please allow these thoughts to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Glen Spoolstra (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: ladywarrior_us@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Terri Willburn (b)(6)

From: ecooney71@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Eric Cooney (b)(6)

From: baldwindiane@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diane Baldwin (b)(6)

From: barryaroth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I wish to make a simple but urgent request. The basic fabric of humanity (I.e.- the recognition and celebration of the two distinctive genders) continues to deteriorate at alarming speed, too often at the whims of persons with little regard to the health of our nation, and by the abuse of power entrusted to them. The fact that this appeal even needs to be written is a tragedy-have we really come this far? Although I did not personally pen the following, I have read and concur with the statements made, and lend my voice to the appeal... I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Barry Roth

(b)(6)

From: kpropeck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. My wife is a teacher in a public school and we have grandchildren attending public schools and we believe in education for all children but not indoctrination and unsafe learning environments. How can we continue to ignore the needs of these children instead of making them pawns in the political arena. Let's continue to educate our children with strong math, reading, science and geography skills and leave the politics out of our schools. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Ronald Propeck

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: mrs34@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. What legal ability do you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rule-making by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power . Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not consent to controversial topics being taught to their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Title IX protections for girls' sports are important Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Rosemary Wolthuis

(b)(6)

From: mdearmas@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Myra De Armas (b)(6)

From: Jrriehl@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. JR Riehk (b)(6)

From: anngalen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ann Thompson (b)(6)

From: mikepaisley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mike Paisley (b)(6)

From: joycegcaldwell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Joyce Caldwell (b)(6)

From: sefried@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barbara Sefried (b)(6)

From: acmarten@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Charlene Martens (b)(6)

From: dmcvancouver@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Steve Ryder (b)(6)

From: shsims77@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Shirley Sims [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Horsefam@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Stephen Blehm (b)(6)

From: Borzino@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bruce and Jong Borzino (b)(6)

From: gwdoane@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. George Doane (b)(6)

From: bruceandsuemay@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan May (b)(6)

From: jjwd3rd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I understand that the Biden administration is planning to set in place rulings that will take away the Title IX protections for woman and girl sports. Also it seems that the administration is wanting to increase the effect of the LGBT agenda in the schools of America. It is like every day average Americans no longer matter. It doesn't matter if a young girl that still believes that God is real and that His word is a guide book for life. That is ignorance in the eyes of this administration. She has to broaden her scan and see the world through the eyes of the new world order. She should be glad to share the locker room with a boy and even though she has been raised to care about modesty, she should bury those feelings and gladly undress in front of him or I guess I should say her. The new enlightend thought that realizes that the two gender world of the past was all a lie has freed us to accept that even though a boy looks like boy and talks like a boy , if he thinks he's a she then by gosh he is a she! You know there was a time not too long ago that a parent that steered a child in this direction would have been accused of child abuse but not now. That parent is thought to be loving and kind because they are in tune with the child's inner self. I guarantee you that there will be hell to pay for this kind of nonsense on the part of parents and on the part of government leaders such as your self that allow such an atrocity against an innocent child. Thank you! Mr. James J Whitefield

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: sdavis1052@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sheri Davis (b)(6)

From: foreveriris49@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Boys are born boys and girls are born girls. It doesn't matter what they call themselves. Don't encourage this kind of nonsense! You must keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Nancy Mikesell (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: blessingscaptured@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Hannah Jones (b)(6)

From: kurtmyers666@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kurt Myers (b)(6)

From: bal612@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Leticia Girard (b)(6)

From: pokornym@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Pokorny (b)(6)

From: judyljames3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Judy James (b)(6)

From: denisegatlin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Denise Gatlin (b)(6)

From: haytersteinhauer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:39:21 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Hayter (b)(6)

From: inajourney@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Yvonne Durand-Janicki , (b)(6)

From: jerry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jerry Stanley (b)(6)

From: jwolff@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jim Wolff (b)(6)

From: surgicalrn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gina Carlisle (b)(6)

From: rjmcafee@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard McAfee (b)(6)

From: dreamer867@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alicia Willard (b)(6)

From: regina3508@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Regina Mitchell (b)(6)

From: lecattoni@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lori Cattoni (b)(6)

From: FranqueO@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Franque O'Hara (b)(6)

From: Andersot@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Tyi Anderson (b)(6)

From: Dhartz6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbie Hartzell (b)(6)

From: fiddlestix549@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Julie Fugate (b)(6)

From: phizz1985@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Zampier (b)(6)

From: whitton1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Whitton (b)(6)

From: Sjcrooms@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sharron Schwartz (b)(6)

From: clcox@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Charles Cox (b)(6)

From: aotoole94@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Anne OToole (b)(6)

From: ebarosh@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am a teacher. I teach science as a fact based discipline. Males and females are genetically, scientifically different from conception. This is true for animals. This is true for human beings. I am mind boggled that this has to be a point for discussion. So, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Schools should not be teaching kids these things. If so, they are actually indoctrinating them to further an adult perverse agenda. I can tell you that most teachers do not agree with this. They are upset and disheartened by it. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Elizabeth Barosh (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: mekadera22@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Kadera (b)(6)

From: posturezkey@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Pamela Smeltz (b)(6)

From: Skkroese@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Susan Kroese (b)(6)

From: ami.mcnamara@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ami McNamara (b)(6)

From: tncplus4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carrie Savino (b)(6)

From: sendittodale@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dale Schumacher (b)(6)

From: beardiva@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Janice Freeman (b)(6)

From: marcias@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Marcia Sailsbury (b)(6)

From: drleecrawford@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tracie Crawford (b)(6)

From: cmjapnea@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Caryn Jaeschke (b)(6)

From: mariambell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mariam Bell (b)(6)

From: rte66lifestyle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Cheryl Cole (b)(6)

From: maryoxaal@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Oxaal (b)(6)

From: Abebetty@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Abraham Salcedo (b)(6)

From: sbrown.mk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. As a mom of 2 girls, this is very important! These young ladies need to be protected so they can grow well and do great things, not attacked with dangerous ideologies and foolishness that weakens them. As their parents, we need our parental rights completely intact at every stage. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sarah Brown (b)(6)

From: regina3508@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Regina Mitchell (b)(6)

From: holyroller1111@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Denise Zambrano (b)(6)

From: larry.gladfelter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Larry E Gladfelter Jr. (b)(6)

From: jeffcoleman99@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeffrey Coleman (b)(6)

From: amy.j.robinson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amy Robinson (b)(6)

From: kayren.shubeck@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Shubeck [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: carlaskipper@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carla Skipper (b)(6)

From: kpeakovic11@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathryn Peakovic (b)(6)

From: suzieq859@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As a former public school educator and parent, please protect our children, and the rights of parents. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. You have a tough job and I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I am praying for you, and all those in government positions for wisdom and clarity of mind and heart in these important actions. Thank you! Susan Mansfield (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: lanette.meyer3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Lanette Meyer (b)(6)

From: sberryamtx@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ronald Steven Berry (b)(6)

From: mw6086@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Merle Whetstone (b)(6)

From: sebernhardt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Bernhardt (b)(6)

From: dor6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dorothy Miller (b)(6)

From: valerie.fewins@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Valerie Fewins (b)(6)

From: kay@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Kay Gross (b)(6)

From: gwynsch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Gwyn Schwerdtfeger (b)(6)

From: Iroland55@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Laurie Roland (b)(6)

From: 3crwilson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As a former female athlete I have been concerned with the difficulties that females face that are now appearing in competitive sports. Females are forced to compete against bodies that are developed with male strength. They are not being treated fairly. Maybe a new category should be implemented for transgender so they can. Okpete agaist each other. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Again, male and female born bodies are very different. If transgenders want to compete, set up a new category for them to compete in against each other. This way they can still compete. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Robyn Wilson (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: njbene@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Nancy Benedek (b)(6)

From: giti.hansen@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Giti Hansen (b)(6)

From: rickndonna911@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Richard LeBlanc (b)(6)

From: acicur@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. John Cicur (b)(6)

From: fundsboonstra@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Shirley Boonstra (b)(6)

From: navyjake74@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Daniel Jacobs [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: ruth@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Ruth Green (b)(6)

From: anita10f7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please, do not make my granddaughter compete with boys. It is against all we grandmothers fought to bring to women's sports when we were trying so hard in the 60's and 70's for equality!! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Anita Christy (b)(6)

From: seaman41@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Joe Mitchell (b)(6)

From: lackeyja@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Lackey (b)(6)

From: bremerj1978@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please remember parental rights. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Janis Bremer

(b)(6)

From: mcdermottrt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert McDermott (b)(6)

From: sgsaldin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sarah G Saldin (b)(6)

From: derek.pastwick@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Derek Pastwick (b)(6)

From: pckjme@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christina Romero (b)(6)

From: lumpkn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paul A. Gensheimer (b)(6)

From: esg1949@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Earle Gregory (b)(6)

From: Jfmac05@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James McIntyre (b)(6)

From: erniedog124415@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Suzanne Mote (b)(6)

From: jackspencer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jack Spencer (b)(6)

From: paulm502@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Paul Mattson (b)(6)

From: wrs44145@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William R Sexton (b)(6)

From: Alruiz62@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Adrienne Ruiz (b)(6)

From: jpgrid@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Joan Gridley (b)(6)

From: dvd_cloward@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. David Cloward (b)(6)

From: KaeMoore2011@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Please also keep in mind that this sets women's rights back! So much was done to allow women in sports and Title IX strips biological women of the opportunity of fair competition by having them compete against biological males. If transgender persons want to compete, let them compete against each other. At least it would be a fair match. Thank you! Kae Moore (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: holyroller1111@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Denise Zambrano (b)(6)

From: kencobb78@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kenneth Cobb [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: westbrookmare@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Marilyn L Westbrook (b)(6)

From: wheelsdc2000@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Daniel Marcalus (b)(6)

From: mathewsjoan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joan Mathews (b)(6)

From: gpadowns@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Donald Downs (b)(6)

From: jordanambriz93@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jordan Ambriz (b)(6)

From: alil5he3p@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Walter Goddard (b)(6)

From: hjbart99@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Please remember that "gender identity" is malleable and political, but biological sex is immutable. You cannot engender rights to a made-up category at the expense of a real biological category without causing lasting damage to BOTH sets of people, in violation of parental rights. Exposure to so-called Queer Theory and other forms of deviancy now applauded in the culture are inappropriate and violate those parental rights. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Howard Bartlett (b)(6)

From: Peeb4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sarah Peters (b)(6)

From: wcbenson1991@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christina Benson [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: kateshomestead@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kate Hancock (b)(6)

From: ambermichellesemail@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amber Thomas (b)(6)

From: dirvingpa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As a parent of school-aged children, this is a matter of great import for me and my family. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. From the department website, the Department of Education is: "to supplement and complement the efforts of States, the local school systems and other instrumentalities of the States, the private sector, public and private educational institutions, public and private nonprofit educational research institutions, community-based organizations, parents, and students to improve the quality of education." Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of our children's education; we send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on our children. Doing so without our consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. So many gains have been made in the area of women's rights, recognizing women as unique, valuable individuals. By stating that a man who identifies as a woman is the same as a biological woman is to say women are not unique, and devalues them and their contributions to the world. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. David Irving (b)(6)

From: bobbisoxer45@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Roberta Wilson (b)(6)

From: terry.w.grogan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Terry Grogan (b)(6)

From: irishfaninbama@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Anthony Reeder (b)(6)

From: seeds4hope@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Donna Weeks (b)(6)

From: joni080898@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joni Yates (b)(6)

From: j122348@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. James Alack (b)(6)

From: gregcarpenter50@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Greg Carpenter (b)(6)

From: taylorboyle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Boyle (b)(6)

From: christinamford2015@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christina Ford (b)(6)

From: TracyAshcraft@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tracy Ashcraft (b)(6)

From: bethduffy1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Duffey (b)(6)

From: balysplatukis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Balys Platukis (b)(6)

From: garybeththompson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson (b)(6)

From: MARYGUTIERREZ1960@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Gutierrez [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: kenirene.schutt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Irene Schutt (b)(6)

From: jfsutherland1949@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbie Sutherland (b)(6)

From: justinhooker@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Justin Hooker (b)(6)

From: rkeck2015@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am contacting you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I urgently hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Rosetta Keck

(b)(6)

From: thegoverness@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Carolynn Novich (b)(6)

From: Tkkiel@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tom Kiel (b)(6)

From: truettsandy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. and Mrs. Truett J Johnson (b)(6)

From: eataters@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lorraine Robertson (b)(6)

From: gravisc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carmen Gravis (b)(6)

From: lpbbauer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. It has taken years for girls and women to even be allowed access to sports, and they have fought long and hard to prove themselves as solid competitors in the sports arena. To now decide to confuse the issue, and allow those who identify as female (even though they are biologically male) is to trample all strides which have been made for the rights of girls and women in sports; grade school, high school, college, and professionally. Please stand strong for girls and women; especially if you have daughters, sisters, or nieces. They depend on you to fight for their rights. This is a true 'women's rights' issue, and should not be destroyed. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Lawrence Bauer

(b)(6)

From: rjsrwatts@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Raymond Watts (b)(6)

From: joentawana1982@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joe Ashley (b)(6)

From: lecattoni@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lori Cattoni (b)(6)

From: wstawitz65@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you, for considering my input, we know better for our kids! Mr. William E Stawitz (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: margo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please consider the following issues regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) hearing to gather information to improve enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX): Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Parental rights need to be considered. You also should check to see what legal ability you have to pursue this. Biden's administration is abusing its power by stepping into this on a federal level. I hope you consider the issues I have presented as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Margo Thelen (b)(6)

From: terhark75@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Rebecca Terhark (b)(6)

From: dedrapease@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Dedra Pease (b)(6)

From: barry@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Barry Mckenna (b)(6)

From: shwright1204@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Wright (b)(6)

From: cheffernan1968@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Chevon Heffernan [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: onthehill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Karen Blakeman (b)(6)

From: sayhi2rose@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rosemary Tavitias (b)(6)

From: angielunais@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Angie Luna (b)(6)

From: elkcamp4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ronald Hainke (b)(6)

From: sudy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Phyllis Reichenbach (b)(6)

From: keith.merrill@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Keith Merrill (b)(6)

From: macenriuq@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

John Henderson (b)(6)

From: rescuer24.11@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Clifton Powell (b)(6)

From: sjmoore5504@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Moore (b)(6)

From: tandd75@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Debbie Osborne (b)(6)

From: mkr371@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am a parent of two and am very concerned with the protection of our children. Our culture and political climate desire to mandate cultural trends. Our children are supposed to be taught academics. Keep man's philosophy in those classes. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Scott Rankin (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: annehparker2013@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Sex is determined at conception by genes. If a child has male organs he is a male regardless of how he feels. That needs to be dealt with at home. The same for females. Women cannot compete with males in a fair way. This is so ridiculous that I can't even imagine that it is being discussed by intelligent people. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Anne H. Parker (b)(6)

From: ranger.easyrider@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Scott Whaley (b)(6)

From: pkmartin3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Pamela Martin (b)(6)

From: joebob.smith@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Joe Smith (b)(6)

From: acpower@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Alan Deppe (b)(6)

From: katrinamichelle2001@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions and think about your children, their children and generations to come as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Katrina Robinson (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: pscoville11060@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. As a thirty year veteran high school English teacher and coach, I implore you to please protect parental rights and especially protect all the young girls who aspire to achieve scholarships and opportunities through sports. Allowing young men to compete in the same arenas as girls would destroy those aspirations as well as opportunities.  I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Phyllis Scoville (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Tre4now@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Patricia Gorgone (b)(6)

From: ed.gallo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Boy are boys. Girls are girls. That's how they were born. No matter how hard you go against this, it chaged nothing. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Ed Gallo (b)(6)

From: wwjd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am a practicing attorney and graduate of Georgetown University Law Center. I have also served for years as Chairman of a local school board in Colorado. The proposed destruction of women's rights presently being considered is a travesty to true justice and the reality of women's sports. It is a complete abdication of the protections intended by Title IX under the pretense of equality and the reality of radical indifference to fundamental fairness. Will the next frontier be to put special protections into place for those who "identify" as Black, but are genetically White? I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. James Ringenberg, Esq. (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: patthies2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Thies (b)(6)

From: heartgifts@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Sims (b)(6)

From: Uncry_40337@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Henry Chandler (b)(6)

From: bettesiz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please protect the rights of women/girls. Biological males have an unfair advantage physically and should not compete in female sports. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mary Stroud

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: johnsonma5524@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mary Ann Johnson (b)(6)

From: tammymichels86@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tammy Michels (b)(6)

From: hbjohnson24@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Hunter Johnson (b)(6)

From: mbn7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As a former High School and College athlete who only could dream of the benefits of the soon coming Title 9 provisions, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mary Nees, Cornell

(b)(6)

From: swilkie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Susan Wilkie (b)(6)

From: hschaar222@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Helen Corning (b)(6)

From: pka252001@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. These are things I strongly believe. Thank you! Miss Brenda Coleman

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: karlbaumgardner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Karl Baumgardner (b)(6)

From: lecattoni@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lori Cattoni (b)(6)

From: dennis.w.grimm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Dennis Grimm (b)(6)

From: jdiedrich32@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joe Diedrich (b)(6)

From: richarddoliver@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). Though my formal education was primarily in physics and math, I know basic biology which teaches that a person with one X and one Y chromosome in each cell is a male. Furthermore, biological males have a variety of advantages over females in sports. Furthermore, males have an inherent tendency toward females that logically makes it wise to separate them in places like locker rooms. It is therefore scientifically, ethically, and morally essential that biological males with that irremovable Y chromosome be prevented from competing against females in school sports. It is also the only fair approach for those born as females. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Richard Oliver (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: pattimiles1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, God created man and woman. They have different strengths. When it comes to sports, men are stronger than women. Boys are stronger than girls. No boy or man should ever be allowed to compete against a girl or woman in sports. If they do you have eliminated the chance for girls or women to excel in their own sports world. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Patricia Miles (b)(6)

From: davidliving@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Livingstone (b)(6)

From: cmetzer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Craig Metzger [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: burkhow298@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Laura Burkhow (b)(6)

From: flute@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lauren Smith (b)(6)

From: jerrollwalter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jerroll Walter (b)(6)

From: edhalland@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Edwin Halland (b)(6)

From: eller.sydney@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sydney Eller [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: kbm9684@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Michael McGinnis (b)(6)

From: normawr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Norma Wrobel Parent and former high school and college teacher (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: sjmoore5504@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Moore (b)(6)

From: cmurphy1224@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Christine Murphy (b)(6)

From: libcat@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cathy Latham (b)(6)

From: apeanut98@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Philip Fusco (b)(6)

From: jnjaaberg2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jeffrey O Aaberg (b)(6)

From: Booq@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Susan Topp (b)(6)

From: jamccune@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Nothing seems to happen when things are done that are against the law and that must change Thank you!

Mr. Mary McCune (b)(6)

From: glnnhalstead@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Glenn Halstead (b)(6)

From: equestlady@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rose Israel [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: hslothaug@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. There has been a lot of talk about 'following the science' in various fields and I believe it has been shown that parental involvement and guidance has been the most beneficial for children's education. Another concern is the confusion added when biological sex differences are ignored and girls especially are expected to compete on equal basis with biological boys in athletic event. This is not science. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Henry Slothaug

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: carollantis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carol Lantis (b)(6)

From: garyjoseph1982@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gary Aschenbrenner (b)(6)

From: dwbourgoyne@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Denise Bourgoyne (b)(6)

From: luke.mcintire1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Luke McIntire (b)(6)

From: marybob7@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Robert Cuva (b)(6)

From: rslaton23@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Robert Slaton (b)(6)

From: rsmith6971@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Roger Smith (b)(6)

From: jeanhurston@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As a grandmother of 5 granddaughters I have deep concerns about their future in our land. So I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Jean Hurston (b)(6)

From: cser1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debra Casey (b)(6)

From: omf@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ogden Fell (b)(6)

From: biggestdolphinsfan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lisa Humble (b)(6)

From: timhunter@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Timothy Hunter (b)(6)

From: drkjceyeguy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Kelly Corbridge (b)(6)

From: jaclyndawn87@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Many transgender athletes actually agree one should only be allowed to compete based on their sex for these very reasons. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Jaclyn Maria

(b)(6)

From: egsorenson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Eric Sorenson (b)(6)

From: moorescott@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Walter Moore (b)(6)

From: carriecalzada@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carrie Calzada (b)(6)

From: robancald@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:27:36 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ann Marie Caldwell (b)(6)

From: bettyjobest@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Betty Jo Best (b)(6)

From: raymond_wrght@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Raymond Wright (b)(6)

From: papatarp4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Steve Tarpley (b)(6)

From: slsrstout@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Lisa Stout (b)(6)

From: kimberlyjopratt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). First, everyone should read the old story The Emperors New Clothes. Then, stop trying to virtue signal, and protect women instead of, once again, MEN. . Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Thank you! Kim Pratt (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: janet.muncy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Janet Muncy (b)(6)

From: ds@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Sharp (b)(6)

From: dtschumaier@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Donna Schumaier (b)(6)

From: dmhowell72@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Diane M Howell (b)(6)

From: whetstone_jan@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. Please, respect rights of girls and women. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Janice Little

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: martyjuly3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Martha Jones (b)(6)

From: rablat5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Benjamin Ashley (b)(6)

From: wrobelkat@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kathy Wrobel (b)(6)

From: margarettajoy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Margaret Sprinkle [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: Morganjodi85@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jodi Morgan (b)(6)

From: proffitt5014@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cindy Proffitt (b)(6)

From: cccwilliamstownky@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Faye Haynes (b)(6)

From: bethrronk@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beth Ronk [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: epizudi@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ron Hoy (b)(6)

From: drsmdavis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. S. M. Davis (b)(6)

From: lsjchurch@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Linda Cone (b)(6)

From: sjshensley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandra Hensley (b)(6)

From: b-ghixson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

To Whom it may concern: I'm writing on behalf of all the young girls—who are BORN GIRLS, should not have to complete against a male who can't win in a male sport. This is not fair to the females who should not have to complete against a person who can't win in his own gender. I do feel sorry for young men who can't win in a male sport, but they should not be allowed to participate in a women's sport. Parents do not want this unjust decision to pass. Parents should have the final say in what the DOE decides, as they know their children, DOE has no idea. Thank you! Ms. Gm Hixson (b)(6)

From: apeanut98@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Philip Fusco (b)(6)

From: nichols.peggy.j@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Peggy Nichols (b)(6)

From: nadinekelsay@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Nadine Kelsay (b)(6)

From: victoria.ruhsam@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vicki Ruhsam (b)(6)

From: Pat-northrop@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Pat Northrop (b)(6)

From: a_heran@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Anna Heran (b)(6)

From: hoep76@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Paul Hoerner (b)(6)

From: tomcat23@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Marci Gooch (b)(6)

From: mrsmac63@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diane MacPherson (b)(6)

From: helen.dean@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Christa Sherman (b)(6)

From: annejsoucy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Anne Soucy (b)(6)

From: Wheatley4497@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

William Wheatley (b)(6)

From: vburch4743@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Victoria Burch (b)(6)

From: Robinsonhisd@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Barbara Robinson (b)(6)

From: b_everhart03@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Becky Everhart (b)(6)

From: alsredtruc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Elvenia DelaCruz

From: dagored6@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Barbara Smith (b)(6)

From: loslidebbie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbie Losli (b)(6)

From: ritafreeman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Rita J Freeman (b)(6)

From: cupcake901@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Susan Cabales (b)(6)

From: shayfree@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am pleading with you to think of YOUR daughter or grand-daughter as you reevaluate Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Sharon Freeman (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: christi.george@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christine George (b)(6)

From: hoppynmerfree@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Greg Hopkins (b)(6)

From: jeff.arendt@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jeff Arendt (b)(6)

From: kmmeno@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Karen Meno [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: macylbrown@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Macy Brown (b)(6)

From: vanderbeckhome2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Angela Vanderbeck (b)(6)

From: the7weavers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Sherri Weaver (b)(6)

From: fillyjd2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Miss Phyllis Donaldson (b)(6)

From: ljpschool@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. I think it is important to keep girls safety in mind. Transitioning boys are still bigger and stronger than girls. Girls can be severely injured when playing sports (like soccer) with transitioning boys. Don't let this happen! First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs. Laura Pangia (b)(6)

From: kuszikam@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Edith Csaba-Gallant (b)(6)

From: sallimae724@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sharon Kelso (b)(6)

From: omegawolfbmw@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bela Smith (b)(6)

From: peaceblove@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeremy Alexander (b)(6)

From: nitaffiset@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Nita Fiset (b)(6)

From: suncityw853@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Marsha G Saylor (b)(6)

From: jjacobucci@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jen Iacobucci (b)(6)

From: fdtincher@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. Science, parental rights and common sense. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. As you proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. We send our children to school to learn and most parents do not consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on the simple Science of sex, Males and females (by DNA), need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protect women and girls' rights in sports. Transgender athletes should compete in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Frank Tincher (b)(6)

From: skiidaho98@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Travis Plummer (b)(6)

From: carolynjanell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carolyn Anderson (b)(6)

From: forcem@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Mark Forcellini (b)(6)

From: jimjender@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

James Jendruczek (b)(6)

From: kenhar.lhp18@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Kenneth Haringa (b)(6)

From: Tjsuff@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As a parent of two young children I want to voice my comments and concerns on this matter. I have concerns about the environment my daughter may face in the future if her rights aren't protected when playing sports, and the ideas that are being pushed do not align with many families' beliefs including our own. There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Terri Cook (b)(6)

From: adevries03@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Alan DeVries (b)(6)

From: enbody3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Rev. Jeffrey Brandt (b)(6)

From: Krispeachey3@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. May God forgive us all! Thank you! Kristin Peachey

(b)(6)

From: cytittle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cynthia Tittle (b)(6)

From: MWOLCHKO@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. National Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. No amount of hormone therapy will weaken and slow and original-male to an original-female level. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Mark Wolchko

(b)(6)

From: jkeller2b@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Jim Keller (b)(6)

From: jnmcswain@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Natalie McSwain (b)(6)

From: miss.cathy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Catherine Seybold (b)(6)

From: rhonda_alverson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pastor Bryan Alverson (b)(6)

From: trezac@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. In an effort to cater to less than 1% of children, you're penalizing the other 99%. That's hardly equity. Thank you! George Rezac

(b)(6)

From: turnbullconnie@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Connie Turnbull (b)(6)

From: adqle@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Amie Dilqule (b)(6)

From: papamac46@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. There is nothing fair or equal about competition being based on gender identity rather than biological sex. Don't take away parents rights to teach sex education as they see fit. The federal government should not interfere in what should be taught in the home. Thank you! Dan Macdonald (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: walterbmoore@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I would add that if you feel it necessary to allow transgender folks to not compete according to their biology, then allow them to compete against each other in a third category, so biological girls can compete with each other on equal footing. Thank you! Mr. Walter Moore (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: djeannepiper@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Donna Piper (b)(6)

From: reynderspatricia@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patricia Reynders (b)(6)

From: calaislinks88@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lisa Smola (b)(6)

From: labarrfamily@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Please consider more carefully the administration's stance on gender issues and education. Alienating a huge swath of the American people by implementing radical sexual policies is not in your or our interests. Thank you! Mr. James LaBarr (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: scjacoby@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cynthia Jacoby (b)(6)

From: onereddawg64@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Todd Hunt (b)(6)

From: daclewis@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Carolyn Lewis (b)(6)

From: ajssls15@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Abigail Starke (b)(6)

From: igoldfinger@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Ilene Goldfinger (b)(6)

From: cjhogue300@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Clifford Hogue (b)(6)

From: michaelshines@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Michael Hines (b)(6)

From: cpsnider.mail@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Chris Snider (b)(6)

From: Marisolval@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Marisol Valladares (b)(6)

From: lc6572@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Lisa Cuff (b)(6)

From: suncityw853@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Marsha G Saylor (b)(6)

From: johnrobinson480@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Earllena Robinson (b)(6)

From: sfamerasinghe@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Srinath Felix Amerasinghe (b)(6)

From: jimshbrand@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I wish to highlight some important considerations that I think you need to be consider as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. James Brandt (b)(6)

From: cgallagher4@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Cynthia Gallagher (b)(6)

From: lisabergthold@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Derek Bergthold (b)(6)

From: doulos01@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Francis Kagawa (b)(6)

From: vjkerwin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Vivienne Kerwin (b)(6)

From: lksorrells@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Linda Sorrells (b)(6)

From: blessednichols@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Nathan Nichols (b)(6)

From: bstephenson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Beverly Stephenson (b)(6)

From: ruthpfiester@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Ruth Pfiester (b)(6)

From: bickybo@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Cheri Williams (b)(6)

From: tammy.mokma@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). As a mother of six children, four of whom are girls, I am very concerned with the changes being made to Title IX. Females should not be forced to compete against biological males just because the male claims to be a female. More importantly, I do not want biological males to have access to female bathrooms, showers, or locker rooms. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn subjects such as math, science, and language. Controversial topics such as Queer Theory, gender identity classes, or critical race theory should have no part in school! Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. As a former teacher and a Christian, I was not permitted to mention God or pray in class, yet our president wants to enforce things that are not only anti Christian, but against the laws of nature. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mrs.

Tamara Mokma

(b)(6)

From: Captpittman@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Eric Pittman (b)(6)

From: milner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wayne Milner (b)(6)

From: pgray@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Phil Gray (b)(6)

From: Shull@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sandra Hull (b)(6)

From: njgaspers@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Nick Gaspers (b)(6)

From: ptoscani2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patti Toscani (b)(6)

From: wirtz.family@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Lou Wirtz (b)(6)

From: imrich5@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, It is past time for truths, and not politics nor "worldly" pursuits, to be the basis of government in the lives of the people of the United States. We are a free and educated society that is far more capable of making proper decisions for the parenting and education of our children than politically controlled government departments. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Leisa Hurley-Richardson (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: hutto88@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Debbie Hutto (b)(6)

From: jennfranson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). I could have kept all the articulate and threatening text to tell you that I highly approve of Trump's clarity he placed on school sports but instead I'll just summarize, I want you to respect PARENTAL RIGHTS and protect schoolchildren, particularly young girls! I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Jennifer Franson (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: carol.tomayko@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carol Tomayko (b)(6)

From: kmshaib@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Katharine M Shaibani (b)(6)

From: cathyandbob@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bob Adamus (b)(6)

From: wayne.r.buckley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Wayne Buckley (b)(6)

From: Sue.tapp22@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sue Tapp (b)(6)

From: rgrayp3b@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ronald Gray (b)(6)

From: haynesdavid52@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

David Haynes (b)(6)

From: fmpiquette@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Francine Piquette (b)(6)

From: jeffrey_lind@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Jeffrey Lind (b)(6)

From: debrakrispin@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Debra Krispin (b)(6)

From: sherrygulke@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Sherry Gulke (b)(6)

From: geotherm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dr. Lenox Carruth (b)(6)

From: weirn1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Dominick Weir (b)(6)

From: slsk1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Sharon Schory (b)(6)

From: dizcrn46@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diane Kazimir (b)(6)

From: vld8@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Virginia Decker (b)(6)

From: dougnkay@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Norita K Bockus (b)(6)

From: wlschertz@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William Schertz (b)(6)

From: gmbassoc2@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, realize that many students have taken Biology and know about the chromosomes which determine sex and gender. Our U.S. Department of Education should follow the science, not vacillating opinions, when making policy decisions. You should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Glenn Button (b)(6)

From: rdpricejr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ronald Price (b)(6)

From: tinadawnmiller@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Tina Miller (b)(6)

From: progers001@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Patrick W Rogers (b)(6)

From: rpg8511@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Remember that the oath you took is to the Constitution. Thank you! Dr. Ritchie P Gillespie (b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: Kieryfont@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Kieryn Fontaine (b)(6)

From: marydoerr@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Mary Doerr (b)(6)

From: safstrom@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations. How is it going to affect girls sports? How will genetically built girls compete with genetically built boys who identify as girls? How is this fair? This is not a political issue! Regarding what is being pushed on the kids in school about sexual identity is taking over the rights of parents.. This is fearful when the beliefs of the parents are being disregarded. Should you I hope you allow these concerns to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Sharon Safstrom

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: rkoynes@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an ABUSE of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has NO place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. shame. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like critical Race Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Rena Oynes (b)(6)

From: btessien@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As a teacher and an RN I implore you to take a second look at the Title IX amendment. It just doesn't make sense. Thank you for seeking America's opinion at this virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. I see this as a parent, teacher and nurse. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. This is basic anatomy that like it or not is given at birth. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. I believe I speak for the majority of women and Americans. Thank you! Mrs. Be Tessen RN

(b)(6)

From: candiswiley@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Candis Wiley (b)(6)

From: ak74565@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Aaron Krause (b)(6)

From: pfenn99@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Peter Fennell (b)(6)

From: benjaminwright1662@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Benjamin Wright (b)(6)

From: pshepworth44@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. The Federal government does not have the right to change the curriculum of children in our schools. Neither do they have the right to discriminate against girls participating in sports by allowing biological males to compete against them. As a retired teacher, I recognize the danger of indoctrinating children with political opinions before they have even the proper brain development to evaluate different viewpoints. Young children view issues as only right or wrong, with nothing in-between and little consideration for valid alternative positions. Parents are the best people to decide what young children are taught about these issues. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pat Shepard

(b)(6)

From: Reachdebb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Debbue Pender (b)(6)

From: buf7fy@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Carole Lanphere (b)(6)

From: christineozawa@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Christine Ozawa (b)(6)

From: roymccain@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Roy McCain (b)(6)

From: aublea@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Andrew Auble (b)(6)

From: a.willoughby1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Alex Willoughby (b)(6)

From: daniel.geer@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Daniel Geer (b)(6)

From: gpalensky@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Gail Palensky (b)(6)

From: vportis1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vicki Portis [REDACTED] (b)(6)

From: dskreider@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Glenn Kreider (b)(6)

From: raykny@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Kathleen Yoshinaka (b)(6)

From: scottasnell@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Scott Snell (b)(6)

From: rgveneklase@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Ray Veneklase (b)(6)

From: bwashburn@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Bill Washburn (b)(6)

From: revcrwpbc@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Reverend Rorke Warne (b)(6)

From: bsinman12@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Brian Inman (b)(6)

From: vlrfmm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Vivian Field (b)(6)

From: blewett1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Diana Blewett (b)(6)

From: rickandpamjohnson@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Pamela Johnson (b)(6)

From: goosehb@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Daniel Frey (b)(6)

From: coverjustin1@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Justin Cover (b)(6)

From: wleeboggs@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. William Lee Boggs (b)(6)

From: bchas1257@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Brian Hassell (b)(6)

From: amymiller@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Amy Miller (b)(6)

From: cabinlifeforme@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. Charlie Snodgrass (b)(6)

From: Joan.cox@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Joan Cox (b)(6)

From: armstrong03@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mr. George Richard Armstrong (b)(6)

From: marykronsteiner@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 00:17:19 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Ms. Mary Kronsteiner (b)(6)

From: calcharles@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, As a person who has worked in public education for over 33 years, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to use in your consideration as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex at birth, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I respectfully request that you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Charles Radcliff

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: mjmiller@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, Thank you for considering my input on the Title IX review. I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you! Mr. Michael Miller

(b)(6)

(b)(6)

From: uebbingm@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Melanie Uebbing (b)(6)

From: Nanarenea14@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Mrs. Renea Hawkins (b)(6)

From: mcgrugg@grassrootsmessages.com
Sent: Fri, 28 May 2021 01:12:14 +0000
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Written Comment: Title IX Public Hearing

Dear Acting Director Goldberg, I am writing to you regarding the U.S. Department of Education's Office for Civil Rights (OCR) announcement of a virtual public hearing to gather information for the purpose of improving enforcement of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 (Title IX). There are some very important considerations you need to be aware of as you conduct your review of the Title IX regulations. First, you should evaluate what legal ability you have to undertake any measures you ultimately decide to pursue. Any rulemaking by the Department of Education on gender identity and sexual orientation is an abuse of power by the Biden administration. Education is a state and local matter, protected by law from federal incursion. Politics has no place in K-12 education, especially when ideologies are forced on parents and students from the federal level. Should you continue to proceed, there ought to be extensive consideration given to parental rights. Parents are the primary arbiters of their children's education; they send their children to school to learn and do not necessarily consent to controversial topics like Queer Theory being taught to or practiced on their children. Doing so without their consent is a violation of public trust and parental rights. Children with questions about identity should be referred back to their parents for guidance so that parents can address the situation as their family beliefs dictate. Additionally, Title IX protections for girls' sports are important and must be honored based on sex, not gender identity. Males and females need to compete separately due to issues of fairness, risk of physical injury, and privacy. Protecting women and girls' right to sports does not stop transgender athletes from competing in sports on teams that align with their biological sex. I hope you keep these thoughts and suggestions at the forefront of your mind and allow them to guide your actions as you review Title IX. Thank you!

Maria Rugg [REDACTED] (b)(6)