To whom it may concern, I am a teacher and an advisor of my high school's gender and sexuality alliance. I am also a volunteer phone operator for an organization that serves the transgender community. I serve on several local committees created to improve the educational conditions of transgender students.

I am writing to urge you to reinstate the critically important guidance offered by the Obama administration on the treatment of transgender children in schools. Our nations precious trans children are experience anxiety and depression as states have begun to pass laws against their full inclusion in education, and they deserve their country to champion their rights the way it has for is other young citizens.

Sincerely,
Susan Gerb
