Now in my 70's I have seen children and grandchildren participate in organized sports over many years. Always the organization was based on single gender competition. That being said here's what is still the norm for my grown daughter's co-ed soccer league: "boys must always pass the ball at least once to a girl before scoring."

This rule recognizes inherently unequal strength between male and female that never changes. Period.

Be careful of thinking tolerance requires disregarding this truth.
