I am voicing concerns to respect parental rights of our children and protect all school children. I am AGAINST adopting the proposed changes in Title IX into the US Department of Education system.

Sexual orientation and gender identity instruction is the sole right of each parent and family. It should never be a right of teachers or the US Government.

Respectfully,
Sam Adelman

To Whom it May Concern,

I am concerned that the proposed regulations will serve to indoctrinate children with the Government's view of gender identity in the name of anti-discrimination. An individual's right to freedom of expression should not infringe on someone else's freedom of religion. A difference of opinion is not discrimination, particularly when the difference of opinion is based on religious or moral grounds. The educational environment should permit free discourse without labeling opinions as discriminatory.

Again, I am concerned that the proposed regulations, under the auspices of "anti-discrimination" will actually serve to silence voices based on the Christian belief that people are created as either male or female and that one's biological sex should not be medically changed.

I am voicing concerns to respect parental rights of our children and protect all school children. I am AGAINST adopting the proposed changes in Title IX into the US Department of Education system.
