To Whom It May Concern:

It has come to my attention that the U.S. Department of Education is considering redefining "sex" as "sexual orientation" instead of simple male or female. This is very bizarre and unsupportable. The devastating ramifications regarding privacy in restrooms and locker rooms is obvious. I don't want a guy claiming to be a girl in the locker room with my daughter. The ramifications regarding fairness in competition is also obvious. I don't want my daughter having to compete in sports with a male claiming to be a female. Additionally, the kinds of decisions regarding sexual behavior choices at the very least should not be decided at an early age. Logic tells us that at the very least these decisions can wait until adulthood.

What about age orientation. A man is 40 years old, but claims he is a 15 year old girl. Will the depart of education allow him to enroll in school and go into the girl's restroom and locker room and compete in girl's sports? The Department of Education is treading on thin ice and dangerously close to plunging into the abyss of bizarre and harmful social behavior.

Everyone knows when children are born they are born male or female. The evidence is apparent.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Jesse D. "Skip" Woodfin
