Sex matters in Title IX. Please protect girl's and women's right to a fair and safe playing field. Please protect women's sex-based rights. This isn't anti-trans legislation - it is protecting women's sex-based rights legislation. Young women, who fought hard for equality in athletic funding and opportunities, are being forced to compete against trans women (biological men) who retain the unfair physical characteristics of once being men. No matter how you "feel", physical attributes are determined by science and the DNA make up, which you cannot change. Simply reducing testosterone levels does not change biology. Taking female hormones does not change the physical advantages of going through puberty as a male. Many trans women don't take hormones at all, they haven't had sex-reassignment surgery - they are in all but name MALE!

There are biological distinctions between male and female - that is a scientific fact. Trans women have the larger hearts and cardiovascular system of men. They have the larger and denser bone structure of men. Their muscles and ligaments, etc. are larger and stronger than women. WHY aren't those overt prejudices against natural born women athletes being recognized and addressed instead of insisting that a small percentage of trans women be allowed to dominate competitions?

There are reasons that athletic competitions have divisions based on weight (boxing & weightlifting) and biological sex - to make those competitions FAIR. Why not simply allow trans women to compete in their own divisions? Or with their own biological sex? No one is banning them from competing - just compete fairly. Why is it preferable to compete unfairly at the expense of young natural born women all over this country? Please protect girl's and women's right to a fair and safe playing field. Please protect women's sex-based rights.

Thank you,

"Gender identity is not equivalent to nor a substitute for sex.

"Bostock v. Clayton County (140 S.Ct. 1731 (2020)), the primary legal authority for E.O. 13988, clearly demonstrates how transgender people can be protected from discrimination without disturbing single sex classifications whose application and enforcement do not constitute discriminatory actions under existing law.

"Bostock relies explicitly on biological sex for its expansion of protection to LGBT persons. The Supreme Court was careful not to conflate sexual orientation or transgender status with sex, stating: "We agree that homosexuality and transgender status are distinct concepts from sex" (140 S.Ct. at 1746-47). According to Bostock, then, neither transgender status nor sexual orientation may operate as legal substitutes for the concept of sex as "biological distinctions between male and female" (140 S.Ct. at 1739).

"It is therefore perfectly consistent to protect students from discrimination on the basis of transgender status or gender identity and sexual orientation while simultaneously recognizing biological sex where sex is important.

"Indeed, Title IX and its implementing regulations stipulate that sometimes sex matters. Existing statutory and regulatory provisions therefore permit schools to maintain single-sex admissions policies (20 U.S.C. § 1681(a)(1)), single sex housing (34 C.F.R. § 106.32(b)), athletic scholarships (34 C.F.R. § 106.37(c)), gym and health classes (34 C.F.R. § 106.34(b)), sports teams (34 C.F.R. § 106.41(b)), and locker rooms and bathrooms (34 C.F.R. § 106.33).

"The extension of Bostock's reasoning to Title IX, via E.O. 13988, means that transgender and gender non-conforming students are entitled to legal protection from harmful sex-based discrimination in all educational environments and opportunities. This protection should not and does not require denial of biological sex or the displacement of sex as a valid means of classification in contexts where sex matters.

"Single sex classification is sometimes reasonably necessary to ensure fairness, privacy, equality, safety, and/or dignity. Girls and women have valid legal interests in the continued legal permissibility of Title IX's sex-based classifications in educational settings including sports teams, locker rooms, bathrooms, and student housing.

"Transgender and non-binary identifying students must be given equal educational access on the same basis as their peers. Where educational opportunities are separated by sex to protect legitimate rights of fairness, privacy, or equality, transgender students must not be assessed by a different yardstick: gender identity. Individuals operating or speaking as if gender identity can actually change sex is one thing, but institutionally moving these goal posts for the benefit of some students is not fair to the remaining students as it predictably deprives them of both opportunities and legal rights.

Female students and sex-based classification

"Much of athletic competition makes the importance of sex, the "biological distinctions between male and female," undeniable. As highlighted in ongoing litigation such as Soule v. Connecticut Association of Schools, misinterpretation of sex-separated sporting competition as gender-identity-separated competition has caused the unfair displacement of female athletes by male transgender athletes from titled rankings in the female sports category. This is the inevitable result of insufficiently mitigating testosterone advantage in the male body.[ii]

"These losses are not about mere bragging rights or personal validation; there is a direct relationship between athletic accomplishment and access to both educational opportunity and scholarship funding. The existing discrimination gap between male and female athletic scholarship awards is estimated at a shocking $1 billion per year, according to Champion Women's 2020 analysis.[iii] The cost of displacing sex with the concept of gender identity in Title IX's implementing regulations is also the displacement of women and girls from opportunities that are already more readily available to male students. It's simply not fair. Female students are the intended beneficiaries of Title IX

"Title IX was originally passed with the express purpose of providing women and girls with educational opportunities previously denied to them and offered only to male people. Legislative intent to equalize opportunities between male and female people remains an unrealized dream. As OCR considers changes to and new interpretations of Title IX's regulations, female people must be remembered as the designated beneficiaries of the legislation.

Historic inequities between male and female students continue today

"Sexual assault of female students by male students in educational environments is ubiquitous across the nation.[iv] Gender-balancing has been devised to artificially cap female enrollments in college programs.[v] As discussed above, women's athletic teams and opportunities remain underfunded compared to male athletic teams and opportunities.[vi] None of this can be resolved, and may even be exacerbated, by failing to distinguish between sex and gender identity in official interpretations of Title IX's regulations.

Protecting all students requires fairness for all students

"Female students and athletes cannot access Title IX's guarantee of fairness, equality, and safety if the loss of our long-established interests in sex-based classification is trivialized as a mere "discomfort." [vii] Yet this is exactly how the 2016 Dear Colleague Letter: Transgender Students characterized and preemptively dismissed other students' and parents' predictable objections to its new policy:

'A school's Title IX obligation to ensure nondiscrimination on the basis of sex requires schools to provide transgender students equal access [by gender identity] to educational programs and activities even in circumstances in which other students, parents, or community members raise objections or concerns. As is consistently recognized in civil rights cases, the desire to accommodate others' discomfort cannot justify a policy that singles out and disadvantages a particular class of students.'

"This guidance required all educational institutions to recognize gender identity as synonymous with, and even as a replacement for, sex, while failing to account for circumstances where sex matters. This inflexible and unyielding instruction, should it be reinstated, would clearly be an overreach of Bostock's holding and at odds with current Title IX regulations.

In summary

"The Department of Education's implementation of E.O. 13988 and E.O. 14021 to Title IX must extend Bostock's holding consistent with its recognition that sometimes sex matters. In doing so, the Department must also remember that female students are the intended beneficiaries of Title

IX's legal protections. Bostock's groundbreaking guarantee of equal rights to gay, lesbian, and transgender students includes responsibly balancing the interests of all impacted parties and honoring existing single sex classifications. This can be fairly accomplished by providing guidance that prohibits discrimination on the basis of transgender status and sexual orientation while affirming the legitimacy of single sex classifications in Title IX where sex matters."

We urge you to protect women's sex-based rights in sports and education. There must be a level playing field for females. Trans women can play with their biological peers or in separate divisions.
