The US Dept of Education should leave standing the previous Secretary's 2020 Title IX rule regarding due process, presumption of innocence, right to see evidence, and right to cross-examination at the college level. This new rule should not be terminated so soon after having been implemented.

Because of Title IX incidents reported from my own alma mater, I have ceased any financial support of that institution, an elite eastern former women's college that is now co-ed. This was a difficult decision for me, but the only one that I can in good conscience make.
