

From: Jordan Zabel
Sent: Tue, 8 Jun 2021 15:17:38 -0500
To: T9PublicHearing
Subject: Title IX Submission
Attachments: Title IX.docx

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Do not click links or open attachments unless you recognize the sender and know the content is safe.

Attached is my submission for changes and updates to Title IX.
Thanks!

Jordan Zabel
Sexual Assault Campus Advocate
Pronouns: he/him/his

"Unless someone like you cares a whole awful lot, nothing is going to get better. It's not." - The Lorax

318 21st Avenue East
Superior, WI 54880
715-392-3136 (phone)
715-392-8463 (fax)
715-969-4382 (Cell)

This message contains confidential information and is intended only for the individual named. If you are not the named addressee you should not disseminate, distribute or copy this e-mail. Please notify the sender immediately by e-mail if you have received this e-mail by mistake and delete this e-mail from your system. If you are not the intended recipient you are notified that disclosing, copying, distributing or taking any action in reliance on the contents of this information is strictly prohibited.

Hello everyone,

My name is Jordan and I am the Sexual Assault Campus Advocate for the University of Wisconsin-Superior and Wisconsin Indianhead Technical College in Superior WI. My employer is the non-profit Center Against Sexual and Domestic Abuse, also in Superior. The last Administration damaged Title IX, DeVos's changes to the Title IX rule only further sweep sexual harassment under the rug by requiring schools to ignore many reports of sexual harassment and to use uniquely burdensome procedures for sexual harassment that aren't required for any other type of student or staff misconduct, like non-sexual assault. The DeVos rule discourages students from reporting sexual assault and other forms of sexual harassment, creating an environment based in fear, not support. When schools fail to respond effectively, the impact of sexual harassment and assault can be devastating. Many students won't speak up about sexual harassment or assault at all if they don't believe their school will do anything to help. DeVos's changes were challenged by 18 states, numerous advocacy agencies, student survivors, teachers, principals, mental health professionals and many more.

So what can the Biden-Harris Administration do to help?

Prior to DeVos, the Department's longstanding guidance led to greater and more meaningful action by institutions to address sex-based harassment and support victims, an increase in reporting by victims to their schools and the Department, and greater accountability when institutions failed to comply with Title IX. However, much remains to be done to protect students who are sexually harassed, as too many experience it with little protection. To effectuate Title IX's purpose as a broad remedial statute, the Department must reinstate its decades-old view and explain that sex-based harassment includes sexual harassment, dating violence, domestic violence, and sex-based stalking and harassment based on sexual orientation, gender identity, gender expression, parental status, pregnancy, childbirth, termination of pregnancy, or related conditions and define sexual harassment as unwelcome sexual conduct. The Administration can also implement robust protections for survivors against their abuser or any form of retaliation. Title IX prohibits retaliation against those who complain of sex discrimination. Yet student survivors, especially survivors of color, students with disabilities, and LGTBQ survivors, continue to face punishment when they turn to their schools for help. Some are disciplined for rule-breaking that they must divulge in order to report. Others are punished for sexual contact on school grounds, even when this contact included their own sexual assaults. Student survivors, primarily those in higher education, have also increasingly faced retaliation from their assailants, who file baseless cross-complaints in an effort to dissuade and punish victims.

Lastly Title IX should require all Title IX coordinators to become Trauma informed as to not re-trigger any survivor of sexual violence.