Dear Department of Education,

I am writing to express my personal opinion regarding the effort to improve the Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 which seeks to eliminate discrimination based on sex. Some want to remove funding from colleges and universities which "discriminate." The problem is that some want to discriminate against groups that define words differently than they do.

The United States was founded on equal rights for all, human rights that come from God as inalienable, in that they cannot be changed, since God does not change, thus are secure. The problem arises when government attempts to play God, to redefine words and truth, especially in science, and rights become fragile. A girl is born a girl and a boy is born a boy.

Just because some claimed the earth was flat did not make it true. The Word of God proclaims that the earth is round. Man is unlearned in many ways and is still learning truth. To redefine words to make a political statement is reminiscent of the dark ages when profound ignorance reigned. The Bible states truth that man refuses to accept.

And here we go again.

When a child is conceived, there are only two possibilities. The child either has two X chromosomes, making it a female, or one X and one Y chromosome, making the baby a male. Sex is determined at conception. This is proven scientific fact. To deny science is to play with fire, for, then, where will the manipulating of word-meanings end? To say that man can redefine words at will is to "discriminate" against scientific truth and rationality.

Let's proceed with truth, science and reality. Let's agree with the basic scientific truth that there are only two sexes and move along with protecting the inalienable, God-given equal rights we already have protected in the Constitution. Enough is enough.

Thank you.
