Dear DOE -- I'm writing to urge that the Department of Education recognize and protect sex as biological sex under Title IX. I believe that biological women suffer discrimination as a class not because of their "gender" or "gender presentaiton", but primarily because of their biology. Their "bodies are the battleground" as the feminist rally cry has it. Because of the significant differences between male and female bodies in the field of sport, protections of that hard-fought woman's "space" are essential. Recognize that there is absolutely a difference between Sex (a biological fact) and Gender (a social construct.) Gender expression should have its own protections, but not at the expense of womens' rights.

Thank you,

Mickle Maher
